OFFICE OF INSPECTORS-GENERAL OF PRISONS,
DUBLIN CASTLE,

April, 1869.

SIR,

We have the honour to transmit our Report on the progress of Prison Discipline, and on the state of the Gaols in Ireland, for the year ending 31st December, 1868.

We have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient, humble Servants,

CHICHESTER P. FORTESCUE, M.P.,
Chief Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland,

FORTY-SEVENTH REPORT

OF THE

INSPECTORS-GENERAL OF PRISONS IN IRELAND.

THE annexed statistical tables for the year ending 31st December, 1868, are compiled from returns furnished to us by the authorities of the different gaols under our inspection, to which we have added such observations as we consider will furnish an elucidation of the various matters which they contain, and afford a comparison of the prison statistics of the past with those of former years. Forty-seventh Report.

When we compare the tables for the year 1868 with those for 1867 we observe a decrease under the several heads of "number of all classes confined," "number of commitments," "daily average numbers confined," and number of individuals committed. This decrease, however, does not equally apply to the tables of statistics of both sexes, as the number of females in custody during 1868, as well as the total number of commitments and recommitments of prisoners of that sex, in the course of the year 1868, exceeded those of 1867, as appears from the abstracts which follow. Yet the true and most reliable criterion of the amount of crime of a more serious character of which during the year offenders were convicted, and under sentence

Forty-seventh Report.

(evinced by the comparative length of the sentences, and shown in the table giving the daily average numbers in custody during the year), affords a satisfactory evidence that the offences for which these females were charged in 1868 were not of the class characterized as grave crimes. Again, we have observed on our inspections that abandoned women committed for loitering in the streets and any similar offence against public order now constitute the great majority of the female inmates of the gaols.

Daily average number of prisoners in custody in 1868 lower than at any period for the last 15 years.

The decrease in the daily average numbers of inmates of both sexes in the county and borough gaols of Ireland is remarkable. The daily average number of males in all the gaols of Ireland in 1868 was 1,460 and that of females 671, a number not greater than might have been imprisoned in one gaol for each sex. The numbers in 1867 were an average of 1,771 males and 769 females. From this it appears that the average daily number of inmates of the gaols in 1868 were fewer by 311 males and 98 females than in 1867; and further, by reference to Abstract No. 4 of this Report it will be seen that the daily average number of prisoners in 1868 was much lower than at any period for the last 15 years to which the table extends. When we compare the daily average number of prisoners in our gaols in 1868, amounting to 2,131, with the averages of 1854, the numbers exhibit a reduction of nearly one-third in the former year, while if we go further back to the years 1850 and 1851, we find the averages then amounting to upwards of 10,000 daily.

Juveniles.

The tables for 1868 show an increase of 67 in the number of juveniles (i.e., prisoners not exceeding 16 years of age) committed to gaol during that year over the number so committed in 1867. This increase consisted of males only. The increase in the number of commitments of male juveniles in 1868 was 120, while the commitments of females exhibited a decrease of 50 when compared with those of 1867. The tables for the year 1867 also, when compared with the returns for 1866, exhibit an increase of 303 commitments of juveniles, viz., 165 of males and 38 of females, but the numbers fall far short of those of former years, and it is to be hoped that the operation of the "Industrial Schools Act," passed last session, combined with that of the "Reformatory Schools," will check the training of young delinquents from whom adult criminals are formed.

Debtors.

The number of prisoners committed for debt to the county and borough gaols of Ireland amounted in 1868 to 727 individuals, of whom 676 were males and 51 females; the numbers in 1867 were 577 males and 57 females, and in 1866 621 were committed, viz., 576 males and 45 females. It thus appears that in 1868 100 males were imprisoned for debt in the county and borough gaols of Ireland more than in 1866, and 99 more than in 1867. The number of female debtors, which had increased from 45 in 1866 to 57 in 1867, again diminished in 1868 to 51, still, however, leaving an increase on the numbers in 1866. A Bill is now passing through Parliament to abolish in England imprisonment for debt, which we trust will soon also be removed from the Statute Book of this part of the United Kingdom, as Ireland should not be deprived of the benefit of so wise an alteration of the law. In some instances county and borough rates are charged for years with the maintenance of debtors whose debts do not amount to the cost of their support in the gaols for three months; and the operation of the law is occasionally applied to the fraudulent arrest by relatives and friends for the purpose of gratuitous maintenance in gaols of persons whom they would be compelled to support if at large.* This question has been frequently brought under the notice of the Executive, in former reports of Inspectors-General, and we do not now consider it necessary to enter further into detail on the subject. Forty-seventh Report.

If, however, imprisonment for debt in Ireland be continued, it will be necessary that a large sum be expended in erecting a new prison for debtors, or in remodelling the present building of the Four Court Marshalsea in Dublin, for in this prison, owing to the faulty construction of the building, neither the proper separation of the sexes or of classes can be observed, nor some of the most important requirements of the prison Act enforced. Four Court Marshalsea.

The marshalseas of many of the county gaols, especially those for females, are also in a very defective state; and in many no marshalsea for females exists. Debtors of that sex are in such cases lodged in the hospital, or in the cells of the criminal prisons. Marshalseas in county gaols.

20,413 individual prisoners (exclusive of debtors) were committed to the county and borough gaols of Ireland in 1868; of these 13,992 were males, and 6,421 females. In 1867 the commitments included 22,197 individuals, viz., 15,560 males and 6,637 females, showing a decrease in the numbers committed in 1868, as compared with those in 1867, of 1,568 males, equal to 10 per cent., and of 216 females, or 3·3 per cent. Number of individual prisoners committed.

During 1868 35 prisoners were committed to county and borough gaols by warrant of the Lord Lieutenant, under the Act for the Suspension of the Writ of Habeas Corpus in Ireland. The statistics of prisoners so committed are not included in the returns for 1868, for the same reasons which influenced the Inspectors-General to exclude them from the tables of 1866 and 1867, viz., in order that the tables may be available for comparison throughout a long series of years, undisturbed by any abnormal state of legislation in the country. Under warrant of the Lord Lieutenant.

* On the marriage of the Prince of Wales, the then Lord Lieutenant, the Earl of Carlisle, anxious to release any deserving prisoners who might be confined in the Dublin Marshalsea prison for debt, commissioned the Dean of the Chapel Royal to ascertain the names of such persons. The Local Inspector of the Marshalsea, on instituting inquiries, could only discover two persons in it deserving of His Excellency's bounty. The debts for which these persons were detained were settled by the Lord Lieutenant, and they were released. A few days afterwards a benevolent magistrate of Dublin, who distributes large sums in charity, called on one of the Inspectors-General of Prisons to complain that his two pensioners had been discharged from the Marshalsea. It then appeared that the pension which he allowed to them, although abundant for their food, was insufficient to meet their other expenses, and that they had themselves arrested to obtain, free of expense, within the Marshalsea, the accommodation they desired.

This table shows the total number of prisoners inmates of the county and borough gaols of Ireland on the 1st January in each year from 1851 to 1869. From it we learn the great reduction which has taken place in the numbers of prisoners committed to our gaols. The number in custody on the 1st of January in the present year (1869) was 2,024, while on the corresponding day in 1851 it amounted to 10,084 individuals.

From this table we learn the precise number of prisoners of all classes in the gaols of Ireland on the 1st of each month for a long series of years, and it will be seen that, with the exception of the months of January and February in 1868, the numbers in custody on the 1st of the several months of that year were less than on the corresponding date in any of the previous years; and a very marked decrease is perceptible in each of the later months of the year 1868.

Number of commitments, daily averages, and highest and lowest aggregates.

Table No. 3, pp. xii. and xiii., contrasts the numbers of prisoners committed to the several gaols of Ireland in the years 1867 and 1868, distinguishing those committed as criminals and as debtors. It likewise details the relative numbers of each sex, the daily average number confined in each prison, the highest and lowest numbers in custody at any one time, the highest and lowest aggregates in the gaols during these years. It shows that 32,690 prisoners (19,250 males, and 13,440 females) were in charge in 1868, as contrasted with 33,034 (20,089 males, and 12,945 females) in 1867, exhibiting as has already been observed a decrease in 1868 of 839 in the number of commitments of males, but an increase of 495 in those of females, at the same time that the daily averages during the years were (omitting fractions) 1,771 of males and 769 of females in 1867, as compared with 1,460 of males and 671 of females in 1868, being a decrease of 310 in the number of male prisoners, and of 99 females, daily in custody in the gaols during the latter year. The highest aggregate number of all classes in confinement at any one time in 1867 was 3,809, the lowest 1,695; the highest in 1868 was 3,081, the lowest 1,443; making a difference of 728 in the highest and 252 in the lowest numbers in favour of 1868. Again, the highest number of males at any time in custody in 1867 was 2,915; the highest in 1868 2,210; and females never numbered more than 1,094 in 1868, while they reached to 1,185 in 1867. Forty-seventh Report.

This table also shows the small number of prisoners, especially females, committed to some of the county and borough gaols of Ireland, and the necessity of making some change by which the heavy outlay now imposed on the rates in keeping up expensive establishments with large staffs may be avoided; for instance, the total numbers of prisoners of all classes, including debtors, lodged in Roscommon county gaol in 1868 were 152 males and 47 females, in Carlow 162 males and 73 females, in Clare 176 males and 70 females, in the King's county 161 males and 71 females, in the Queen's county 206 males and 64 females, and in Leitrim 184 males and 74 females. Few prisoners, especially females, committed to some gaols in Ireland.

The numbers in custody daily of females in 2 counties averaged (omitting fractions) only 4, in three 5, in eight 6, in two 7, and in two 8, while the average number of females belonging to the jurisdiction of Kilkenny city, who were inmates of the gaol, was under 2 daily. The daily averages of males were in Drogheda 6, in Carlow 11, in Fermanagh 13, and in Leitrim 14.

In Wicklow, Roscommon, and Kilkenny town there have been periods during the year when no female prisoner was in custody. In the goals of Westmeath, Sligo, Drogheda, Clare and Kilkenny only 1; and in those of Fermanagh, Leitrim, Meath, Nenagh, Donegal, King's and Queen's county—2. In 21 gaols the female inmates have occasionally numbered 4 or under during the year. We have omitted reference to Galway Town Gaol, as in the early portion of 1869 it was amalgamated with the gaol of that county.

By this table we find that commitments of criminal prisoners, which in 1854 numbered 60,445, were reduced in 1866 to 29,097; they again increased in 1867 to 30,067, but in 1868 diminished to 29,501, being, however, an increase of 404 on those in 1866, but a decrease of 566 as compared with the year 1867.

Daily average numbers in custody.

The daily average of prisoners confined in the gaols was lower in 1868 than in any previous year; it numbered 5,700 in 1854, and in 1866, when the number of commitments was less than in any year within the period it amounted to 2,559, while in 1868 it was only 2,130. These figures tend to show that sentences of imprisonment during the year 1868 were for shorter periods than in 1866, and that the offences were of a less aggravated character.

In this table is given a comparative statement of the convictions and acquittals of prisoners during the years 1867 and 1868, distinguishing the tribunals before whom they were tried, the various descriptions of crimes under which convictions were had, as well as the numbers of each class of prisoners detained in custody under special statutes, such as dangerous lunatics, persons supposed to be deserters; &c. From this table we learn that 1,677 males and 448 females were convicted by juries in Ireland before the Judges at Assizes or the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions in 1867, and 1,394 males and 392 females in 1868, showing a decrease in the latter year of 283 male and 56 female offenders so convicted. Forty-seventh Report. Convictions by juries.

In 1867 12,537 males and 10,923 females were committed under summary convictions—in 1868 they numbered 12,954 males, and 11,462 females, showing an increase in 1868 of 417 males and 545 females as compared with the year 1867. Summary convictions.

The acquittals of prisoners of all classes were 836 of males in 1867, and 494 in 1868. The acquittals of females numbered 195 in both years. Acquittals.

The convictions were 85 per cent. on the commitments in 1867, and 88 per cent. in 1868.

The numbers committed for further examination, and discharged during the year 1867, were 3,057, 2,540 males, and 517 females; in 1868 there were 2,289 commitments of this class, viz., 1,773 males, and 516 females. There were in custody awaiting trial at the close of the year 1867, 303 males and 691 females; and 243 males and 78 females at the end of 1868. Remands and discharges.

Criminal lunatics found insane on trial in 1867 numbered 22 males and 1 female. They were 10 males and 6 females in 1868.

Of dangerous lunatics, committed under the 1st Vic., cap 27, in 1867, there were 380 males and 231 females; only one prisoner, a male, was committed in 1868, under that statute which had been repealed in 1867, by Act 30 & 31 Vic., cap. 116, but many insane persons were committed to gaols during the year by magistrates nominally for assaults or other criminal charges, contrary to the intention of the Legislature, thus frustrating the beneficent intentions of the framers of the Act of 1867. Lunatics.

Summary commitments for misdemeanors increased from 6,677 of males, and 6,140 of females in 1867, to 7,150 of males, and 6,709 of females in 1868; and the commitments of males for drunkenness, which numbered 3,418 in 1867, increased to 3,547 in 1868, and those of females from 3,227 in 1867 to 3,487 in 1868, showing an increase under the two heads of convictions for drunkenness and misdemeanors, before magistrates at Police and Petty Sessions Courts, of 602 males and 829 females when compared with the previous year. These figures do not include drunkards who suffered imprisonments in bridewells, and who numbered 7,524 in 1867, and 7,034 in 1868. Misdemeanors.

Commitments of persons convicted by Courts-martial increased from 116 in 1866, to 149 in 1867, and 182 in 1868; while those of deserters, which had increased from 181 in 1866 to 203 in 1867, again diminished, in 1868, to 191. Courts-martial.

1,271 males and 780 females were summarily convicted before magistrates under the Larceny Acts in 1868, being an in- Under Larceny Act.

crease of 50 males, and a decrease of 19 females compared with 1867.

Under Revenue Acts.

Commitments under the revenue laws increased from 104 in 1867 to 116 in 1868; under the Vagrant Acts from 568 to 596; and under the Poor Law Acts from 320 in 1867 to 370 in 1868.

From this table we learn that of the 20,413 prisoners committed in 1868, 1,888, or 9 per cent. of the entire number, were twice committed; 631, or 3 per cent., were three times; 305, or 1½ per cent., were four times; 686, or nearly 4 per cent., were five times and upwards—committed in the course of that year.

Recommitments of females.

The great number of recommitments of females as shown in these tables is one of the greatest blots on the prison system as enforced in the county and borough gaols of this country. Of the 6,421 females committed in 1868, 1,746 were recommitted during the year, of these 756 four times and upwards. By table No. 6 (b) it will be seen that 565 of these women have been in gaol twenty-one times and upwards; 452 from twelve to twenty times; 748 from six to eleven times; and 1,815 have two, three, four, and five committals recorded against them. Thus a small number of females, recommitted month after month, and year after year, occupy the gaols of the country, some spending eight, nine, and ten months of the year in prison, and occasionally recommitted within a few days, or perhaps hours, after being discharged from a previous imprisonment—the great majority committed for drunkenness, disorder, and loitering in the streets of towns. Of the 6,421 females who were inmates of the gaols in 1868, 3,407 or 53 per cent. were, for the most part of the class above referred to, and known to have been in prison previously; while amongst the 13,992 males committed in that year, 9,462 or 68 per cent. were never before in gaol, and only 4,530 or 32 per cent. had previously been committed. The recommitments of juveniles, especially of females, on the contrary, have considerably diminished, and only 15 female juveniles were recommitted during 1868—1 four times, 2 three times, and 12 twice.—See Table No. 13, p. xxiii.

Referring to table No. 6 (b) we observe that about 40 per cent.

Forty-seventh Report.

Previous convictions.

of the inmates of the gaols in 1868 had previous convictions recorded against them; and the constant recommitments of the same individuals show that the criminal classes who find their way into prison are limited to a comparatively few individuals; hence the necessity for dealing with such persons, so that when they will not change their course of life the expense of repeated prosecutions, trials, and convictions may be avoided, and that the labour of such prisoners in gaol may be utilized under long sentences instead of being in a great measure wasted as at present is the case in many of the county and borough gaols throughout Ireland. Twenty-five per cent. of the females committed in 1868 had been more than seven times previously in prison, and deducting the number of those committed for the first time in that year, the commitments of the remaining females averaged 12 for each of their number, while the commitments of males so circumstanced show an average of 5 only for each individual. The averages for males in 1867 were about the same as in 1868, but the averages for females were much higher in the year 1868.

The following abstracts show in detail the number of commitments of the prisoners who in 1868 and 1867 are included under the heading twenty-one times and upwards:—

No sentence of death was passed on any offender in Ireland during 1868. Three individuals received that sentence in 1867, but in no instance was the sentence carried out, as in each case the sentence was commuted to penal servitude for life. Forty-seventh Report.

In 1868 165 males and 79 females were sentenced to various terms of penal servitude—the males, 2 for life, and 9 for periods of above ten years; the females, 2 for ten years, and the remainder of both males and females were for terms of seven and five years. In 1867 206 males and 79 females were sentenced to penal servitude, 6 males for life, and 15 for above ten years; 5 females were for ten years, the other sentences on prisoners of both sexes were for terms of five and seven years. This table shows that 41 more males were sentenced to penal servitude in 1867 than in 1868. These sentences on females numbered 79 in each year. Sentences to Penal servitude.

Sentences for unlimited or indefinite periods, or respited, which in 1867 amounted to 822 on males and 249 on females, were 384 on males and 35 on females in 1868; but in the former year 402 male and 202 female lunatics were included in the returns of persons so sentenced, while only 11 males and 6 females are included under this heading in 1868.

Deserters and offenders convicted by courts-martial amounting to 195 in 1867, and 179 in 1868, are also included in this class.

This table proves what has already been remarked, that although the sentences on prisoners in 1868 were more numerous than in 1867, yet those for long periods were much fewer in 1868 than in the preceding year. Forty-nine offenders were sentenced for periods of 2 years and above 18 months in 1868, as compared with 60 so sentenced in 1867; in like manner sentences for terms of 18, 12, 9, 6, 3, 2, and above 1 month in 1868 were fewer by 1,439 than in 1867; while on the contrary short sentences of 1 month and under were more numerous in 1868, numbering 22,050 in that year, and only 20,307 in 1867. These sentences on males in 1868 numbered 11,405, or 136,449 days; and those on females 10,645, or 92,218 days.

Eighty-six per cent. of the sentences of imprisonment in county and borough gaols passed in 1868 were for terms not exceeding 1 month, averaging 10 days 9 hours for each. In 1867 these sentences were 83½ per cent. of the sentences passed, and averaged 10 days and 10 hours each. In 1866 they were 84 per cent. of the sentences, and averaged 10 days and 2 hours each.

Under the existing laws and regulations, our gaols (those more especially for females) are occupied chiefly by a class of prisoners, such as prostitutes and vagrants, who regard the gaols more in the light of asylums and hospitals than as places of punishment and reformation. We trust, therefore, that before long, the law will not only direct that all prisoners under long sentence shall be removed to central or district prisons, but that it will also legislate for prisoners sentenced frequently for small offences, which latter class at present are the principal source of expense in our county prisons.

Commitments of prisoners between 16 and 21 years.

Commitments of adults, above 16 and not exceeding 21 years, in 1868 amounted to 3,365 of males, and 1,200 of females; they were 3,690 of males, and 1,240 of females in 1867. Males above 21 years sentenced in 1868 numbered 12,274 individuals; they were 13,064 in 1867. Sentences on females of that age were 11,257 in 1868, and 10,674 in 1867.

From the preceding returns it appears that 44 per cent. of the males, and 21 per cent. of the females committed in 1868 could read and write. The proportions in 1867 were 45½ per cent. of the males, and 19 per cent. of the females.

The numbers of males wholly illiterate committed in 1868 and 1867 were almost equal, amounting to 5,536 in 1868, and 5,560 in 1867; but the females so circumstanced numbered 6,246 in 1868, and only 5,902 in 1867.

The average number of prisoners who attended the prison schools are stated to have been 344 of males, and 146 of females in 1868, and 405 males, and 140 females in 1867. Officers whose duty it was to instruct them were, 38 males and 20 females in 1868. In 1867 they numbered 42 males and 24 females.

In the report of the Inspectors-General for 1867 the opinion was expressed that although schools are generally held in the different gaols, under their inspection, the literary teaching, especially of females, is not always satisfactory, partly owing to the negligence of prisoners themselves, and partly because the persons employed to give instruction are seldom selected for their qualifications as teachers. Very few of these teachers possess certificates of having been trained under any public educational body, and often other occupations are assigned to them, which are incompatible with the efficient discharge of their duties as teachers. Thirteen prison schools placed in connexion with the Commissioners of National Education, are inspected by their officers, and supplied with books and school requisites from the Board on the same terms as the ordinary National schools of the country.

those of 1867. This diminution was, as regards their religious professions, as follows—5 were of the Established Church, 40 Presbyterians, 969 Roman Catholics, and 21 belonging to other communions, or communions unascertained. The commitments of females, on the contrary, increased from 12,174 in 1867, to 12,643 in 1868, being an increase of 469 belonging to the different religious professions, in the following proportions:—240 were of the Established Church, 28 Presbyterians, 211 Roman Catholics, while those of other denominations or whose religion was not known diminished by 10.

The returns for 1868 show, amongst prisoners not belonging to the three principal religious communions of the country, that 21 males and 2 females were Methodists, 11 males Unitarians, 3 males Covenanters, 2 females Quakers, and 4 males were returned as of no religion.

Juveniles.

JUVENILES.

The criminal returns exhibit an increase of 120 in the total number of commitments of males not exceeding 16 years of age, and a decrease of 53 in the number of those of females of that age in 1868, as compared with the numbers committed in 1867. On analysing the tables we observe that 84 male juveniles tried by juries were convicted of various offences at Assizes and Quarter Sessions during 1868, and only 57 in 1867. Female juveniles so convicted numbered 18 in 1868, and 17 in 1867. Summary convictions of prisoners of this class were 831 of males and 132 of females in 1868, and 751 of males and 180 of females in 1867.

The acquittals numbered 32 males and 6 females in 1868, and 46 males and 16 females in 1867.

Juveniles committed on remand, or not tried, and discharged, were 204 males and 21 females in 1868, and 177 males and 17 females in 1867. Sixty-seven males and 2 females included in the preceding figures were charged with workhouse offences or offences on leaving the workhouse in 1868, and 46 males and 7 females in 1867.

Juveniles committed in 1868 averaged about 4·5 per cent. of the entire criminal commitments to the gaols, and in 1867 they bore a similar proportion. In 1866 they were 3·48 per cent.

Relative proportion of the sexes.

As regards the relative proportion of the sexes, male juveniles averaged 7 per cent. of the total males committed in 1868, and 5·7 per cent. in 1867.

Female juveniles were 1·4 per cent. of the total females committed to the gaols in 1868, and 1·2 per cent. in 1867.

so committed in the latter year. The recommitments of male juveniles also increased in 1868; 57 were recommitted 121 times in 1867, while 80 were so committed in 1868 whose commitments and recommitments numbered 170 during the year. The number of individual female juveniles diminished from 192 in 1867, to 158 in 1868; 172 were once committed in 1867, and 143 in 1868. Twenty female juveniles were committed 58 times in 1867—1 was twelve times, 2 four, and 4 three times committed during the year. In 1868 15 only were recommitted, the number of their commitments amounting to 34; of these 1 was four, and 2 three times committed.

Although no juvenile was sentenced to penal servitude in 1868, and only 2 in 1867, the sentences of imprisonment in county and borough gaols passed on male juveniles in 1868 were for the most part for longer periods than those in the preceding year.

Four were sentenced to an imprisonment of 12 months, 1 for 9 months, and 9 for 6 months in 1868, while 1 only was sentenced for 9, and 7 for 6 months in 1867; 61 were sentenced in 1868 for 2 and 3 months, and 51 in 1867. The males whose sentences were for more than 7 days, but not exceeding 1 month, numbered 520 in 1868, and 453 in 1867.

Fewer female juveniles committed in 1868, and sentences for shorter periods.

As regards female juveniles, not only were the commitments fewer in 1868, but the sentences were generally for shorter terms.

No female juvenile was sentenced for a period exceeding 6 months in either 1867 or 1868, but 1 was sentenced for 6 months in 1868, and 4 in 1867. Sentences exceeding 1 month and less than 6 were, 6 in 1868, and 5 in 1867. Those for terms varying from 7 days to 1 month were 80 in 1868, and 99 in 1867. Shorter sentences of 7 days and under on juveniles of that sex were 63 in 1868, and 86 in 1867.

The average duration of sentences of imprisonment in county gaols passed on juveniles for short periods not exceeding 1 month was 13 days and 8 hours in 1867, and 13 days and 20 hours in 1868. These sentences constituted 74 per cent. of the entire number inflicted on male juveniles, and 81 per cent. on those on females in 1868.

229 male and 42 female offenders were directed to be sent to Reformatories after their punishment in the gaol in 1868, of these 215 males and 38 females were so sent, 3 males and 1 female were discharged by order of the Executive, and 9 males and 1 female were still undergoing their gaol sentences at the close of the year.

From this table we learn that the parents of more than one-half of the juvenile offenders of the two sexes committed to gaol in 1868 were then living; that 137, or 12 per cent. of the males, and 30, or 17 per cent. of the females had lost both father and mother; that the remainder, amounting to 358 males, or 31 per cent., and 35 females, or nearly 20 per cent., were destitute of either one or the other; that the surviving parent of 67 males and 13 females had remarried; that 39 males and 2 females were abandoned by their parents; that 25 males had absconded from their homes, and that 26 males and 4 females were stated to be of illegitimate birth.

From this table we learn that 646 male and 66 female juveniles, or 56 per cent. of the former, and 37 per cent. of the latter, could read more or less perfectly; and that of these 37 per cent. of the males, and 18 per cent. of the females could also write.

Eighty-two males or 7 per cent., and 32 females, equal to 18 per cent. of the number could spell, 81 males or 7 per cent., and 24 females or 13 per cent. knew the alphabet, and 340 males equal to 29 per cent., and 55 females equal to 31 per cent., were wholly illiterate. These figures show very little change in the educational status of the juveniles committed to prison in 1868, as compared with those in custody in 1867.

Forty-seventh Report.

From this table it appears that 9 per cent. of the males, and 5 per cent. of the females not exceeding 16 years of age committed to the county and borough prisons in Ireland belonged to the Established Church, 3 per cent. of the males and 1 female were Presbyterians, and 88 per cent. of the males and 94 per cent. of the females were Roman Catholics.

In 1867 the proportions were 7½ per cent. of both sexes belonged to the Established Church, 3 per cent. were Presbyterians, and 89½ per cent. Roman Catholics.

In 1866 there were 11, 4, and 85 per cent. respectively of the different creeds.

Escapes.

Escapes.

By reference to page 25 (Appendix) it will be seen that 7 escapes were returned as effected from gaols and bridewells in Ireland during 1868. One from Cavan gaol was under circumstances denoting the grossest neglect by the prison officials, as well as a very lax discipline in the management of the establishment. (See page 107 Appendix to this Report.)

The other escapes were from bridewells, also showing neglect of the officers in charge; and the evidence given on the inquiries which were then instituted, tend to show the insecurity of many of these minor prisons.

Lunatics.

Lunatics.

The 10th section of the Act 30 and 31 Vic., cap. 118, declares that when after the 1st of January, 1868, any person shall be apprehended under circumstances denoting a derangement of mind and a purpose of committing some crime, such person shall be brought before two justices, and when certified by a legally qualified medical officer to be a dangerous lunatic or dangerous idiot, he or she shall be sent by the justices to the lunatic asylum of the district; and the law officers of the Crown have decided that the warrants so issued are mandatory, and must be obeyed by the managers of the asylum, who has no option but to admit the insane patient thus placed in his charge. The Chief Secretary also issued a circular on the 30th December, 1867, calling the special attention of magistrates to the subject; and another circular was sent in February 1868, again bringing the matter under the notice of the justices, and enclosing forms for the committal of such lunatics to the asylums, yet we find, from time to time, on our inspections of gaols and bridewells throughout the country, and from returns forwarded to our office, that magistrates still sometimes commit insane persons to prison, thus, besides the injury inflicted on the individual, seriously interfering with the discipline of the gaols by the intrusion of persons labouring under disease and guilty of no offence, and causing by the keeping up of lunatic wards and the employment of nurses for the insane in the gaols, an unnecessary expenditure of the public money levied off the ratepayers.

Forty-seventh Report.

The insane are still committed to prison by magistrates on remand.

Since the repeal of the Act 1st Vic., cap. 27, which empowered magistrates to commit lunatics to gaols, the insane are now occasionally committed on remand, under the Act 14 and 15 Vic., cap. 93. Five such cases of complaint have come under our notice, returned to our office from the gaol of Belfast during the three months which have elapsed since the commencement of the present year (1869). In one instance, a female, Julia Clare, committed on the 16th March, as of unsound mind and unfit to be at large, died of starvation in the gaol on the second day following her commitment, she having obstinately refused to take food during the time she was in custody; and a similar case of death from starvation of a lunatic so committed, having taken place in Trim Gaol in September last, we felt it our duty to call the attention of the Executive to the frequency of these committals, and the sad results which ensue. The law adviser and the law officers of the Crown were consulted on the case, and we are informed that the committal of Julia Clare was illegal and unjustifiable. She should have been sent to the district asylum under the 10th section of the Act 30 and 31 Vic., cap. 118. The law adviser further adds, "I can see no necessity whatsoever in the case for the adjournment. The magistrates saw that the woman was insane, and the husband (though not a pauper) *unable to take care of her, and that being so, she appears to me to have been a case which would have been received at the district lunatic asylum.

Fifty lunatics (31 males and 19 females) committed as dangerous under the Act 1 Vic., cap. 27, were inmates of the Irish gaols at the close of 1868.

The asylums at Monaghan and Downpatrick will soon be completed and fit for occupation. Then the gaol authorities will be in a great measure released from the charge of persons of this class, as criminal lunatics only can now be legally inmates of a prison, and it is earnestly to be hoped that magistrates will not in future commit on remand insane persons to prison, when they understand that doing so has been pronounced by the law adviser of the Crown to be illegal and unjustifiable. The hospitals of the gaols will always be sufficient for the accommodation of the few criminal lunatics who may be in custody.

* We annex the following extract from the journal of the medical officer on the case of this woman:—"March 17.—Came up to-day in consequence of the husband of Julia Clare having called on me to say his wife, yesterday committed as a lunatic, had not eaten since Sunday. She is as troublesome a patient as I have had for a length of time. I was obliged to use the stomach pump as she refused to take food. Another female lunatic in the same wing keeps the warders awake all night with her incessant noise and singing. The debtors also complain of the same." He adds at the close of his report: "Again I must complain of the opposition to the law by magistrates who send lunatics into the gaol. We have no means of managing them —no appliances, or regular nurses—we must upset the rules of the prison. A case like this would require a resident medical man."

Diet of prisoners.

In their report for 1867 the Inspectors-General felt it their duty to publish in extenso, for the information of the prison authorities, the very elaborate and well considered report of the Medical Committee appointed by the Executive to frame a scale of dietary suited to the county and borough gaols of Ireland. the recommendations contained in that report. As, however, the system of hard labour in force in the gaols of England and Wales has not been generally extended to this part of the United Kingdom, pending legislation, the Inspectors-General then obtained the sanction of His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, in accordance with the 84th and 85th sections of the Act 7 Geo. IV., cap. 74, to establish in the different gaols throughout the country the scale of dietary framed by that Commission for use in the prisons as at present constituted, and which is now the only scale of dietary which can be legally used in the county and borough gaols of Ireland.

Forty-seventh Report.

Cost of diet in 1868.

The cost of the diet supplied to prisoners of all classes in the Irish prisons, including ordinary diet, extra diet, and hospital diet, during the years 1867 and 1868, was as follows:—

	1867.	1868.
Ordinary diet,	£12,246	£13,567
Extra diet ordered by medical officers to persons not in hospital,	1,038	366
Hospital diet,	1,221	952
Extra diet to lunatics,	989	444
Do. to sane criminal prisoners appointed as keepers over them,	194	47
	£15,688	£15,396
Average number of all classes in custody during the year,	2,658	2,223
Average cost of each prisoner for diet, extra diet, and hospital diet,	£6	£7

It thus appears that the improved diet now furnished to prisoners according to the recommendations of the Medical Commission is attended with a small increase of expenditure, which, when compared with the total cost of maintenance of prisoners in the gaols, is a mere trifle; and we have to report that its use has been attended with beneficial results in regard to the health and well being of the inmates of the gaols. The medical officers, as will be seen by the preceding abstract, are not now compelled to order a large amount of extra diet to the prisoners as was the case previously to the introduction of the new dietary scale.

Health.

Health of prisoners in 1868.

The health of the prisoners confined in the gaols in 1868 has been for the most part satisfactory. They were almost universally free from epidemic diseases, and the only death which occurred from contagion was one by typhus of a man who had the fever when committed, and who died ten days afterwards. Altogether 32 deaths are recorded in 1868—one was caused by an accident, another from a wound received when attacking a house, and 15 were of insane prisoners, of whom 12 had been committed as dangerous lunatics. The mortality in 1868 was less in proportion to the number of prisoners than in any year since 1850, being 1 in 1,000 prisoners; 42 deaths took place in the gaols in 1867, being in the proportion of 1 in every 787 of the inmates. The deaths in 1866 numbered 65 (including 2 executions), or 1 in 498 prisoners. In 1865 they were 1 in 532; and in 1864 1 in 566.

1868	6,523	11	4¼	increase,	1868	2	2	5

From the preceding tables it appears that the expenditure attendant on the maintenance of bridewells in Ireland increased from £6,521 8*s.* 11¼*d.* in 1867, to £6,523 11*s.* 4¼*d.* in 1868, being an increase of £2 2*s.* 5*d.* in the latter year. The numbers of persons confined in them were 16,964 in 1867, and 14,137 in 1868, showing a decrease of 2,827 inmates in 1868, yet the expenditure was increased by £2 2*s.* 5*d.* in the year.

Salaries of keepers.

The sums paid for salaries to keepers of bridewells in 1868 amounted to £3,628, or more than one-half of all the charges connected with the maintenance of these establishments, notwithstanding that the salary in the great majority of the bridewells is so miserably small as to be quite inadequate for the support of the keeper, who is compelled to have a wife or other female member of his family to attend the female prisoners committed to his charge as required by the 18th rule of the 109th section of the Prisons Act.

The salaries paid to the keepers of 67 bridewells do not exceed £30 a year in each. In 10 they are only £20. In 20 but £15 a year, and in 6 only £10 a year. In these the keeper is the sole officer in charge. If, as was proposed in a bill laid before the Legislature in 1860, the salaries of the keepers of these institutions were fixed at an adequate sum,* and a female officer were appointed at a salary to attend female prisoners, a grave burden would be inflicted on the county rates for their maintenance.

At present an attempt is made in some districts to supplement the inadequate remuneration given to the bridewell keeper by permitting him to discharge other duties, such as that of Petty Sessions clerk, clerk of the church, of the markets, and weighmaster, and in one or two instances, of registrar of births and marriages. A few bridewell keepers also practise trades.

In many districts the bridewell keeper has also charge of the court-house, for which he receives a salary varying from £4 to £10 a year.

Necessity for

Bridewell districts often embrace large tracts of country, and

* The 183rd section fixed £50 for keeper, and £25 for matron, as the lowest salaries in district bridewells; and £30 for keeper, and £10 for matron, in others.

petty sessions courts are sometimes held at a distance of ten and fifteen miles from the bridewell to which prisoners on remand are sent by the justices, yet the 25th sec. of the Act 14 & 15 Vic., cap. 93, directs that "in case of adjournments or remands the keeper shall bring the prisoner at the time and place fixed by the warrant for that purpose before such justices as shall be there." The keeper is in most instances the only salaried officer of the bridewell, and as he has often other prisoners in his custody, and is bound not to leave his prison so long as they are in his charge, it is manifestly impossible that he could comply with the requirements of the Act. This is another proof of the necessity for legislation on the subject.

legislation on the subject of bridewells.

Keeper cannot now fulfil statutable requirements.

The incidentals attending the maintenance of bridewells, such as rent, stationery, &c., was £1,209 9*s.* 2*d.* in 1868. Fuel and light and bedding cost £1,120 11*s.* 6*d.*; and the food for maintenance of prisoners £565 11*s.* 2*d.*

Although the net expenditure in the gaols of Ireland decreased during 1868, as compared with 1867, by the sum of £3,160 12*s.* 2½*d.*, and that in bridewells by £2 2*s.* 5*d.*, yet the annual average cost of each inmate was greater by £4 15*s.* 11*d.* in 1868 than in the preceding year. By reference to page 45 in the Appendix, added to this report, it will be seen that the average cost of each prisoner in 1868 was £36 11*s.* 1*d.*, and £31 15*s.* 2*d.* in 1867. The additional expenditure in 1868 for the improved ordinary dietary now in use was 30*s.* for each individual, but the principal cause of the increased cost of each prisoner was the small number in custody, and the necessity to keep up large establishments in gaols which were in a great measure unoccupied.

Staff charges in 1868.

The maintenance of the prison staffs for salaries, &c., in 1868 cost £43,955 5*s.* 4*d.*, being an average of about £19 15*s.* 6*d.* for each prisoner in the gaols throughout the country, although the total net cost of all prisoners in the gaol for the county Antrim at Belfast for salaries, maintenance, and all charges, averaged only £16 7*s.* 3*d.* for each prisoner committed to that gaol during the year, the proportion of which for staff was £7 9*s.* 11*d.*

Forty-seventh Report.

The preceding table shows the large and unnecessary outlay of public money with which the county and borough rates are burdened for salaries and allowances of prison officers in many gaol districts. In Meath the proportion of staff charges for each prisoner in 1868 was £51 15*s.* 8*d.*; in Tipperary, North, £44 1*s.* 5*d.*; in Leitrim, £40 11*s.* 2*d.*; and in Carlow, £39 0*s.* 7*d.*—while in Antrim the staff charges were £7 9*s.* 11*d.* for each prisoner: in Cork City, £11 2*s.* 1*d.*; in Down, £12 10*s.* 5*d.*; and in Richmond Bridewell, £12 12*s.* 3*d.*; and it is to be observed that generally the cost of supervision and management is greatest in the worst constructed gaols, composed of straggling buildings, ill adapted for discipline, in which a strict supervision over officers and prisoners is difficult or impossible.

Few prisoners in some gaols.

Although the faulty construction of some of these buildings necessitates a staff expensive in proportion to the number of inmates, yet the large amount of staff charges for each prisoner is mainly caused by the very few prisoners committed to some gaols. Occasionally the officers outnumber the prisoners in custody, and the latter are then altogether occupied in prison duties, so that remunerative works cannot be carried out. In two districts the prison for females of the county gaol was for some time during the past year without a single occupant; in six there have been occasionally only one prisoner; in five but two, and in eight others three and four.

The prisons for males, also, in some counties have been at periods occupied by very few inmates. In one gaol the number of male prisoners in custody was at one time reduced to two in 1868, and in three others to three and four. The average daily number of prisoners in custody in all the gaols of Ireland during that year amounted to but 1,460 males and 671 females, yet expensive staffs of officers were necessarily kept up in thirty-nine gaols. So long, therefore, as the present prison laws remain unaltered, will such extravagant arrangements exist. It frequently occurs that sentences of hard labour cannot be enforced owing to the circumstances of the prison to which the prisoner is committed, not permitting the sentence of the Court to be carried out.

Table showing the small amount of remunerative labour by prisoners from the above causes.

The following table shows the average gross and net cost of each prisoner confined in county gaols during the last seven years, and the small amount of remunerative labour obtained from them:—

Forty-seventh Report.

This lavish expenditure in proportion to the number of criminals in custody in some districts is not the only objection to the present system and circumstances of prisons in Ireland. In some gaols a highly stringent discipline is enforced, while in others a very lax system prevails, so that a short term of imprisonment in one gaol is much more severely penal than a lengthened imprisonment in another, perhaps in the adjoining county.* These facts should, in our opinion, convince the public, and especially the ratepayers, that both in regard to economy and to the reformation of prisoners the time has arrived for fresh legislation on the subject, and we hope the Government will soon be able to give their attention to this important matter, with a view to the concentration of our prisons and to the adoption of an improved system of management of our gaols. There are no gaols in the west or in a number of the central counties of Ireland suited in construction for carrying out an improved prison system. The inmates in association in these gaols, without adequate supervision, are in danger of becoming all equally corrupted. The prisons for females in the great majority of the county gaols are very defective, wanting in many of the requirements of places of punishment; and some are not suitable, without alteration and improvement, for carrying out even short sentences of imprisonment with hard labour, supposing that prisoners under long sentences were removed to a central gaol. The Inspectors-General, in their reports for 1865, '66, and '67, enter fully into the details of the principles on which they conceive a prison system suited for the county and borough gaols of Ireland should be founded—namely, the removal of prisoners under long sentences to a central depot—(one for each sex, as in Scotland)—under Government management, in which the sentence of the Judge would be carried out under strict supervision and with uniform treatment and punishment on all offenders according to such sentence, and with equal opportunities for reformation to all. Such central prison should be under the absolute control of the Executive, who would have the appointment of all the officers over it. To this prison should also be removed persons in custody for political offences and untried prisoners charged with crimes of great social gravity, or whose known antecedents would render it doubtful that they could remain in safe keeping in ordinary county and borough gaols. Arrangements, of course, must always be made that every unconvicted prisoner shall have the fullest opportunities and facilities for seeing his legal adviser and preparing his defence.

Necessity for legislation.

Prisoners under long sentences should be removed to a central depot.

It is also proposed that minor prisons should exist in some towns, licensed, according to their capabilities, with a staff suited for their requirements, where short sentences of imprisonment would be carried out, while mere bridewells in other centres of Minor prisons should be licensed according to their capabilities.

* The late Mr. Justice Hayes being aware that the amount of punishment varies in the thirty-nine different gaols to which prisoners are liable to be committed, never sentenced an offender to imprisonment in a county or borough gaol without first having ascertained the exact amount of punishment inflicted in the particular gaol of the district.

population would be sufficient, in which drunkards and persons guilty of trifling offences would be confined, as well as prisoners on remand, but for a limited time only. Such prisons would be required to save the expense of conveyance of prisoners to a distance, and to spare the accused from hardships which would sometimes attend their removal.* Forty-seventh Report.

We consider that each class of prisons should have a uniform code of rules, so as to insure similar treatment in all. Increased powers required by the Executive, and a uniform code of rules established.

A copy of the proceedings of Boards of Superintendence should be transmitted after each meeting of the Board to the Inspectors-General, in order that the latter may be conversant of the proceedings of that body.

Increased powers are required by the Executive with regard to the removal of prison officers for misconduct.

The office of local-inspector of county and borough gaols should be abolished, and district inspectors (not exceeding four) appointed by the Executive in their place. The local-inspector has important duties to perform, which sometimes bring him into collision with the Board of Superintendence of the gaol, yet that Board has now absolute power to dismiss him, so that a conscientious local-inspector is placed in great difficulty when acting in opposition to the Board, and the Executive have no power to sustain him. We therefore think that the inspectors who discharge the duty should be appointed by and hold office at the pleasure of the Lord Lieutenant. The office of local inspector should be abolished and district inspectors appointed.

The following table, founded on the "morning state" in the different gaols on the 1st July in each of the last seven years, shows the average number of offenders in custody during that period under the different sentences of imprisonment, distinguishing prisoners sentenced to hard labour from those not so sentenced:—

The 1st July in each year has been selected, because it is found that the gaol population is then generally highest.

* In consequence of the death of a female prisoner, Jane M'Coy, sent from Cookstown Petty Sessions to Omagh Gaol, a distance of twenty-seven miles, in January, 1866, on an open car, without sufficient food or clothing, and suffering from the severity of the season, the coroner's jury in their verdict called attention to the matter, and the Grand Jury of the county at the Spring Assizes in March following passed a resolution, in which they suggest that prisoners be in future forwarded by railway to the county gaol. The coroner's jury in their verdict add that "several cases of transmission of prisoners of a similar nature have taken place from Cookstown within the last twelve months." One of the reasons given by the Constabulary officer for the removal of this woman from Cookstown on the night in question was that "there was no place where she could be kept for the night in Cookstown, except in the ordinary lock-up of the police barrack, which would be worse than sending her on. In fact it would be as much as a person's life would be worth to be confined in it for a night." And the medical officer of the gaol, in his evidence at the inquest, stated, "It is my opinion that the attack which caused her death was exposure to cold and fatigue during the journey from Cookstown on that night."

From this table it appears that the average number of offenders sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour for periods exceeding six months [for whom accommodation should be provided in a central prison] was 383 males and 98 females. If those under sentences of six months and above three were added the number would be increased by 199 males and 93 females. The prisoners sentenced to imprisonment only for above six months were 31 males and 14 females, besides 43 males and 30 females sentenced for six, four, and above three months.

Legislation to be based on the principle of one central prison for all grave offenders of each sex.

The late Government laid on the table of the House of Commons a Prison Bill—ordered to be printed, July, 1868—formed mainly on the principles which we have endeavoured to advocate in this report, and we understand that the present Government are prepared to introduce a measure based on the same system, which we believe to be best suited to this country. In Scotland a central prison has been established at Perth, the cost of which, under the Act 23 & 24 Vic., cap 105, sec. 54, is defrayed by moneys voted by Parliament, and it is believed that the sum of 3*s.* a week paid by the Treasury for the support of convicted prisoners, as well as 1*s.* a day now paid by the War Department for military and naval prisoners in county gaols, together with the product of their labour judiciously employed, will more than reimburse the Exchequer for the cost of their maintenance, while the saving to the ratepayers would be very considerable. We trust that another session of Parliament will not be permitted to elapse without legislation on the subject on the plan which has now received the sanction of two successive Governments. The removal from gaols of persons suffering under diseases of the mind has been one step towards the improvement of these establishments intended solely for criminals or persons labouring under criminal charges; and should the Act for the abolition of imprisonment for debt now under the consideration of the Legislature be extended to Ireland, another great boon will be conferred on this country, the management of prisons in Ireland will be much simplified, and a considerable saving in the staff and arrangements will be effected, as it will then be no longer necessary to keep up in every county gaol a separate place of detention for persons not accused of any crime. Forty-seventh Report.

females were in custody, without any apparent cause for so large an increase in the number of inmates of that sex.

Whatever may be the cause of the great increase of female inmates of this gaol, it is a subject of grave consideration which should be inquired into, and it is to be observed that with the exception of the city of Dublin gaol, at Grangegorman, the average number of females in this prison far exceeds that in any other of the kingdom, amounting (fractions omitted) in 1867 to 77 daily, and during the eight months of present year to 83, while in thirty of the gaols of Ireland, the numbers of females in custody averaged under 20; in seventeen they did not exceed 10 daily in 1867, and in seven the numbers averaged under 5 during the year.

The daily average number of males for 1868 is also greater than for 1867, although less than the averages of either of the three preceding years. (In 1866, however, the average of male inmates of the gaol was largely increased by a number of Fenian prisoners, having been drafted into it under warrant of the Lord Lieutenant). Again I find that the committals of the criminal classes, especially of females, during the eight months which have preceded my inspection, in 1868, were more numerous than during the corresponding period of 1867, and committals of female prisoners also (the numbers of which were not disturbed by the transfer of prisoners from other districts) have increased from 938 in 1864 to 1,093 in 1865, 1,157 in 1866, 1,307 in 1867, and 1,039 during the first eight months of 1868.

This increase both in the daily average numbers of females in the gaol, and in the numbers of committals of persons of that sex would seem to point to an increase of crime in the district, yet such is not the opinion of persons best conversant with Belfast and the county Antrim, and the governor of the gaol states it as his opinion "That the increase of committals is to be ascribed not to a proportionate increase of crime but to the increase in the population of the town of Belfast, and because persons are now sentenced to imprisonment for trifling offences, such as the use of party expressions, which formerly were not so severely punished." I find, also, that the presiding judge at the assizes, anterior to my inspection, with all the facts and the reports of the police and other officials before him, in his charge to the Grand Jury, congratulated the county and town on the state of their district, adding "that he had much satisfaction in observing that the cases in the calendar were neither numerous nor serious in character, and considering the large extent and great population of the county, he considered the freedom from crime as very remarkable." It likewise appears that the immense majority of the convictions were summarily adjudicated on by magistrates in the police courts of Belfast, and were not of a character to require committal for trial by jury.

From an examination of the following table of offences of the prisoners in custody, on the day of my inspection, it will be seen how few were of a grave description. Ninety-one of the inmates of the gaol on that occasion had been convicted of being drunk and disorderly, using party expressions, and cock-fighting. 111 were under sentences, in no case exceeding one month, and of the entire number of 257 prisoners in the gaol, only 20 had been sentenced for periods each exceeding 6 months.

In this gaol separation is strictly enforced, and in no prison in Ireland is more care taken to afford useful employment for female prisoners, yet the results show how perfectly inadequate for repression is a strictly penal prison, no matter how well managed, and the necessity for the establishment of other means for reformation in connexion with all such institutions. In my last reports on the city of Dublin female prison, and on other gaols during the past year, I referred to this subject, and I called attention to some letters of Mrs. Elizabeth Fry, and other persons conversant with the subject. My experience in each succeeding year shows the necessity for the institutions which I advocate.

Juveniles.

Three juveniles (males) were inmates of the gaol when I made my inspection, 2 committed for assaults and 1 for larceny.

Eighty-eight juveniles, of whom 7 were females, were in custody during the eight months anterior to my visit, in 1868; of these 26 including one female, were sent to reformatories at the expiration of their punishments in the gaol. One boy, under ten years of age was sentenced to be whipped, and imprisoned for 14 days, for larceny.

In 1867 102 males under 18 years of age, and 8 females were in charge; 11 males and 2 females were twice committed. Forty, including 4 females were sent to reformatories. Of the 100 juveniles committed in 1867, 5 (males) were sent for trial by jury either at Assizes or Quarter Sessions. All the remainder were summarily tried by the magistrates either at Petty Sessions or in the Police Courts of Belfast, 1 male and 1 female was three times convicted during the year.

Debtors.

Eighty-four male and 12 female debtors were committed to this gaol in 1867, 37 of whom were supported as paupers, at the cost of the rates. Eighty-nine males and 4 females were in charge for debt previously to inspection, in 1868, and on the day of my visit 1 female and 12 male debtors were inmates of the gaol.

In former reports the Inspectors-General have dwelt on the defects of this strictly penal prison, for the accommodation of persons imprisoned for debt, more especially of females, who are lodged in the cells of the criminal prison, in contravention of the Prisons Act.

The male debtors, also, who are lodged in D wing of the gaol cause much inconvenience from the position which they occupy.

Revenue Prisoners.

Seven prisoners were committed in 1868, for breaches of the Excise Laws—selling spirits without a licence. One was in custody at the time of my visit.

Lunatics.

Notwithstanding that the Act 30 & 31 Vict., cap. 118, enacts that no insane person shall be committed as dangerous to a prison, after the 1st January, 1868, lunatics are still so committed by magistrates to this gaol. I find that on the 6th April, 1868, A. W. "charged with being a dangerous lunatic" was committed on remand, and on the 18th April R. B., "charged with temporary insanity" was similarly in custody. Other insane prisoners, admittedly insane, have also been committed for assault, or for want of bail to keep the peace, and remanded from Petty Sessions to Petty Sessions, in consequence of two magistrates not being present to sign the committal to the lunatic asylum. I have consulted with some magistrates on this subject, and they are of opinion that an amendment in the Act would be desirable to enable one magistrate to commit to the district asylum, an arrangement, which could be productive of no inconvenience, as under the 11th section of the Act, the Resident Medical Superintendent of the Asylum and the Visiting Physician have power to discharge persons so placed in their custody, without an order from the Lord Lieutenant, as is the case with other lunatic poor.

I find also in the journal of the Medical Officer reference made to the committal of lunatics to the gaol, notwithstanding the provisions of the Act above-mentioned. He states in that journal, on the 20th August, 1868,—"We have now five certified lunatics in the house and three for further examination." And later in the month he adds—"R. G., a lunatic, very violent, when being restrained, as he attempted to burst through the glass door, had his left arm fractured above the elbow joint." It is unnecessary for me to dwell further on this subject, as I trust that arrangements will be made that the prison should not continue to be used as an infirmary for prisoners suffering under diseases of the mind.*

Twelve insane persons, committed as dangerous, were in custody on the 1st January, 1867, and 24 were committed during the year. Of these, three died in the gaol before the close of that year. In January, 1868, one lunatic (male) died of epilepsy.

* Since this report was published the Inspectors-General have been compelled to call the attention of the executive to the frequent committals of the insane to this gaol, and I now stop press to again refer to the subject in consequence of the death of a female (Julia Clare), committed on the 16th March, "as of unsound mind and unfit to be at large," who died in the gaol on the second day following of starvation, she having obstinately refused to take food during the time she was in custody. I annex the following extract from the journal of the medical officer on the subject:—"March 17.—Came up to-day in consequence of the husband of Julia Clare having called on me to say his wife, yesterday committed as a lunatic, had not eaten since Sunday. She is as troublesome a patient as I have had for a length of time. I was obliged to use the stomach pump as she refused to take food. Another female lunatic in the same wing keeps the warders awake all night with her incessant noise and singing. The debtors also complain of the same." He adds at the close of his report: "Again I must complain of the opposition to the law by magistrates who send lunatics into the gaol. We have no means of managing them—no appliances, or regular nurses—we must upset the rules of the prison. A case like this would require a resident medical man."

Several cases of complaint, including that of Julia Clare, having come under the notice of the Inspectors-General of Prisons since the commencement of 1869, of insane persons being committed under the Act 14 & 15 Vict., cap. 95, "on remand," to the custody of the Governor of Belfast Gaol, "for being of unsound mind and unfit to be at large," and the death of this woman having occurred, it was considered advisable that the opinions of the law adviser and of the law officers of the Crown should be taken; and the Inspectors-General were informed that the committal of Julia Clare was illegal and unjustifiable. There was no necessity in the case for the adjournment. The magistrates saw that the woman was insane, and the husband (though not a pauper), unable to take care of her; that being so, it appears to have been a case which would have been received at the District Lunatic Asylum.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Antrim Gaol.

I found the gaol when I made my inspection, in a very satisfactory condition of order and discipline, clean and well kept. The buildings appear in sound repair, except where in some spots marks of damp show from the roof in the female prison, and on the ceiling of the Chapel, under the water cistern. During the present year iron bars have been put to four of the windows of the hospital, and barred iron gates have been erected at the entrances to the basement, from the front hall. Portions of the boundary wall have also been rendered more secure, and the rustications which projected and afforded facilities for escape, have been removed. Some other improvements to strengthen the boundary walls are also projected, but as I have observed in a former report on this gaol, I do not consider the prison secure for the custody of prisoners, unless great attention to their duties is bestowed by the staff of the prison.

The laundry at present is in excellent working order, and one of the best in the kingdom. Improvements have been made in it by the putting up of a steam boiler and pipes for heating the drying loft, which is now effective.

I have already, in former reports on this gaol, called attention to the faulty construction of the sittings in the chapel, which are after a model condemned by persons best conversant with this subject, and in many country gaols, as well as the Goverment prison at Mountjoy, have been superseded, and with beneficial results. I also wish specially to call attention to the unfitness, for school teaching, of the boxes in the chapel, and to the necessity for having a proper school-room in the gaol. The 6th section of the Act, 7 Geo. 4, cap. 74 directs that "one or more chapel or chapels shall be provided in every prison which shall be strictly set apart for religious worship or the occasional religious and moral instruction of the prisoners, and shall never be appropriated to, or employed for any other purpose whatsoever." It is, therefore, manifestly illegal to use the chapel for secular teaching in contravention of the Act.

The bedding, blankets, sheets, and prison clothing in this gaol are sufficient for the requirements, but, as I observed in a former report in 1866, it is objectionable to keep the bedding wrapped up in the cots when not in use. The blankets and sheets should, on the contrary, be exposed to the air, and ventilated as much as possible during the day, as is done in most other prisons where they are folded up and laid on the cot in the cell. Another objection to the present system is that it affords great facilities for prisoners to hide prohibited articles in their cots without detection, as the bedding is not sufficiently open to inspection. I observed that some of the prison clothing in use was thin and much worn, but it was intended to cast all such before winter, and a better description will then be supplied. A few prisoners from the country had not shoes, which they object to wear.

Gas is manufactured within the grounds, but outside the boundary wall, and found to be remunerative. The court-house is lighted from the prison gasometer. Gas is kept lighting in the cells until 8 o'clock, P.M. At 9 P.M., a superior officer makes a final round of the cells. Two warders patrol the interior of the prison building during the night, from 6 P.M., to 6 A.M., dividing the period into two watches of six hours for each. A guard of six men patrol outside the boundary wall at night, but no watch is held round the exterior of the prison building within the circuit wall.

The tell-tale clocks are placed, one in the central hall, the other in a corridor at the extremity of B wing of the prison, and are directed to be marked every alternate quarter of an hour during the night watches.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Antrim Gaol.

The markings of the clocks are entered in the "State of the Prison at Lockings Book."

The discipline of the prison appears satisfactory, and some suggestions made by my colleague have been adopted.

Water for prison use is obtained from a deep well on the premises, now principally worked by the crank pump, which should be discontinued until altered, more especially as the power of the steam-engine used for cooking can also be applied to work the pump. The sewerage is stated to be effective.

Photography is in use in this gaol. The Deputy-Governor executes the photographs with much skill, and it has been found a useful adjunct in the detection of crime.

County of Antrim Gaol.

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour disposed of outside the gaol for the last three years :—

1865, . £867 19*s.* 4*d.* | 1866, . £910 19*s.* 6*d.* | 1867, . £84[illegible] 12*s.* 10*d.*

The preceding schedule fairly represents the general employment of the prisoners in the gaol. An immense heap of broken stones having accumulated in front of the stone-sheds, the Governor conceived it would be unsafe to continue breaking more stones until the heap was removed or considerably reduced in bulk, he has therefore more constantly employed the prisoners at the crank-pump, but the crank being continuous, and the prisoners who work it in stalls, not seeing each other, an accident occurred in July, 1868, to one of those at work, which was attended with fatal consequences. The man appears to have been lifted over the shaft by the crank handle and to have fallen on his head on the other side and never to have spoken afterwards. The medical officer, having made a post-mortem examination of the body, states as his opinion "that the man died from the shock, i.e. concussion, and suddenly." A like accident occurred some years since to a prisoner working this crank, which is extremely dangerous, and I would urge the Board of Superintendence to have it altered so as to prevent the possibility of more lives being lost by its use. I annex a plan of a crank in use in several gaols, which is found safe and inexpensive. I would further add that the lives of two prisoners were lost in a Dublin prison by the use of a crank similar to that now in this gaol.*

The laundry connected with the female prison, which is a source of considerable profit, has latterly been much improved, and is now the most perfect in any county or borough gaol in the kingdom. In it many females have been made good laundresses and competent to earn their bread by honest industry, yet I understand that they constantly return to prison recommitted for like offences to those of which they were originally convicted.

School-hours.—Males—10 to 1 o'clock. Females—12 to 1½ o'clock.

The school teacher, although untrained, is stated to be quite competent to discharge the duties of his office; but, as I have already observed, the arrangement of the seats in the chapel, which is used as a school-room, is most unsuited for an improved system of educational teaching, and I would wish to call attention to the plan of the apartment used as a school in the gaol of the neighbouring county of Derry, in which the seats are arranged after a proper model, and well suited for the circumstances of a prison. In my report on this gaol for 1864, pages 72 and 75, I entered into details on this subject, and it is unnecessary for me to repeat them here.

The chaplains visit the school, and enter their observations in a book kept for the purpose. The approved form of registry is kept. No prisoner under a sentence of less than two months is admitted to school.

* Since this report was in type a communication has been received from the Local Inspector, stating that the use of this crank pump has been discontinued until alterations are made in it according to the plan suggested at page 14 of this report.

short shaft, E E, passing through the framework of the partition, A, of the compartment B, in which the prisoner is placed. The crank, C, is separate, and the pall at its end (which is kept in its place by a spring) drives the ratchet, and so transmits its motion through the shaft, E, and wheels, I J, to the main shaft, D; but should the prisoner in the compartment cease to work, although the action of the machine will not be interrupted, the ratchet travelling over the inactive pall will produce a clattering noise, which, with the increased labour on the remaining prisoners, must at once notify to the warder in charge when any one man stops work. The main shaft has also a registering apparatus which strikes a bell when a certain quantity of work has been performed, so that each relay of prisoners must accomplish an equal and known amount of labour.

The shaft runs at the back; the crank-handles are independent of each other, with a tell-tale rack connected with each; the movement is continuous; and a bell attached gives notice when the specified amount of labour has been accomplished, and the men are to cease work.

Dietary and Contracts.

Breakfast.—Males—8 oz. meal made into stirabout, and 1 pint buttermilk. Females—7 oz. meal made into stirabout, and 1 pint of buttermilk. Males and females under 15 years—5 oz. meal made into stirabout, and 1 pint of buttermilk.

Dinner.—Males—Class 1—14 oz. bread, and 1 pint new milk. Class 2—14 oz. bread, and 1 pint vegetable soup. Females—Class 1—12 oz. bread, and ¾ pint new milk. Class 2—12 oz. bread, and ¾ pint vegetable soup. Males and females under 15 years—8 oz. bread, and 1 pint vegetable soup.

Supper.—Males—Class 1.—6 oz. bread, and ½ pint new milk. Females—Class 1—5 oz. bread, and ½ pint new milk. Males and females under 15 years—5 oz. bread, and ½ pint new milk.

Class 1.—Males and females get vegetable soup twice a week in lieu of new milk.

Contracts.—White bread, per cwt., 17*s.* 1*d.*; meat, per lb., 6*d.*; new milk, per gallon, 10½*d.*; buttermilk, per gallon, 3*d.*; coal, per ton, 10*s.* 9*d.*

I found the food for the use of the inmates, which I tasted when I visited the prison, to be of good quality. The chaplains regularly examine the provisions supplied, and enter their observations in the book kept for the purpose. The bread, milk, and stirabout are generally stated to be of good quality, but exceptions are sometimes taken to the buttermilk as being sour.

I questioned the different prisoners in custody. One male lodged a complaint against a warder for having assaulted him. I inquired into the case, but from the evidence of another warder who was present, it would appear that the prisoner was only pushed aside when he could not open a door as he was directed. A female complained to me that she had been ill-treated by the police when being brought to the gaol, but the woman was very drunk and violent at the time of the occurrence; she is therefore unable to give a satisfactory account of the circumstance, and there is no evidence how the hurts which she received were inflicted.

Books and Accounts.

All the superior officers, with the exception of the Local Inspector, have journals. Those of the Governor and medical officer are carefully kept, the latter records in his journal post-mortem examinations and other valuable information with regard to prisoners who have been under his charge.

A new form of daily employment book has been adopted, by which the entire time of each prisoner during the day is accounted for. It answers also as a work-ledger and time-table. It is kept under separate heads for males and females. There are good alphabetical indexes for male and female prisoners, and the various registries of discipline and finance directed by the Court of Queen's Bench, and recommended by the Inspector-General, are in use. A record with proper checks is kept of all money and property found with prisoners on committal. The warder in charge and also the prisoner sign the docket, and afterwards the particulars are entered in a book kept by the Governor. The neglect of proper checks with regard to prisoners' property has been attended with loss in some gaols. All the extern officers enter the length of their visits in the Morning State Book and the clerk copies the memoranda into another book kept for the purpose.

I consider that this department of the prison is well and carefully attended to.

The hospital in this gaol, is cellular, but as has been observed in former reports it is badly placed, and unsuited for a prison. A good prison hospital should be cellular, but differently constructed. The windows, which formerly were insecure, have now been barred and rendered more safe. Very few prisoners, however, are sent to hospital. Both male and female hospitals were unoccupied at the time of my visit, except that a lunatic slept in one of the cells at night. Prisoners under long sentences are weighed on admission, when discharged, and every six months during the period of their sentence, or oftener if necessary.

The Board meets regularly on the first Friday of each month for the discharge of business, when accounts which have been examined by the Local Inspector and found correct, are paid by separate drafts drawn in favour of each individual creditor. The superior officers are paid half-yearly by presentment at assizes; the subordinates monthly by the Board.

An anonymous letter, purporting to be written by a Mr. Moore, was forwarded to me, making charges against persons connected with this gaol, but, having ascertained that no such person as Mr. Moore was known at the address given in the communication, no further notice could be taken of the document, further than to forward it to the local authorities for report, which was accordingly done.

Bridewells.

Each Bridewell within the district was visited by the Local Inspector at least once in every three months during 1868, with one exception, in consequence of the illness of that officer.

A male prisoner (a juvenile) escaped in the beginning of September, 1868, from the bridewell at Antrim, and was not retaken.

358 males and 160 females individual prisoners were committed to this gaol in the course of the past year, 1867, of whom 27 males (no females) were juveniles under 16 years of age; 75 males and 65 females of these prisoners were recommitted more or less frequently—the males 132 times, and the females 115 times—making altogether 415 committals of males, and 210 of females, during the year, and from reference to the prison registries it is shown that these 75 males and 65 females have—the males 390, and the females 412, imprisonments in this gaol recorded against them.

I found when I made my inspection, forty male and eighteen female prisoners, of all classes in custody, of whom four males (paupers supported by the rates) and one female were debtors—one female was for trial—accused of being accessory of a murder.

Five males and one female were insane persons, committed as dangerous lunatics, one male and one female were drunkards, and one female had been convicted under the revenue laws.

On analysing the offences and sentences of the prisoners, inmates of the gaol on the day of my visit, it appears that fourteen males (no females) had been tried by juries before the Judge of Assize, or the Chairman at Quarter Sessions, and 16 males and 15 females, including drunkards, had been summarily convicted before magistrates sitting at Petty Sessions. The following were the offences and sentences:—

Males.

3 prisoners sentenced to imprisonment for two years in the gaol for cattle-stealing, forgery, and assault.
4 prisoners sentenced for twelve months; three for larceny, one for assault.
4 prisoners sentenced for six months, for larceny and sheep-stealing.
7 prisoners sentenced for three and four months; two for larceny, the others for assaults, and like offences against the person.
11 prisoners sentenced for short terms of one and two months, and fourteen days, for assaults, illegal fishing, embezzlement of yarn, &c., and disorderly conduct.

Total, 29 males under sentence.

The female convicted of an offence against the revenue laws, had been sentenced to imprisonment for 4 months. Two others convicted of larceny had been sentenced for 3 and one for 1 month each. All the other convicted females in the gaol had been found guilty before magistrates at Petty Sessions, or the Town Commissioners, of disorderly conduct or assaults, and sentenced for 1 and 2 months, and one for 7 days. These women were, with two or three exceptions, street prostitutes, a class who are constant recurrents to the gaol, re-committed for loitering for prostitution, drunkenness, and disorder.

Some of the prisoners in charge are old offenders; seven belong to a class who, under the Prison Bill, brought into the House in the last Session of Parliament, would be transferred to a central depot, as in Scotland, and no means could be devised more effectual for the reduction of crime in large towns, than the removal from the district of those offenders who traffic in the violation of the law, such as receivers of stolen goods, brothel keepers, and persons of that class, who often manage to carry on their trade, even when in the gaol.

Juveniles.

I found one juvenile aged 15 years, in the gaol, when I visited it, now on his second conviction, and under a sentence of imprisonment for 6 months for horse stealing, although deaf and dumb; he is, I understand, an inveterate thief, and is destined apparently to be long a burden on the rates of this district. Another boy, also 15 years of age, convicted of sheep stealing, was in custody, under a like sentence. Altogether 9 males and 2 females were committed previously to my inspection in 1868; 26 males (no females) were committed in 1867, one male was twice committed, six were sent to reformatories, at the end of their punishment of imprisonment in the gaol in 1867, and 1 female in 1868; 13 of those committed in 1867, had lost one or both parents, 10 were wholly illiterate, and only seven could read and write.

Lunatics.

I regretted to find, notwithstanding the Act 30 & 31 Vict., cap. 118, passed last session, six lunatics still in the gaol when I visited, and they cannot be removed from it until the new asylum at Monaghan is completed. Lunatics sleep in cells in the criminal prison. One, a female, died in 1867.

Debtors.

The 4 male debtors in the gaol, when I inspected, were paupers, costing the ratepayers for their maintenance an average sum of £25 10*s.* 11*d.* yearly for each. One had already been ten months in custody, and I am informed that there is no prospect of his discharge. 25 male and 3 female debtors were committed in 1867, of whom 17 were paupers.

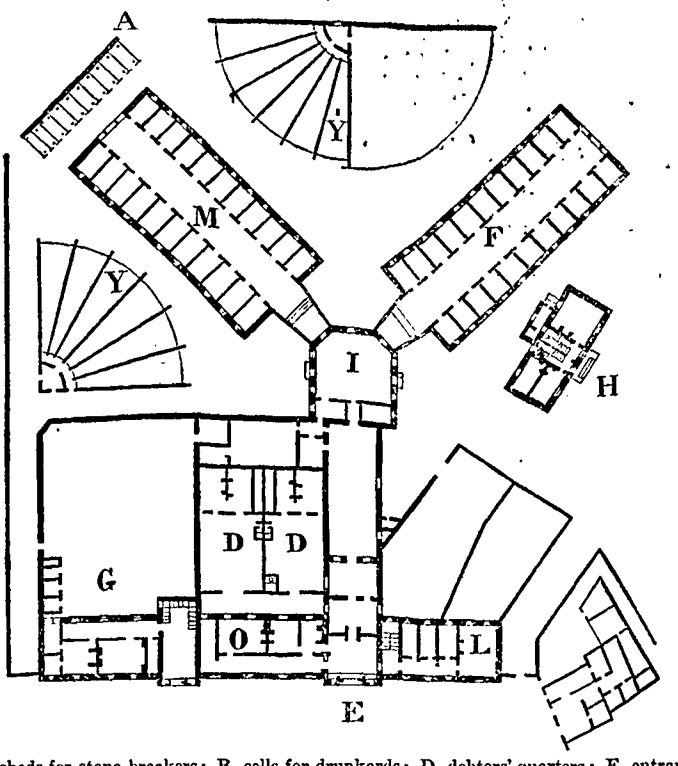
Plan.



A, sheds for stone-breakers; B, cells for drunkards; D, debtors' quarters; E, entrance; F, female prison; G, Governor's house; H, hospital; I, hall of the prison, chapel overhead; M, male prison; O, office; Y Y, exercising yards.

When I made my inspection of the gaol, the buildings were in sound repair, properly ventilated, very clean, orderly, and well kept. I observed some marks of damp from leakages in the roof over the chapel and in the female prison under the cistern, but they had been stanched and a contract had been entered into for painting the rails in front of the gaol and a large gate, which required it.

The gaol is supplied with water from the town reservoir, on a high level, which commands all the buildings, at about a quarter of a mile distant, for which a rent of £5 a year is paid. The water flows into the cells from that reservoir, and the supply is abundant. There is, besides, a good spring well, within the prison grounds, and the pumps are in proper working order. A metal tank has lately been put up over the hospital, at a cost of £14, in place of the old lead and wooden cistern, the woodwork of which was decayed.

There are water closets in every cell of the male prison. These and all the other plumbers' work of the gaol, the pumps, gas-pipes, cocks, bells, and fittings are kept in excellent repair, by an extensive manufacturer in the city of Armagh, by contract for £18 a year. The gaol authorities have the greatest satisfaction from this arrangement, which should be adopted elsewhere. The sewerage is stated to be effective, and the stock of bedding and prison clothing in the prison quite sufficient for the requirements, and some in store; pillows, not always given to prisoners, are here supplied. A good fumigating apparatus has now been put up, as suggested in my last report.

This gaol appears to be satisfactorily managed by the Governor, who is an attentive officer, and the prisoners are amenable to discipline.

In the present uncertain state of the law as regards prison management in Ireland, I do not suggest any alteration which would be attended with expense; but one infraction of the Prisons Act in this gaol is unnecessary, and should not be continued. I refer to the school, which is held at desks placed in the chapel, incumbering the apartment, and in direct contravention of the 7th section of the Act 7th Geo. IV., cap. 74, which enacts: "One or more chapel or chapels shall be provided in every prison, and shall be strictly set apart for religious worship or the occasional religious and moral instruction of the prisoners, and shall never be appropriated to or employed for any other purpose whatsoever." The room adjoining the chapel, now never used, would make a good school-room, and I would suggest that it be used in future for the purpose. A few maps might be hung up in it, which could be obtained at a very trifling cost.

The laundry is not partitioned, and additional sheds for stone-breaking are required.

Gas is kept lighting in the general prison during the night, and after lock-up, until 8 P.M., in the cells in which such prisoners as are engaged at trades are confined. The locks are reported to be, generally, of a good description.

The Governor, accompanied by the head warder and turnkey in charge of the male side of the gaol, and the matron on the female side attends lock-up, which is held at 6 P.M. in both summer and winter. The prisoners are unlocked at 6, A.M., in summer, and at 7, A.M., in winter. At a quarter past 9 o'clock, P.M., the Governor, with two warders, inspects each cell in the male prison, and sees that each prisoner has lain down in his cot. The locks are then ascertained to be secure.

The prison keys are kept after lock-up in a box in the bed-room of the Governor, to which no other person has access. A second lock and bolt has been put on the outside of the female prison, the Governor is thus enabled to lock the outer door of that prison at night, the matron keeping the key of the inside lock. Four alarm bells, rung by the vibration of the air, are placed at the entrance to the central hall; they can be heard all over the prison at night, and are used to call the night watchman, if necessary. When the locks require repair they are taken home by a locksmith, who is trustworthy, and are returned by him, without passing through the hands of a third person.

One night watchman (a turnkey), comes on duty at 10, P.M., but he patrols the exterior of the prison only. Two turnkeys sleep in the interior of the male prison, an objectionable practice, which, as my late colleague observed in his last report, has led to grave infractions of discipline elsewhere. The sleeping apartments of officers should not be within the building in which the prisoners are confined, but a turnkey should remain in it at night as a policeman on duty to attend to the safety of the gaol, and to the prisoners, should they require assistance.

There is only one tell-tale clock in the gaol, but an entry is made of the state of the markings on the clock, in the morning.

No escape was attempted from this gaol, or any of the bridewells of the county, in 1867 or 1868.

The preceding schedule shows that remunerative employment is successfully carried on in this gaol; some very fine cambric handkerchiefs were being manufactured when I visited, and they bring a high price in the market. The account of the work is carefully kept in a business-like manner. Tailoring, shoemaking, matmaking, and other industrial works occupy the prisoners. They also break hard whinstone, by which £33 8*s.* 10*d.* was realized during the past year.

The females sprig muslin, sew, knit, and wash. All the clothing of the prisoners including shoes, are made within the prison by the inmates.

As I have already observed, school is now held at open desks in the chapel, and I would suggest that stalls be fitted up in a proper school-room instead; a few books, maps, and a black-board are much required.

The Presbyterian Chaplain is very regular in his attendance at the school, and he enters his observations in the book kept for the purpose. The Chaplain of the Established Church sometimes visits; but I did not observe any entries by the Roman Catholic Chaplain in the school registry during the past year. The registry is kept in the approved form. The school is not in connexion with any educational body, or inspected by their officers. The male teacher, who is also storekeeper, was, I understand, regularly trained in the schools of the Commissioners of National Education. The schoolmistress is untrained; she is also assistant matron in the gaol.

I tasted the food provided for the prisoners on the day of my visit and found it of good quality, but I observe that the Chaplains who report in the tabular form intended for their use occasionally object to the bread and milk supplied. I questioned all the prisoners in custody, and no complaint was made to me by any.

Books and Accounts.

I found on the present inspection, as on former occasions, the books and registries of the gaol kept with much care and attention. The checks on expenditure are excellent, and calculated to prevent irregularities.

Every creditor is paid his account, if beyond a few shillings, by cheque signed by three members of the Board, and countersigned by the Local Inspector; and as each turnkey gets a separate cheque for the amount of his salary, it passes as money in the city, and if lost is recoverable as it can be traced through the bank. Separate accounts are opened for each bridewell and for the gaol, so that the balances can always be at once seen and must correspond. The bank-book is produced at every meeting of the Board. The approved forms for journals and statistical registers have been adopted; but the Officers' Conduct Book, although provided, is not yet in use. When properly kept it will be a valuable record of the good conduct as well as the faults of the subordinates, and a guide to the Board when making selections for promotion.

Three Inquests, viz.:—14th May, 1867, 25th November, 1867, and 13th February, 1868.

Few prisoners are placed in the hospital here, no female was an inmate of it from December, 1867, up to August, 1868, when I visited. The hospital accommodation consists of one ward for each sex, which is found to be quite sufficient as they are so seldom occupied.

The Medical Officer treats all ordinary cases of indisposition of prisoners in the cells of the gaol, and only contagious diseases are removed to the hospital wards. When the five insane prisoners now in custody are removed to the asylum, an hospital nurse will scarcely be required in the gaol; and, should a vacancy occur, that appointment need not be filled up, as monthly nurses can always be procured at a small cost, by the week or day, to attend any casual patient who may be treated in hospital.

The Medical Officer of this gaol, who is likewise Surgeon of the County Infirmary, is at present obliged to give his attendance and professional assistance under the 86th section of the Act 6 & 7 Geo. IV., cap. 116, without fee or reward, to the prisoners and others in the gaol; I trust, however, that in future legislation this section will be repealed, and that the skill and high professional attainments of Dr. Robinson, who holds both appointments, and who now devotes so much time gratuitously to this institution, will be adequately remunerated. In 1866, Dr. Robinson addressed a letter to me as Inspector-General of the northern district, which I published in my report on this prison for that year, and to which I would refer, as the circumstances still hold good. See Appendix, page 89, of that Report.

The hospital wards are well ventilated and with water-closets attached, but the bath is out of order and useless. There is, however, in the basement of the female prison, adjoining the laundry, an excellent bath and shower-bath, with hot water always ready, for prisoners of that sex. Convalescent patients have no exercising yards—a great defect considering the importance of open air exercise, with sun and light, in many diseases to which prisoners are subject.

Two deaths occurred in the gaol in 1867, one of an aged lunatic; the other was of a female committed as a prostitute, who died of bowel complaint; one, a male, committed for debt, died in 1868.

Bridewells.

I wish to call attention to the want of sufficient sheets in some of the bridewells of this county, the bed-ticks and bedding are likewise not always of a good description.

The Bridewell at Ballybot, in the town of Newry, in this county, is quite unsuited for the purposes of a prison. There is an excellent bridewell in that part of the town which is in the county Down. It is sufficient to contain all the prisoners committed from the Ballybot and Newry districts, and I trust that in future legislation arrangements will be made to prevent the necessity of having two bridewells in the same town.

The Bridewell at Newtown-Hamilton is dark, damp, and in bad repair, without sufficient bedding, and very insecure. On the day of my visit all the glass in the sash of the cell for drunkards was broken, and prisoners are compelled to lie on damp straw on the flags in it, and without bedding.

All the bridewells in the county were visited by the Local Inspector once in each quarter of the year 1868, with the exception of that at Newtown-Hamilton, which was only visited twice during the year, in consequence of the Local Inspector having been obliged to go to England owing to the illness of his wife.

The keeper of Newtown-Hamilton Bridewell holds a small farm, and the keeper of that at Markethill works occasionally as a tailor.

I found on the day which I selected for my inspection of this gaol 28 males of all classes and 8 females in custody. Many were grave offenders under long sentences; 3 had been convicted at assizes, and 19 at quarter sessions; 8 had been summarily convicted; 4 (3 males and 1 female) had received sentences of imprisonment for two years, and 10 (8 males and 2 females) for one year; 4 males and 2 females for six and nine months respectively; and 1 male sentenced to penal servitude for seven years was, at the time of my visit, waiting for removal to the Convict Depot. Seven prisoners (5 males and 2 females) summarily convicted before magistrates at petty sessions had been sentenced for one month, and 1 (a female) for four days for drunkenness. There were likewise in custody 3 males on remand or for trial, and 3 lunatics committed as dangerous.

Several of the prisoners under long sentences in charge, especially females, were old offenders, professional thieves who live at the expense of the public in or out of gaol.

As has already been observed, 14 of the criminal population of the gaol, nearly one-half of the entire number of convicted prisoners in charge, were under sentences of twelve months' imprisonment and upwards. In former reports the evils which result from the association of offenders under such circumstances have been enumerated, and it is to be hoped that in future legislation on prisons all criminals so circumstanced will be removed to a central depot, as in Scotland, where an equal punishment will be dealt to all offenders, and contamination prevented from the indiscriminate association of prisoners, as in this gaol.

Two of the untried prisoners in charge are known to be professional thieves; one of whom had already undergone an imprisonment of two years in this gaol for larceny.

On looking at the classes of offences of the prisoners in custody on the day of inspection, I find, besides 2 males untried, 5 males and 4 females convicted and under sentence for offences against property. All the females are old offenders. One has already suffered penal servitude, having been convicted and sentenced in the county Monaghan; she also was imprisoned for two years, as I am informed, in a Dublin gaol, and is now under a like sentence of two years in this gaol, where she will have an opportunity to corrupt during that period any female less guilty than herself who may be placed in association with her. Another female in custody, sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment, has been eight times convicted and imprisoned here; and two women comrades, one an aged person sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment, the other who is young and stated to be her pupil has been sentenced for six months; both are professional shoplifters.

The males in charge on the day of my visit were, one a returned convict sentenced to seven years' penal servitude, another a stranger from Wexford sentenced to imprisonment for two years, two others for twelve months each for larceny, and a third for three months for robbery.

Offenders against the person are frequently inmates of this gaol. At the time of my inspection 11 males were in custody tried at assizes and quarter sessions for assaults and stabbing, besides 5 summarily convicted before magistrates at petty sessions. These men for the most part belonged to the farming classes, and their offences appeared to have resulted from drunkenness and faction feuds. It is unnecessary to dwell on the evils which result from the association of such prisoners with the professional and habitual criminals already enumerated.

I found, also, in the gaol, a man for taking forcible possession, another for deserting his wife, besides one woman for perjury, and two for drunkenness and using threatening language.

Juveniles.

No juvenile was in custody when I inspected. Only 2 males had been committed prior to my visit in 1868, and both had been sent to reformatories; 2 (a male and a female) had likewise been sent to reformatories in 1867, each after undergoing an imprisonment of one month in punishment of their offences, one of the age of ten, the other of twelve years. They are stated to have been without parents, and illiterate.

Lunatics.

I find that on the 7th February, 1868, an insane person was committed to the bridewell at Bailieborough, contrary to the provisions of the Act of last session, and he remained in that prison until the 19th February, when he was removed to the asylum. I wish specially to call attention to the illegality of this committal, and it is to be hoped that it will not again occur. There is, I am aware, occasionally experienced a difficulty in obtaining the signature of a second magistrate under the present system, and it has been suggested that the signature of one magistrate might be sufficient for committal to an asylum, as the authorities in the lunatic asylum are empowered under the Act to discharge persons so committed when cured, without warrant from the Lord Lieutenant, as in the case of other lunatic poor.

I found three insane males in custody at the time of my visit. They had been committed as dangerous previously to the year 1868.

On the day of inspection no debtors were in charge, but 9 had been previously committed in 1868, and 18 males and 1 female in 1867. There is no marshalsea for females in this gaol.

No escape from the gaol or any bridewell in the county was attempted in 1867, or previously to inspection in 1868.

Photography has been adopted in this gaol for the detection of offenders from other districts who are committed here. When a stranger who appears to belong to the criminal class is placed in custody the Governor has the man's photograph transmitted to the different gaols throughout the country in order that his antecedents may be ascertained.

NOTE.—As this report was passing through press, a prisoner escaped from Cavan Gaol on Sunday, the 6th December, 1868, at two or three o'clock in the afternoon, under circumstances denoting the grossest neglect by the prison officials, as well as a very lax discipline in the management of the gaol. The prisoner who effected his escape was under sentence of imprisonment for "assault with intent to rob." Influenced by his orderly conduct in the gaol, the Governor appointed him "wardsman," and as such he was employed to assist in serving the dinner to the other prisoners who were locked up in their cells, at the same time that he was allowed to have his meals in the kitchen of the gaol without supervision. In consequence of this privilege the prisoner had access to the room of a turnkey, absent on leave for the day, who kept his firearms in that room, and had the keys of the large back gate of the gaol locked up in a chest in it. The prisoner is stated to have forced the lock of this chest, and with the keys he found in it to have let himself out of the gaol through the gate unnoticed in open day. He appears to have escaped to Clones, in the county of Monaghan, which is ten miles distant, to which town he was followed by the Governor, and retaken in a few hours. A special meeting of the Board of Superintendence was held on the 15th of the month, to inquire into the matter, when they came to the following resolution:—"We are of opinion that the custom which allowed the wardsman to dine in the kitchen, after serving dinner to the other prisoners, is most objectionable, and in future he should be locked up, and eat his meals separately in his cell in the same way as other prisoners. In respect to the turnkey, G. R., we consider that he was guilty of gross negligence, in not giving up his keys to the first turnkey before going out on leave of absence for the day, in consequence of which neglect the prisoner escaped, and for which we reprimand him accordingly; as it appears that the firearms of each turnkey are kept in his private room; we consider the locks on their doors at present are not sufficiently secure, and that proper locks be provided, and that a strict order be given to each turnkey that, before going out on leave, he should give up his keys to the Governor or first turnkey."

It is scarcely necessary to point out the utter insecurity of a prison in which such an occurrence could have happened, yet the only punishment inflicted on the officials was a reprimand by the Board to a turnkey, and an expression of opinion that gross neglect had been proved in the management of the gaol. It, therefore, became the duty of my colleague and myself to address a letter to the Board of Superintendence, in which we called attention to the gravity of the case, and the necessity for visiting on the superior officers of the gaol, who appear most in fault, the strongest censure for their culpable remissness, and want of the most ordinary precautions for the safe custody of the prisoners confided to their keeping. The keys of the prison, even of the outer gate, remained in charge of a common turnkey, who was allowed to go out on leave for the day without giving up his charge to a superior officer. A man, under sentence for highway robbery, was permitted to remain at large without supervision, so that he had access to the private room of a turnkey, absent on leave, in which firearms were kept, and the keys of the prison locked up in a chest which he could force open, and with the keys unlock the gate and let himself out of the gaol. It appears that the key of the outer gate has hitherto been left in charge of the turnkey during the day to admit milk and other articles, and at night-lockings is given up to the Governor, there is thus no check on the officers to prevent the introduction of prohibited articles into the gaol, and the turnkey having the key, can pass persons, or things, in or out of the gaol without the knowledge of the gate porter, so that the books and checks established at the gate are thus rendered of no avail, and useless. Again, having firearms within the blocks of buildings where the prisoners are confined, is never permitted in a well regulated gaol; the armoury should always be at the gate of the gaol, and under proper protection.

In my report for 1866 I pointed out the arrangements which were adopted in that year by the Board of Superintendence and the Grand Jury of the county to have plans and estimates prepared for remodelling the old buildings of this gaol to suit the separate system of prison management. I here subjoin the plans then prepared by Mr. Hague, the Architect of the Board, and believe that they are fully adequate to meet the requirements of the most improved form of discipline, but the cost of the works would be about £5,000, and I was not at that time, nor am I now, prepared to recommend this, or, indeed, any large sum to be expended, in the present uncertain state of legislation with regard to prisons in Ireland. The Grand Jury, acting on the suggestion of the Inspector-General, then approved and adopted the plans, but postponed taking any further action in the matter until the wishes of the Legislature are ascertained.

The female prison would contain 18, the male 42 cells. The general entrance would be through the central tower, the present chapel forming an inspection hall, the sunk story under it, coal vaults, and space for heating apparatus. The chapel would be in the building now occupied by the Governor's apartments, and approached by a separate staircase for females. The infirmary for males would be in the same building, but altogether cut off from the rest of the block, with a staircase leading into the infirmary exercising-ground. The Governor's house would be so placed, that although separate, and his family and servants altogether apart, he could have immediate supervision over every branch of the establishment, the quarters, also, of male and female criminal prisoners, of warders, and debtors, would be separate and distinct.

I annex the plan of the buildings of this gaol as they at present exist, taken from my reports in 1864 and 1866.

I found this gaol, when I made my inspection, in a creditable condition of order and cleanliness. The prisoners appear properly cared but an effective discipline is impossible in a gaol wanting in all the requirements of a proper prison system. The buildings, with the exception of the tower and back wing of the old gaol, are in fair repair. The bedding, blankets, and sheets are sufficient for present requirements, and of excellent quality. The prison clothing is rather scanty; but I found materials in store to be made up when tradesmen are committed to the prison. Water for prisoners' use is taken from two pump holes, about 70 feet deep, which could afford an abundant supply of excellent water, but the pumping apparatus is defective, and the tread-wheel perfectly useless, causing a deficiency of water to the establishment. Some arrangement should be made to have this defect remedied. I believe the tread-wheel should be altogether removed and a sufficient pumping apparatus substituted. The laundry is in a bad state, very small, and unsuitable, and there is no drying-room. The sewerage is stated to be sufficient and flushable.

The classification of males is according to the provisions of the Prisons Act, but that for females is almost a nullity from the circumstances of the prison. As regards prisoners of this sex, it is most desirable that known prostitutes should be employed by themselves in the laundry and at other work, and females not belonging to this category should be kept distinct as much as possible, and have no communication with them.

There is no marshalsea for females; no lavatories or working sheds, and the hospital is very defective. Gas has been introduced into the officers' apartments, but not into the cells or day-rooms of the prison, which is not artificially lighted at night.

Unlock is held at 6 A.M. in summer, and at daylight in winter, and the prisoners are locked up for the night at 6 P.M. in summer, and at dusk in winter.

The Governor reports that he ascertains that all prisoners are in their cells after lock-up; and makes, occasionally, further inspections at uncertain hours during the night. Four turnkeys patrol in rotation after lock-up, until morning, but their vigilance is not tested by even one tell-tale clock. There is no patrol of the exterior of the prison at night. The outer keys are stated to be kept by the Governor in his bed-room after lock-up.

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour disposed of outside the gaol, for the last three years:—

1865, £4 12*s.* 6*d.* | 1866, — | 1867, —

Male prisoners sentenced to hard labour work for seven hours in summer and four in winter; those not so sentenced work for one hour less daily. The females knit, sew, and wash for the prison.

The tread-wheel being broken down and decayed, two hand-pumps are used for pumping water, but they are not sufficient.

School-hours.—Males, 10 to 12 o'clock.

The female prisoners have not received educational instruction in this gaol for many years.

School for males is held in the chapel in direct contravention of the 6th sec. of the Act, 7 Geo. 4, cap. 74, which directs "that one or more chapel or chapels shall be provided in every prison, and they shall be strictly set apart for religious worship, or for the occasional religious and moral instruction of the prisoners, and shall never be appropriated to or employed for any other purpose whatsoever."

One of the turnkeys, who is a carpenter, might be usefully employed in putting up inexpensive stalls in one of the day-rooms, similar to those at Mullingar, and in other gaols, where prisoners could be taught in separation. This would afford facilities for the teacher when giving instruction, and would conduce to order and regularity in the school.

The teacher performs the duties of clerk, and assists the Governor to keep the books and registries of the prison. He is untrained as a teacher, and acts also as turnkey. The school is not in connexion with any public educational body.

I found the provisions provided for prisoners, on the day of my visit, of excellent quality, and the chaplains generally report favourably of the supply furnished by the contractors. On looking over the dietary report book I find two or three exceptions were taken to the milk in the early part of the year. I questioned all the prisoners in custody—no complaint was made to me by any.

Books and Accounts.

The Governor deserves credit for the labour he bestows on this branch of his duties, in which he is assisted by the school teacher, merely as a writing clerk. He keeps all the various books and registries of discipline and finance of the establishment, and they appear satisfactory. The general conduct book for subaltern officers has been established. The Governor enters in his journal the principal occurrences in the gaol. The journals of the other officers contain little more than a record of their visits.

Net cost of gaol, including diet and salaries, for the three preceding years:—

1865, . £1,574 9*s.* 3*d.* | 1866,. £1,587 4*s.* 10*d.* | 1867, . £1,547 15*s.* 10*d.*

Two hundred and seventy individual males and 60 females were committed to this gaol in 1867, of whom 15 males and 8 females were lunatics, committed as dangerous, and 14 males and 1 female were juveniles; 23 males and 8 females were re-committed during the year, from two to five times and upwards; the number of committals during the year being 294 of males and 85 of females; 216 of the males and 36 of the females had never previously been committed to gaol, and 67 males and 25 females were old offenders, who had been in charge—the males, 171 times, and the females, 165 times.

I found, when I made my inspection, 35 males, of all classes, and 5 females, in custody; 11 males had been tried by jury at assizes or quarter sessions; all the remaining inmates of the gaol were either "for trial" or had been summarily convicted before magistrates at petty sessions. Five males were under sentence for offences against property, viz., picking pockets, larceny, and forgery; all the other convicted prisoners in the gaol had been found guilty of assaults, drunkenness, and vagrancy, and offences against the excise and laws for the protection of game.

Nine prisoners, 8 males and 1 female, were for trial or on remand; the woman and one man were charged with administering poison to the husband of the former; 2 males for firing at the person; 1 for rape; 1 for taking forcible possession of land, and 3 for robbery, larceny, and passing a forged cheque.

The following were the sentences of the convicted prisoners in custody :—

The relative number of convicted prisoners were, as has already been stated, 5 for offences against property; 5 for breaches of the excise and fishery laws, 1 for vagrancy, and 16 for assaults and threats. Besides the female committed on a charge of poisoning her husband, and another for an offence against the revenue laws, 3 prostitutes for "being drunk and disorderly" were the only females in the gaol on the day of my visit. Formerly the number of lunatics, committed as dangerous, swelled the averages of inmates of both sexes, but especially of females in the gaol; this cause of disturbance has now happily ceased by the passing of the Act, 30 & 31 Vic., cap. 18; hence the averages have been considerably reduced, as will be seen from the following, the daily average numbers, fractions omitted, of inmates of the gaol, exclusive of debtors, last seven years:—

Here, as in other parts of the kingdom, the large number of prostitutes committed for loitering, for prostitution, drunkenness, and disorder, constitute the principal female population of the prison, and in an associated gaol, such as this is, their presence is productive of much evil. It is a subject of regret when chaste females, committed for offences such as breaches of the excise and fishery laws, leaving service, and similar offences, are placed in association with the degraded class to whom I refer.

Juveniles.

One juvenile, male, fourteen years of age, was in custody at the time of my visit, convicted of illegal fishing. Eight males and 1 female had previously been in charge—1 twice, 2 had received sentences of imprisonment for two and 4 for one month each, two others had been committed for seven days; none of them were ordered to be sent to reformatories at the end of their gaol punishments. In 1867, 15 were committed, of whom 1 was a female, 1 (male) was twice committed, 1 was acquitted, the others were summarily adjudicated on by the magistrates at petty sessions; 1 (male) received a sentence of imprisonment for six months, and 5 of one month, the rest were for short periods; 5 had lost one or both parents; 1 male was sent to reformatory.

Fifteen males and 3 females were committed for offences against the revenue laws previously to inspection in 1868. I found 5 in custody; 1 an old man, stated to be eighty-eight years of age, who was the only inmate of the hospital at the time of my visit.

One juvenile was sentenced to whipping in the gaol as part of his sentence, in 1867.

Photography, first introduced into this gaol in 1865, is still in use for the purpose of ascertaining the antecedents of old offenders, strangers to the district, who may be committed to the prison. In my report on this gaol in 1866 I enumerated the cases of some offenders, who would otherwise have escaped the full penalty, which the law awards for repeated convictions, but for the exertions of the Governor, by the aid of photography, in tracing their former crimes.

The following are some of those who have been so convicted since March, 1867, and previously to inspection in the present year.

1. C. M'M. (female), convicted of fowl stealing, in April, 1867, was identified by the officers of Derry and Omagh Gaols, and sentenced to seven years penal servitude.

2. A. G. (female), convicted of larceny from the person, in July, 1867, was identified also by the officers of Omagh and Derry Gaols, and received sentence of seven years penal servitude.

3. M. M'M. (female), convicted of larceny from a dwelling-house, in October, 1867, identified by the officers of Omagh Gaol and got seven years penal servitude.

4. H. G. (female), convicted of larceny from the person, in October, 1867, identified by the officers of Derry Gaol, and received sentence of seven years penal servitude.

5. F. M. (male), aged thirty-two, and twice a returned convict, was convicted of burglary, in January, 1868, and got ten years penal servitude; he was, in 1851, sentenced to eighteen calendar months imprisonment in Omagh Gaol; he was known in Derry Gaol as having, in 1856, got four years penal servitude.; between 1850 and 1856 he was three times convicted of larceny in county Donegal, for which he received sentences of three, twelve, and six months imprisonment; and at Lifford, in 1860, he was sentenced to seven years penal servitude for larceny; this man commenced crime in 1850 at fourteen years of age, since which time he has put up in confinement a period of fourteen years and three months; and is now for the third time under sentence of penal servitude.

6. O. M'C. (male), alias Dolan, convicted of burglary, in March, 1868, and sentenced to imprisonment for twelve calendar months, is known as an old offender by the officers of Derry Gaol.

7. T. M'N., with other aliases (male), aged twenty-seven, a pickpocket, with great pretension of innocence and simplicity, was convicted in March, 1868, and sentenced to twelve months imprisonment with hard labour; his photograph having been sent to the different gaols, he was found to have been six times in Belfast Gaol, three times in Armagh, three times in Omagh, and twice in Derry Gaol; this man, like No. 5, commenced his career of crime at fourteen years of age; his first committal to Tyrone Gaol being in February, 1855.

8. P. D. (male), a pickpocket, convicted of an attempt to rob, in June, 1868, got one calendar month, was known to be twice in Belfast Gaol and once in Armagh Gaol.

I found this gaol when I made my inspection in July of the present year in the same satisfactory condition of order and cleanliness as when I visited it at former periods; the buildings were all in sound repair, and particularly well cared, the ventilation properly attended to, and the prisoners under as effective a discipline as the structural defects of the buildings, and the classification under the 7th Geo. IV., cap. 74, will permit.

There is an ample stock of prison clothing and bedding, with some in store; the beds have pillows and rugs of a superior description, but some of the blankets are thin and worn. The supply of water to the gaol, from a reservoir at a distance from the prison grounds, is abundant, and is distributed by pipes directly into every yard, and section of the prison, without passing through the tank within the gaol into which it formerly flowed. The solitary cells are now properly heated, and are boarded and fitted up with means of communication with an officer of the prison, as the law directs. No gas is made in the town of Lifford, and the prison is lighted at night by paraffin lamps.

The locks are of a good description, but the security of the prison is impaired by buildings over which persons could climb, but as the necessary alterations for security would be attended with an outlay of about £19, and as the Board has perfect confidence in the watchfulness and vigilance of the Governor of the gaol, the consideration of this and other alterations has been deferred until the wishes of Parliament respecting a new Prison Bill are known.

In my Report on this gaol for 1866 I made some remarks on the sewerage of the prison, and as it is a subject which should not be lost sight of should future improvements be carried out, I repeat them here as they still hold good:—

"There is no sewerage except from the female prison, which latter discharges itself into a foul and stagnant ditch in a field behind the gaol, where, from the want of fall in the drain, the sewage matter lies at the bottom until washed by floods into the river. The Governor pointed out to me six cesspools round the main building, into which the gutter drainage from the roof discharges itself; a useless expedient, for, as the Sanitary Commissioners remark, water tanks above ground are far preferable for many reasons to those placed close to and under the foundations of the buildings. No sewerage exists from the male prison, and the latrine arrangements are very imperfect, being only open wooden boxes of a most clumsy construction, which I understand are emptied every morning by a labourer employed for the purpose. The system as now carried out requires amendment; under any circumstances these boxes should be improved, or at least charcoal or bog mould applied as a deodorizer in them. I understand that roche-lime is now used for the purpose; which is a mistake, as it tends rather to increase the evil which it is designed to prevent. I am unwilling to ask the Board to incur expense at present, while there is a prospect of prisoners under long sentences being removed to a central depot; but should it be decided to alter the buildings to suit an improved system of discipline, the field at the back of the gaol appears to me well adapted for carrying into effect the method for the disposal of latrine sewage suggested by the Royal Commissioners appointed to report on the sanitary condition of barracks and hospitals in 1861. The position of the ground affords facilities for the adoption of either of the plans they propose, pages 85-91, and therefore under no circumstances should the drainage from the latrines of this prison be permitted to flow into the river."

Mould's earth-closets are in use in some gaols in England; the authorities of Derby Gaol have found them effective; and although not generally suited for Irish gaols, I do not know any prison in this kingdom in which they could be so successfully tried as here.

The Governor of this gaol pays much attention to the classification of prisoners as far as the limited means at his disposal will permit, a matter frequently neglected in other gaols, where the less guilty are sometimes permitted to be in association with professional criminals and old offenders. The classification is as far as possible in accordance with the Prisons Act. The males are classified as master and pauper debtors, tried and untried felons and misdemeanants. There are only two female discipline officers, consequently the classification in the prison for that sex is very imperfect; the number of female prisoners are, however, few; the average in 1867, was 7, and in 1868, 8, during the year.

The various defects of this gaol have been pointed out in former reports, but I do not suggest that any outlay be incurred in alterations of the buildings in the present uncertain state of the law with regard to prisons.

Unlocking is held at 6, A.M., in summer, and at 7, A.M., in winter; and the prisoners are locked in their cells at night at 6, P.M., in summer, and at dusk in winter. The system adopted in lock-up and unlock appears satisfactory, and the Governor exercises due caution, and an effective supervision during the night, except that there is no tell-tale clock on the premises to test the vigilance of the night guard, which consists of one turnkey only. The Governor makes occasional visits to the prison after lock-up; he did so on twenty-six occasions during the past year. All the keys of the gaol remain in the custody of the Governor during the night.

No escape was attempted from this prison or the bridewell of the county during the past or the present year.

Very little industrial employment is carried on in this gaol, hence the profits from the labours of the prisoners are insignificant. The males are, for the most part, occupied in breaking stones. The females sew and wash. The male prisoners, when breaking stones, work in separate sheds, but the work is little remunerative, bringing only a profit of about three pence per ton. No trades are taught in the gaol; but twenty-four skilled artisans were in custody during the past year. Under the 107th section of the Prisons Act, £3 4*s.* 6*d.*, and under the 111th section, £6 3*s.* 6*d.*, were awarded to prisoners by the Board of Superintendence during the past year, 1867.

Chaplains are the inspectors of the schools, and they enter their observations on each visit in the book kept for the purpose. The school-room in the gaol is furnished with one map and tablets. The approved form of registry is in use; one for each school.

Dietary and Contracts.

Prisoners whose time exceeds one week.—Class 1, Males.—Breakfast—8 oz. meal and 1 pint buttermilk. Dinner—14 oz. bread and 1 pint new milk. Supper—6 oz. bread and ½ pint new milk.

Class 2, Females.—Breakfast—7 oz. meal and 1 pint buttermilk. Dinner—12 oz. bread and ¾ pint new milk. Supper—5 oz. bread and ½ pint new milk.

Class 3, Children under 15 years.—Breakfast—5 oz. meal and 1 pint buttermilk. Dinner 8 oz. bread and 1 pint vegetable soup. Supper—5 oz. bread and ½ pint new milk.

Prisoners of 1st and 2nd classes, whose time does not exceed one week, do not receive supper, and get vegetable soup for dinner in lieu of new milk. The 3rd class prisoners of same term of imprisonment get 4 oz. of bread for supper, without milk.

The meal for breakfast is of equal parts of oatmeal and Indian meal.

When potatoes can be procured they are substituted for bread for dinner.

The Chaplains regularly report on the quality of the food provided for the inmates, and they almost always express their approval of the provisions supplied; their reports are made in the tabular form recommended for the purpose. I tasted the food for the use of the prisoners on the day of my visit and found it excellent. One prisoner complained to me of the bread which he had received a few days before, but, as far as I could ascertain, without reason.

Since the introduction of the present improved dietary it has not been found necessary in any instance to order extra diet to an adult not in hospital.

Books and Accounts.

I found the various books and registries of discipline and finance in this gaol kept with commendable attention. The Local Inspector and the Governor are most careful in testing the accuracy of the issue and consumption of provisions used in the gaol, and they regularly initial the abstract of Daily Consumption Book after it has been properly checked—the Governor daily, and the Local Inspector weekly. All the superior officers have journals. The Chaplains enter their visits; and the Local Inspector and Governor take more than ordinary care to enter the different occurrences in the gaol. Each turnkey, when on duty, makes reports. The report of the night guard is entered in the state of the prison at Locking Book.

The various forms ordered by the Judges of the Queen's Bench and recommended by the Inspectors-General are in use. I have made some suggestion in the Visitors' Book, which I trust will be carried out.

Prisoners are permitted to see their friends once in three months.

Besides vagrants, drunkards, debtors, and lunatics, 27 male and 22 female prisoners, charged with criminal offences, were in custody on the day when I made my inspection; altogether, 89 of all classes were inmates of the gaol, of whom 27 were lunatics and 10 debtors.

On reference to the periods of the sentences of the convicted prisoners in charge I find that 1 male had been sentenced for a term of eighteen months, 1 female and 2 males for twelve and 1 male for nine months. Seven—6 males and 1 female—were for six, and 3 males and 3 females for three and four months. The remaining prisoners in custody were under short sentences—16 for one or two months, and 7 for terms under one month.

As regards the classes of crime for which these prisoners were sentenced—10 males and 5 females were for offences against property, 2 males for perjury and bigamy, and 1 female for begging. The remaining males were for offences against the person, riot, and disorder. The females were for the most part for loitering for prostitution. Two males had been committed for trial at assizes for a manslaughter, supposed to be connected with a trades union dispute; and 3 for trial at quarter sessions—1 for robbery of money, and 2 for assault. Four females were likewise "for trial" at quarter sessions, 2 of whom were strangers, supposed to be old offenders, committed for larceny; the 2 others were for assaults. One insane woman was in charge, committed for assault, and a boy on remand for identification, supposed to have escaped from a bridewell in the county Antrim.

Photography is not in use in this gaol for the recognition of offenders, strangers from other districts, who occasionally pass into the county Down for the purposes of plunder, hence professional criminals often escape identification, and their antecedents being unknown, they do not receive the more severe punishment which the law directs for old offenders.

As has already been observed, the convicted females in custody were, with three or four exceptions, prostitutes from the large towns of the district. Those women are constantly recommitted for drunkenness, assaults, and disorderly conduct, as well as for loitering for prostitution. Several were very young.

Having reference to the circumstances of this county, which embraces a large manufacturing population and portions of two large towns, Belfast and Newry, I do not consider that the committals show a large amount of crime in the district, they are only such as must be expected in communities so circumstanced; and I have to congratulate the county on the absence of Fenianism and agrarian outrages.

Debtors.

Although females are occasionally committed here for debt, there are no proper quarters in the gaol assigned for their use. One female debtor occupied on the day of my visit one of the wards of the hospital. Three others had previously been in custody in 1868, and 6 in 1867. Altogether 30 debtors of all classes had been in charge in 1868 and 35 in 1867. Male debtors are lodged in one of the sections of the old gaol, which is, in many respects, unsuitable; but it is probable that the law with regard to this class of prisoners will be altered, and imprisonment for debt, under present circumstances, abolished.

Juveniles.

Besides the boy, supposed to have escaped from Antrim Bridewell, but who was afterwards discharged, 2 juveniles were in custody when I visited—1 committed for absconding from the workhouse with clothes belonging to the union, and sentenced to imprisonment for one month, the other, a boy, sentenced to an imprisonment of six months for larceny. Fifteen juveniles were committed to this gaol in 1868, previously to inspection (all males), 8 of whom were for larceny. One boy, twelve years of age, committed for trial at assizes for the murder of a child, was discharged by the Judge, there being no prosecution. Three juveniles, 1 male and 2 females, were sent to reformatories at the expiration of their punishments in the gaol in 1867. During that year 16 male and 4 female juveniles were committed and sentenced to imprisonment—2 (males) for three months, 1 for two months, and one (a female), for one month; the rest for short terms of fourteen days and under.

Lunatics.

I regret to observe that lunatics yet constitute a large proportion of the inmates of this gaol. When I made my inspection in September of 1868, 27 insane persons, committed as dangerous, besides 2, as criminals for assaults, were in custody. No alteration has been made since my visit in 1866 in the treatment of, and accommodation provided for, this class of prisoners. They still reside in the cold and gloomy cells and exercise in the flagged yards of the old prison buildings, and are subjected to the injurious influences which have already been pointed out in former reports of the Inspectors-General. I believe that the insane committed to their charge receive every care from the gaol officials, which circumstances permit, and the medical officer, a gentleman of high professional acquirements, orders them a suitable and sufficient diet, as well as such comforts as he can command, and he is most assiduous in their treatment; but they are, I apprehend, subject to deleterious agencies, over which he has no control, and their low vitality and defective functional powers, render them peculiarly susceptible of such influences. To this I must attribute the great mortality which has appeared amongst them during 1866 and 1867. On the 24th December, 1865, a male lunatic committed suicide in his cell in this prison, and since that period 14 insane prisoners have died of various diseases within the gaol. I believe this mortality is greater than should happen to patients placed under ordinary circumstances.

I have entered into these particulars because, having with the Local Inspector visited the lunatic asylum of the district, I fear that it cannot be fit for occupation for another year, and I am anxious that the insane in the gaol should be removed to some place suited for patients in their condition. Lunatics in asylums and gaols are equally supported out of the rates of the county, and if the insane were removed from the gaol, the lunatic nurse and perhaps some other officers might be dispensed with. In the metropolitan district a building (part of Grangegorman Prison) has been temporarily taken by the Governors of the asylum, into which all the lunatics in the different gaols of that district have been removed until the new additions to the asylum are completed.

When I made my inspection I found the gaol in creditable order and clean, the prison buildings well kept, properly ventilated, and in a sound state; some slight repairs, which were required to the roof of the laundry and at some other points, having been made; the gas and other fittings as well as the bells and appliances in the cells were in good order, and the gaol premises generally in a satisfactory condition. a reservoir outside the prison boundary, whence it flows into the tank, marked D on the plan of the gaol attached to this report, and it is conducted into all the cells of the separate prisons, male and female, and to the different yards and compartments of the gaol. I had reason to fear, when I made my inspection of this gaol in 1866, that the sewerage was not in a satisfactory state. It is expensively constructed, but apparently not on a good principle, and it is connected with a number of cesspools, one of which is, I understand, close to and in front of the Governor's house. I then suggested that the entire line of sewers should be examined by the County Surveyor or some other competent person, and that the defects, if any, should be remedied. I am informed that nothing has since been done, and having regard to the great mortality in the gaol—six deaths of lunatics having occurred in 1866 and six in 1867, besides two previously to my inspection in the present year, as well as the sad affliction which has befallen the family of the Governor, since their residence in the gaol, by the death of two of its members of a disease (scarlatina) which is so frequently engendered by miasma—there is, I consider, reason to fear that some unhealthy influences are in operation, which should be counteracted.

The bedding, blankets, sheets, and rugs, in use in the gaol, are in a good state and sufficient for present requirements. The prison clothing also is sufficient, but some of the clothes worn by the prisoners on the day of my visit required repair, or to be replaced.

There is an excellent laundry belonging to the female prison with drying-room attached, and baths, with hot and cold water, are placed in the reception cells; but no alterations or improvements have been made to remedy defects pointed out in former reports, which it is unnecessary for me now to recapitulate; as, in the present uncertain state of the law, with regard to the management of prisons in this kingdom, I do not suggest that any expense not absolutely necessary or required for the health of the inmates of the gaol be incurred.

Unlock is held in this gaol at 6.30, A.M., in summer, and at 7, A.M., in winter, the prison being locked for the night at 6, P.M., in summer, and 4.30, in winter.

All classes of the inmates, except debtors, lunatics, and the criminals placed over them, those in school, in the kitchen, and in hospital, are subjected to the discipline of the separate system under the Act, 3 & 4 Vict., cap. 44; but I find that the 9th rule of sec. 109 of the Prisons Act (7 Geo. IV. cap. 74), which directs that "all prisoners shall be admitted at proper times in succession to air themselves in the yard or yards for at least two hours in every day, except prisoners under sentence of death and such as shall be riotous or disorderly, or when there may be sufficient cause to apprehend an escape," is not complied with; and I would suggest that the arrangement should be altered to meet this requirement of the Act, which is so peremptory that the Local Inspector is obliged to make a return, on oath, to the Judge at each Assize, stating how far this and the other rules of the 109th sect. of the Act 7 Geo. IV., cap. 74., have been complied with. My attention was called to this matter by one of the prisoners under a sentence of imprisonment for twelve months, who stated, and (it was admitted) correctly, that she was permitted to exercise only for one hour daily in the open air, and not even then unless when the weather was fine, at between 12 and 1 o'clock, P.M. This prisoner is sometimes employed in cleaning the corridors and stairs of prison; but such employment does not comply with the section of the Act, which is obligatory. The cell in which that prisoner was confined at the time of my visit was 8 feet 10 inches long, 6 feet in breadth, and 9 feet 1 inch high in the centre of the arch.

The Deputy Governor has shown me a certificate, given by a former Medical Officer of the gaol, who is since dead, which explains the adoption of the arrangement complained of; but he had not power to dispense with the requirements of the Act, which will, I am informed, be carried out in future.

No escape was made from this gaol or either of the bridewells of the district in 1867-8; but in July, 1868, a convict attempted to break through the wall of his cell, and was obliged to be placed in irons.

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour, disposed of outside the gaol, for the last three years :—

Very litttle industrial employment is carried on in this gaol, the labour of the male prisoners being principally of a punitive character—shot-drill for two hours, daily, in the summer, and working the capstan-mill during the winter season; but the power of the latter is not turned to any useful purpose, as I am informed it would require, from its construction, a force of from thirty to forty men to work it for grinding corn. One male was, on the day of my visit, in his cell at tailor's work, and eight were employed pounding freestone and breaking stones. Two women were in the laundry. The remaining female prisoners were, some in their cells, sewing and sprigging muslin; the others, cleaning the prison and attending lunatics. Male prisoners act as cooks and assist in the bakehouse. No money is paid to prisoners not sentenced to hard labour, as proportion of profits under the 107th Section of the Prisons Act, but occasionally small sums are given under the 111th Section of that Act to enable them to return to their homes after discharge.

The schoolmaster was at the time of my visit under suspension for drunkenness, and I understand that he has since been dismissed. School has hitherto been held in a double cell of the criminal prison, in which the teacher sleeps. In it there are four chairs and a form, but no school furniture. I would suggest that one of the larger cells be fitted-up for a school-room with proper appliances, and a few books, maps, and a black-board be provided.

One prisoner, Kelly, under a sentence of twelve months' imprisonment, complained to me that she has no book given her except the Bible; another prisoner, Downey, also complained of the want of books. On this subject I beg to call the attention of the Board to the 4th sect. of the Act, 3 & 4 Vic., cap. 44, which enacts, "that prisoners, when in strict cellular confinement, shall be furnished with the means of moral and religious instruction, and with suitable books." In most county prisons the Chaplains and the Board of Superintendence arrange what books are suitable for their respective flocks, care being taken that no controversy is introduced; and I have had a conversation with the Presbyterian Chaplain, who is anxious that this should be carried out here. I am informed that the other Chaplains are of a like opinion.

Dietary and Contracts.

1. Dietary for prisoners whose term of imprisonment shall not exceed one week:—Class 1. Males.—Breakfast.—8 oz. mixed Indian and oat meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of newmilk. Dinner.—14 oz. of bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup.

Class 2. Females.—Breakfast—7 oz. of mixed oat and Indian meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of newmilk. Dinner.—12 oz. of bread, and ½ of a pint of vegetable soup.

Class 3. Males and females under 15 years of age.—Breakfast.—5 oz. of mixed oat and Indian meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of newmilk. Dinner.—8 oz. of brown bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup. Supper.—4 oz. of brown bread.

P.S.—No person having offered to supply vegetables, in place of vegetable soup, gruel for five days, and soup (same as given to the lunatics) for two days in the week, has been given to the above classes of prisoners. Vegetable soup now procured.

2. Dietary for prisoners whose term of imprisonment shall exceed one week, for untried prisoners who do not maintain themselves, and for pauper debtors:—Class 1. Males.—Breakfast.—8 oz. of mixed Indian and oat meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of new milk. Dinner.—14 oz. of bread, and 1 pint of new milk. Supper.—6 oz. of bread, and ½ a pint of new milk.

Class 2. Females.—Breakfast.—7 oz. of mixed Indian and oat meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of new milk. Dinner.—12 oz. of bread, and ½ of a pint of new milk. Supper.—5 oz. of bread, and ½ a pint of new milk.

Class 3. Males and females under 15 years.—Breakfast.—5 oz. of mixed Indian and oat meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of new milk. Dinner.—8 oz. of brown bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup. Supper.—5 oz. of bread, and ½ a pint of newmilk.

P.S.—No potatoes have, as yet, been issued. No supply could be obtained. The Board have again advertised for a supply.

Contracts.—Bread, white, per 1lb. loaf, 2½*d.*; ditto, brown, per 1 lb. loaf, 1½*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt., 17*s.* 9*d.*; Indian meal, per cwt., 11*s.* 2*d.*; rice, per cwt., £1; newmilk, per gallon, 10*d.*; buttermilk, per gallon, 3*d.*; salt, per cwt., 1*s.* 6*d.*;

No complaint was made to me on my inspection of the food, which I tasted, and found of good quality. The bread is baked in the gaol. I observe from the reports of the Chaplains that the quality of the food provided for the prisoners is almost always pronounced satisfactory. On one occasion, in 1868, the milk was found of inferior quality. As I understand that gruel is still given to prisoners in this gaol, I beg to call attention to page 2, of Circular, No. 235, of 2nd March, 1868, in which the diet fixed by the Medical Commissioners to be used in all gaols, is laid down, and should not be departed from.

Books and Accounts.

I found the books and registries of the gaol kept with much care and attention. All the superior officers have journals, and the Local Inspector and Governor carefully record any occurrence in the gaol which is considered noteworthy. The Officers' Conduct Book is not kept.

Net cost of gaol, including diet and salaries, for the three preceding years:—

The labouring work in the gardens of the Governor and Deputy Governor is done by prisoners. The washing for those officers, and for the matrons and nurses, is also done by prisoners in the laundry of the gaol.

There are good and roomy hospital buildings in this gaol, but without fixed baths or water-closets; they are, however, seldom occupied by prisoners. A female debtor was the only inmate of the hospital for females on the day of my visit.

If, pending other arrangements, the lunatics who still remain in the gaol were removed to the hospital, I consider that it would be attended with beneficial results. I have already observed on the number of deaths in this gaol during the last few years.

219 male and 88 female individual prisoners were committed to this gaol in 1867, of whom 14 males and 4 females were juveniles. Of these 170 males and 47 females had never before that year been in custody; 49 males and 41 females were previous offenders, some of whom are constantly recommitted; 15 males and 13 females underwent from two to five commitments during the year, and I find from the returns in the Prisons Office, that 49 of the males and 41 of the females have been in custody here—the males 282 times and the females 173 times.

When I made my inspection of this gaol, in July of the present year, I found 14 males and 4 females of all classes in charge. The males were 1 debtor, 2 untried males, 4 under sentence, tried at assizes and quarter sessions, and 7 summarily convicted before magistrates. The 4 females had all been summarily convicted at petty sessions.

The following are the offences and sentences of the male prisoners in custody :—

Offences against Property.—A soldier of the 21st Regiment sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment for stealing wearing apparel. Two males for stealing a pocket handkerchief and a watch, sentenced to six months' imprisonment each, and a man, half idiotic, for making away with clothes from the workhouse, sentenced for three months.

Offences against the Person.—A servant boy, for indecent assault, sentenced to imprisonment for six months, and 3 others for assaults, 1 aged 18, sentenced for three months, and 2 for one month each; 1 of these is 16 years of age, the other 24 years.

Three other males were under sentence—1 for trespassing on a railway, and 2 for leaving service, and insubordination, each sentenced to one month's imprisonment.

The untried males were—1 charged with an attempt at rape, and another with a homicide, which resulted from a drunken quarrel at Lisnaskea.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Fermanagh Gaol.

As I have already observed, all the females in the gaol when I made my inspection, had been summarily convicted; yet one was an old offender, now sentenced by the magistrates at petty sessions to an imprisonment of six months for stealing tobacco. The second was a prostitute who had received a sentence of seven months for an assault; the 2 other female prisoners had been sentenced to imprisonment for one month each, 1 for deserting her children who became a charge on the Poor Law union; the other, a servant of good character, had left her service without notice.

From the preceding tables, it appears that the committal of the man for trial on a charge of murder, already referred to, 2 other committals for rape and 40 for assaults, constitute the entire number of committals for crimes against the person on the criminal calendar of this county in the present year. The offences against property also were few in number and not of a grave character, and I may add that the schedule of commitments for 1867 show a small amount of crime in the district; of the 14 males and 12 females committed for trial by jury at assizes and quarter sessions, during that year, 4 males and 8 females only were offenders who came within the category of felons, and 10 males and 4 females are classed as misdemeanants; 1 male and 1 female were sentenced to penal servitude, and 5 males and 2 females to imprisonment for twelve, and 4 males and 2 females for six months each.

Juveniles.

One juvenile, 13 years of age, was in custody on the day of my visit under a sentence of three months' imprisonment for assault. He is stated to have been neglected by his parents—his father is in America. Another lad, who is, however, past sixteen years of age, was likewise in custody for an assault; 6 male and 1 female juveniles had been committed previously to inspection in 1868.

The female juvenile above referred to, who, it was stated, had been trained by her mother to steal, was sentenced to one month's imprisonment as a punishment, and five years in a reformatory. One of the boys also was sent to a reformatory. Eighteen juveniles, 14 males and 4 females, were committed in 1867, of whom 4 were sent to reformatories; 3 (males) had been tried by jury, the remainder summarily at petty sessions; 2 had been sentenced to imprisonment for two months, and 6 for one month each; the others had received short sentences—2 for absconding from the union workhouse.

I found this gaol at the period of my inspection in July, very clean and orderly. The entrance to the prison has been improved, and flowers planted on it. The buildings are in sound repair, well ventilated, and free from damp, except under the water-tank, and in the hospital. The cells in the male and female prisons have been fitted with bells, and the heating apparatus in the male prison has been overhauled and thoroughly repaired since last inspection. A drying-room has been fitted up with a stove and flue across the apartment, with clothes-horses round it, and three troughs have been stalled in the laundry.

I understand that the sewerage in this gaol is effective.

The stock of prison clothing, bedding, sheets, and blankets is sufficient, and the bedding in use in the cells is of good quality, except that some blankets in the reception cells are thin, and in the female prison I found only one sheet on each bed, in direct contravention of the 12th sec. of the Act 19 & 20 Vic., cap. 68.

The supply of water which is taken partly from two spring wells within the prison bounds and from the lake is abundant, but, as has been observed in former reports of Inspectors-General, the crank-pump used for driving water into the tank on the roof of the male prison has been rendered dangerous to life by the handles, which are undivided, having been stalled, to prevent communication between the prisoners, when at work. Accidents sometimes occur in prisons where the crank by which the prisoners work the pump is continuous and undivided, and partitions, separating the prisoners, have been afterwards put up to prevent them from seeing each other, without at the same time the crank handles having been altered. Under such circumstances the prisoners do not work together, and some are liable to be struck by the crank handles when the others go to work; such an accident has happened during the present summer at Belfast gaol, where a man was killed when working a crank pump similar to that in use here. The handle of the crank in his stall struck him on the stomach; he was lifted over the shaft and pitched on his head on the opposite side, and never spoke afterwards. This is the second accident of the kind which has happened from working the pump in Belfast gaol, and accidents have likewise occurred elsewhere with equally fatal results. I, therefore, beg again to call attention to the necessity for having the suggestions contained in my report on this gaol in 1866 carried out, in order that the prisoners, when at work, may be protected, especially as the alteration can be made at a small cost. The following diagram of the altered crank is taken from my report in 1866.

A A¹, is a framework forming a series of compartments, B B B; D D, is a shaft extending the entire length of the apparatus, and receiving motion from cranks C C C, which motion it transmits to the machine to be driven; each crank, C, has at one end, H, a pall which works opposite a ratchet wheel, G, fixed at the end of short shaft, E E, passing through the framework of the partition, A, of the compartment B, in which the prisoner is placed. The crank, C, is separate, and the pall at its end (which is kept in its place by a spring) drives the ratchet, and so transmits its motion through the shaft, E, and wheels, I J, to the main shaft, D; but should the prisoner in the compartment cease to work, although the action of the machine will not be interrupted, the ratchet travelling over the inactive pall will produce a clattering noise, which, with the increased labour on the remaining prisoners, must at once notify to the warder in charge when any one man stops work. The main shaft has also a registering apparatus which strikes a bell when a certain quantity of work has been performed, so that each relay of prisoners must accomplish an equal and known amount of labour.

The shaft runs at the back; the crank-handles are independent of each other, with a tell-tale rack connected with each; the movement is continuous; and a bell attached gives notice when the specified amount of labour has been accomplished, and the men are to cease work.

Although cellular separation is carried out in this gaol, such separation is illegal, the cells having never been certified under the 4th sec. of the Act 3 & 4 Vic., cap. 44; the cells in the male prison fully meet the requirements of that Act, but those of the female prison are altogether inadequate for such separation. They are straggling, flagged, and not properly heated, and so situated as to render supervision with the limited staff of the prison impossible, besides the upper cells are too small to be certified under the separate system Act. The Royal Commissioners appointed in 1861 for improving the sanitary state of barracks, &c., state, page 166 in their report, that prison cells should not have less than 1,000 feet of contents. Other authorities admit of a minimum size not less than 432 cubic feet of space, but the cells in the female prison here are of even less dimensions than that minimum area, and I wish to refer to page 144, appendix of 45th report of the Inspectors-General for 1866, in which the defects in these cells are fully noted.*

In this report it is also my duty to point out the various defects which I have observed in the gaol, yet I do not recommend any expense for structural alterations to be incurred in the present uncertain state of the law with regard to prisons in this kingdom.

Besides the defects already enumerated:—The accommodation for debtors does not meet the requirements of the Prisons Act; there is but one exercising yard for both classes of male debtors, and no suitable accommodation for females.

The 9th rule of the 109th sec. of the Prisons Act directs that all prisoners shall have free access to the bath and necessary in their respective

* The following is the extract from the report to which I refer:—

"The cells which the female prisoners occupy in the old gaol are flagged and not heated, with the exception of one cell which has a fireplace in it. This fireplace and two stoves are the only means of giving warmth to the inmates of the prison; and on the day of my inspection I found women and their infants occupying these unheated cells, where they remain during the entire twenty-four hours, unless when permitted to warm themselves separately once or twice in the day at the stove, or when they exercise for an hour in the yard. The day-rooms of the prison are, I am informed by the Governor, not used as such.

"Since last inspection of my colleague in April, 1865, an attempt has been made to heat a corridor at the entrance to the female prison, by passing through it an iron flue from a stove in the adjoining apartment, but on both my visits the flue was perfectly cold, the heat going direct from the stove into the chimney. The walls separating the cells from the corridor are two feet in thickness, and no warmth could penetrate even if the corridor were heated, unless through holes in the iron doors of the cells. The Governor now reports that the heating of the pipes in the corridor has been improved. The flue from a second stove in the upper corridor was warm on the day of my visit. There is no attempt to heat the corridor of another row of cells, in one of which is a fireplace.

"To heat and fit up with bells, plates, and the other appliances for separation, the cells in the old gaol now used as a female prison, would be attended with considerable expense, and the upper cells are too small to be certified."

parts of the prison at all reasonable hours, yet there is no bath accessible for males in the body of the prison; the only baths for males being in the hospital, and adjoining the reception cells, marked M on the plan.

The reception cell for females, marked R on the plan, is apart from the quarters for prisoners of that sex. It opens directly into the yard which forms the common passage of the prison to which all the male officers have access. A bell has, however, latterly been fixed from this cell to the hall opposite the matron's apartment, by which the inmate may, if she desires it, alarm the matron during the night; but of course supervision is impossible, and abuses might exist without coming under the notice of superior authority.

The forge against the inner boundary wall in some degree interferes with the security of the gaol.

The apartment used as a chapel does not meet the requirements of the 6th sec. of the Act 7 Geo. IV., cap. 74.

There is but one tell-tale clock, which is kept in the office, and it is not sufficiently protected against tampering.

The officers' quarters, the halls and passages of the gaol are lighted by gas, but not the cells, and the prisoners remain in darkness during the long winter nights.

There is no fumigating apparatus for cleansing the clothes of prisoners when admitted.

Photography is in use in this prison for the purpose of tracing old offenders and professional thieves. The son of the Governor takes excellent likenesses of such prisoners as are suspected to belong to the dangerous classes, and with satisfactory results.

This prison is unlocked at six, A.M., in summer, and at daybreak in winter. The cells are locked for the night at six, P.M., in summer, and at dusk during the short days of winter. One turnkey patrols from nine, P.M., to four, A.M. He is relieved by the next officer in rotation, who remains on duty until unlock in the morning. All the turnkeys and the schoolmaster are employed as night watchmen. The Governor, his Deputy, and the Class Officer attend lock-up. The keys of the cells, intern doors, and of the hospital are held by the Governor from nine, P.M., until unlock, and those of the outer gate and passages are given up at ten o'clock, P.M., when the final rounds are made. The Governor and his Deputy occasionally visit the prison at uncertain hours during the night. No escape was attempted from this gaol in either the past or the present year. A self-registering thermometer is kept in the male prison.

The male prisoners work at the crank-pump, break stones, tease cocoa fibre, and manufacture mats and brushes. When tradesmen are in custody their skill is turned to useful account. I saw some good fenders which had been made by a prisoner in the gaol. The females are employed at washing for the prison, sewing, knitting, and sprigging muslin.

I questioned all the prisoners in custody at the time of my visit, and no complaint was made to me by any. The Chaplains regularly report, in the approved tabular form, on the quality of the provisions supplied for the prisoners, and almost always favorably. I tasted the bread and milk issued on the day of inspection, and found it good.

The prisoners are weighed when received into the gaol, and again on their discharge from custody.

The various books and registries of discipline and finance in use here are in the forms prescribed by the rules of the Queen's Bench, and recommended by the Inspectors-General, and they are kept with much care and attention. Prisoners on reception into the gaol enter their names in a book kept for the purpose. Their writing in this book has led to the identification of handwriting, and so procured convictions of offenders. Besides it shows the improvement the inmates have made in writing during their imprisonment. All the superior officers except the Local Inspector have journals.

The Officers' Conduct Book recommended by the Inspectors-General has been procured, and will, in future, be kept as a record of the efficiency or otherwise of the subordinate officers of the gaol. The night watchman keeps a journal which the Governor countersigns. In it are entered the markings of the tell-tale clock.

As has been observed in former reports of the Inspectors-General, this is one of the gaols in which the Medical Officer receives no salary for his attendance on the prisoners, yet he is very attentive to his duties in it. The hospital building, which is three stories in height, is unnecessarily large. The wards are good and airy, with water-closets at the top of the building. There are six wards besides a bath-room with good bath.

The medicine for the use of the sick prisoners is supplied from the County Infirmary; an excellent system, as fresh medicines are always obtained, and no waste occurs, besides it enables great economy to be exercised. This practice should be more generally adopted in gaols.

Situated on the borders of the lake, this prison is very healthy. There has been no death in it since 1861.

Small accounts are included in one draft drawn in favour of the Governor, who produces receipts at next meeting of the Board. One hundred and sixty-two male and 40 female individual prisoners were committed to this gaol in 1867, of whom 7 (4 males and 3 females) were juveniles, whose ages did not exceed sixteen years; 111 males and 21 females had never previously been in custody; 51 males and 19 females are old offenders, who have already been inmates of this gaol; the males 180 times, and the females 109 times; 15 males and 9 females were committed from two to six times during the year 1867.

The following are the daily average number of prisoners in custody (omitting fractions) for the last six years:—

	M.	F.		M.	F.
1863, ...	37	5	1866, ...	20	3
1864, ...	24	5	1867, ...	18	4
1865, ...	19	2	1868 (7 months), . .	18	4

All the foregoing tables point to the relatively small amount of crime amongst the female population of the county Leitrim, which contains, according to the last Census, 104,744 inhabitants.

The averages in the gaol of females at no period during the last six years exceed 5, and only 13 individuals of that sex were sent for trial by jury for any offence during the past year. As has already been shown the number of females committed to the gaol in 1867 was 40 individuals; the great majority were prostitutes, 9 of whom were re-committed from two to five times during that period. On the day of my visit 17 males and 7 females were in charge, the females were 4 prostitutes committed for loitering for prostitution and disorderly conduct, under sentences of imprisonment of one calendar month each; 1 untried female, charged with infanticide, and 2 females convicted at quarter sessions, and sentenced to an imprisonment of twelve months each—one for concealing a birth, the other convicted with her son of forging a Post Office order.

The males in charge were three for offences against property, the others for assaults, disorderly conduct, having unregistered arms, administering an unlawful oath, and trespass in the pursuit of game; one untried male was also in custody, brother of the female committed for trial on a charge of infanticide—he is accused of complicity with her in that crime. Two of the three male prisoners convicted of offences against property were very young—one, a lad of seventeen years of age, implicated in the forgery on the Post Office, was under sentence of imprisonment for eighteen months; another, nineteen years of age, is a pickpocket, and sentenced to four months' imprisonment; the third offender against property was convicted of stealing a heifer and sentenced to imprisonment for six calendar months; none of the other male prisoners in charge had been sentenced to periods exceeding six months; three, found guilty of assaults, had been so sentenced; the others were for periods of one, two, three, and four months, and one for fourteen days.

Having regard to the facts above enumerated and on review of the general criminal calendar of this county during the last few years, it is satisfactory to observe the small amount of crime which it displays. During the past year 1867 two individuals (1 male and 1 female) received sentences of penal servitude; and 3 (males) were imprisoned for terms of twelve and eighteen months; 15 males and 3 females for six months and 5 males for three months each, the remaining offenders within the county had been sentenced for short periods not exceeding two months.

Debtors.

No debtor was an inmate of the gaol at the time of inspection, but 5 (males) had previously been in custody during 1868; 2 (males) were committed for debt in 1867; 5 males and 2 females in 1866; and 9 males and 2 females in 1865. The separation of classes of debtors is not in this gaol what the law directs, there is only one marshalsea and one exercising-yard for males of both classes, and two rooms with an exercising-yard, formerly occupied by lunatics, are now allotted for the use of female debtors.

Juveniles.

No juvenile was in custody when I visited. Three (males) had previously been in charge, and had, after the expiration of their punishment in the gaol, been sent to reformatories.

No juvenile belonging to this county was tried at assizes or quarter sessions in 1867; but 4 males and 3 females were summarily adjudicated on by magistrates at petty sessions; 1 was under ten years of age; 2 males and 1 female were not convicted; 1 male was sentenced to imprisonment for one month, and 1 for seventeen days, both the females were sentenced to an imprisonment of one week each.

I found this gaol when I made my inspection very clean and orderly, well ventilated, and the buildings in good repair, except that marks of damp from the roof appear on one or two spots, and the woodwork in a few places is unsound; painting also is much required. The main sewers to the Shannon are large and expensively constructed; but no stink traps have been placed at the openings, and in hot weather, or where many prisoners are in a class, the privies have an offensive smell, although frequently flushed.

The stock of bedding, blankets, sheets, and prison clothing is sufficient for the requirements, but there is only a small supply of clothing for females in store.

There is an abundance of water for prison use procurable from the well under the tread-wheel. The water is driven by the power of the mill into a large cistern (marked G on the plan) placed over the machinery, which can be worked by six or seven men on the wheel, which is partitioned. A hand-pump is used for raising the water supply to the gaol, when the number of prisoners sentenced to hard labour is insufficient to work the tread-wheel. A water-cock is provided in each yard to flush the sewerage. The laundry is unpartitioned, and the drying-room is not artificially heated. Covered lavatories are required for the use of the prisoners in wet weather. The only bath besides that in the hospital is in the male prison adjoining the tread-wheel.

The sittings of the chapel are faulty and badly arranged, so that it is difficult to prevent prisoners of different sexes from seeing each other during divine worship. If the altar were moved further back it would remedy in some degree this defect.

Photography has not hitherto been applied to the identification of offenders committed to this gaol.

The gaol is not lighted by gas.

No alteration in the prison buildings, or in the system of management of the gaol, has been made since last inspection. The males are classified according to the Prisons Act, as felons and misdemeanants, which classes are again subdivided into tried and untried. The classification of females must necessarily be imperfect, where the only female officers in the gaol are the matron and nursetender. Since the practice now adopted by Town Commissioners and Magistrates of committing females to gaol for two and three months for loitering for prostitution in the streets of towns, it becomes particularly necessary that such females should not be associated with other prisoners, and I would urge the Board to have this arrangement carried out as far as possible.

The prison locks are reported to be in good order. Unlock is held at 6, A.M., in summer, and at 7, A.M. during the winter months. The cells are locked at 6, P.M., at all seasons of the year. The lockings and unlockings are reported to be carried out under proper supervision. The Governor makes occasional visits to the prison after lock-up at unexpected hours, and he holds the keys in his bed-room during the night. One watchman, who comes on duty at 6, P.M., patrols during the night; but his vigilance is not tested by the use of the only tell-tale clock in the gaol, which is kept in the office of the Local Inspector. There is no patrol in the interior of the prison at night.

No escape was attempted from this gaol in 1867 or up to the time of inspection in 1868.

Punishments for Prison Offences.

It appears from the prison records that no inmate of this gaol was placed under punishment for any prison offence since the year 1866.

The male teacher is also clerk to the Board and keeps the prison books; he is untrained as a teacher; he is an extern officer. The school-room for males is partitioned with separate stalls and desks. One of the turnkeys is stated to act as assistant in teaching the male prisoners; but the school is not in connexion with any educational public body. The matron gives instruction to the female prisoners in a school-room which is not partitioned; it is therefore particularly necessary that the more depraved should not be associated with the less corrupt at school. The approved form of school registry is kept.

Books and Accounts.

The books and registries of discipline and finance in this gaol are well and carefully kept. The different forms prescribed by the rules of the Queen's Bench and recommended by the Inspectors-General are in use. The Governor enters in his journal the different occurrences in the gaol which he considers noteworthy. The Local Inspector, the Chaplains, and the Medical Officers also have journals.

The hospital accommodation in this gaol is ample, the wards are roomy and well-ventilated; but there are no water-closets annexed to the wards; a bath, placed between the wards for males and females, is used by patients of both sexes; and a boiler has been put up to heat the water when a hot bath is required. The sanitary state of the prison is satisfactory. Two males and one female were in hospital on the day of my visit.

The Board meets monthly for the discharge of business, when accounts are examined and settled by a draft in the aggregate, drawn in favour of the Local Inspector, who pays each creditor, and produces vouchers at the ensuing meeting. The accounts are audited by members of the Board of Superintendence previously to each assizes and are printed in full, they are again examined by the Finance Committee of the Grand Jury before the presentments are finally passed. All the officers of the gaol receive their salaries monthly except the Medical Officers, who are paid half-yearly at the assizes. The turnkeys are furnished with a neat uniform; but the nursetender is the only officer in the gaol who receives food rations.

Two hundred and ninety-four male and 133 female individuals were committed to this gaol in 1867, of whom 7 males and 2 females were lunatics committed as dangerous, and 22 males and 5 females were juveniles. Seventeen males and 33 females were recommitted from two to eight times during the year, the total number of committals of all classes, exclusive of debtors, being 326 of males and 253 of females. Two hundred and fifteen males and 64 females never had previously been inmates of a gaol; and 85 males and 80 females had, prior to the end of 1867, undergone more than one commitment; some of them are constantly recurrent to the gaol. Of these 2 females and 1 male are juveniles.

On the day of my inspection, in July, 1868, 39 male and 5 female prisoners of all classes were in custody, of whom 3 males and 1 female were under arrest for debt. Thirty-four males and 2 females had been convicted of criminal offences, and 4 males and 2 females were on remand or for trial. NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Londonderry Gaol.

The 4 females in custody were street prostitutes—3 charged with larceny, 2 untried, the third convicted of stealing a watch, and sentenced to imprisonment for six months. The other female in charge had been sentenced to imprisonment for seven days for drunkenness.

The females committed to this gaol are, with few exceptions, the prostitutes belonging to the towns of the district, and their frequent recommittals swell the numbers in the criminal returns of prisoners of that sex.

The following are the crimes and sentences of the male prisoners in charge on the day of inspection:—

Length of Sentence.	2 Years.	18 Months.	12 Months.	6 Months.	3 Months.	Short periods.	Total.
For crimes against property, larceny, and detaining linen yarn, . . .	1	1	1	5	4	3	15

Sailors deserting ship, drunkenness, disorderly conduct, vagrancy, gambling, &c., . . .	–	–	–	–	1	8	9
Total, . . .	1	2	3	8	6	13	33

Several of these are old offenders—brothel-keepers, receivers of stolen goods, and professional pickpockets—on whom sentences of imprisonment for short periods in county gaols have not sufficient deterrent influence, as on their discharge from prison they almost invariably return to their former mode of life.

I believe that the public can be best protected from persons of this class by the infliction of long sentences of penal servitude; but even their removal to a central depot at a distance from their associates would, if carried out, as proposed in the bill introduced last session into Parliament, have a salutary and deterrent effect.

Juveniles.

No prisoner in charge on the day of my visit belonged to the class of juveniles, although 8 were of ages under twenty years. During the six and a half months which preceded my visit 20 juveniles (all males) had been committed; 2 were twice committed during that period. Three of the ages of eight, nine, and thirteen years, had been sentenced to be whipped in the gaol for larcenies by order of the magistrates. Two others had been sent to reformatories after the expiration of their punishment in the gaol. One of these had lost one parent; the father of the other is a sweep, who is frequently recommitted to the gaol for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Altogether 10 juveniles had been convicted of larceny. The remainder were committed for absconding from the workhouse, malicious injury, gambling in the streets, and rescue.

In 1867 22 male and 5 female juveniles were committed. Of these 1 male and 3 females were under ten years of age. One male and 1 female was twice committed; 4 males were committed as vagrants, and sentenced to imprisonments of one month each. Three males had been tried by jury at assizes or quarter sessions; the rest summarily by magistrates at petty sessions, or under the Towns Improvement Act. One male had been sentenced to imprisonment for six, and 1 for three months. The sentences of the others were for periods of one month and under.

None of the juveniles convicted in 1867 were sent to reformatories at the expiration of their punishment in the gaol.

Debtors.

Twenty-eight male and 2 female debtors were committed to the gaol in 1867, and 16 males previously to inspection in 1868.

I found in occupation of the marshalsea of the gaol, at the time of my visit, 3 males and 1 female—the female and 1 male committed from the Court of Chancery for contempt. Of these debtors three are supported at the cost of the ratès.

In my report on this gaol in 1866, I called attention to the great cost entailed on the rates of this county by the incarceration of pauper debtors. As in this instance, I there pointed out that one man so committed for contempt of the Court of Chancery on the 2nd December, 1864,* and another in August, 1865, as paupers, had already cost the ratepayers of the county the sum of £75. Since that period these men have been supported in the prison at a further cost to the county; and the two prisoners now in custody remain a permanent burden on the taxpayers of the county for some breach of rules of Chancery, which, as far as I could ascertain, they do not themselves understand. I believe that the whole system of imprisonment for debt and for contempts require revision, as I find constant cases of hardship in gaols from the working of the present system.

I found the prison when I made my inspection in a satisfactory condition of order, cleanliness, and discipline; the buildings in sound repair, with the exception of defects in the woodwork, which can easily be remedied when a prisoner who understands carpentry is an inmate of the gaol. Since last inspection the drop in front of the prison towards the street has been removed. The front of the gaol has been entirely newly faced at an expense of £177 6s. 5d., and the walls at the back portion have been rough-cast and pointed.

* Since this report was written, the case here referred to having come under the cognizance of the Lord Chancellor (O'Hagan) on his assumption of the seals of office, the matter was at once inquired into, and a circular directed to issue to ascertain what other prisoners were so circumstanced in the different gaols of the country.

The ventilation is good, and the supply of bedding and clothing for the prisoners sufficient for the requirements, with a quantity of new clothing for males on hands.

The Local Inspector explained to me his suggestions to the Board of Superintendence for the security of the gaol, and Mr. Williamson's report thereon. I quite agree with these gentlemen that what they propose would much increase the security of the prison, but I could not recommend that so large an expenditure be incurred, pending legislation, and the present very uncertain state of prison arrangements in this kingdom. I should much prefer that all prisoners of political importance or grave offenders, whose safe keeping would be a matter of difficulty, should be transferred to Dublin, and placed in one gaol, as in Scotland, under the immediate control of the Government, where they would be under proper supervision, and the building could be rendered so secure as to prevent an escape. The Local Inspector, in his report, states:—"I think it right to call attention to the fact that the outer wall of this prison is, in its entire extent, approachable by any person wishing to injure it, and also extremely insecure on the north and north-east sides by reason of sheds and walls placed against the outer wall. From the middle of the Governor's garden, up to and inclusive of the city police office, there are erections run up against the wall so as to afford easy access from the outside to the top of it;" and he suggests "that some means should be adopted to make the prison more secure."

In order to carry out this suggestion, it was proposed that a piece of ground, twenty feet wide, be purchased on the north-east side of the gaol, extending from Bishop-street to Bennett-street, so as to insulate the present building, and surrounded by an outer wall, 30 feet high, so placed as to leave a small space belonging to the gaol outside the wall, on which no building would be erected. Mr. Williamson calculated that the purchase of the ground would cost about £1,000, and the building of walls, &c., about £1,250 more.

There is an abundant supply of water to the prison from a well, 89 feet deep, in No. 10 yard, in the prison grounds, from which the water is pumped into the general cistern, marked "O" on the ground plan of the gaol; which is also supplied from the town waterworks; and from that cistern water goes by its own pressure to every part of the gaol, except to the water-closets in the female prison, which are supplied directly from the town reservoir. A rent of £30 a year is paid to the Corporation for the water, and the spring well in the gaol insures an unfailing supply, should the water from the town be deficient.

There is an excellent laundry, divided into three stalls, and a small drying-room, of three horses, which is quite sufficient for the establishment, and is economically heated. There is also a good wringing machine, which does not injure the clothes. The steam from the laundry is brought to the kitchen, and is used for cooking the food for the prisoners in the female prison, from which so much as is required for the male prison is removed to the small room marked "S" on the plan, from which it is afterwards taken into the prison for males. The reception-rooms for females have hot and cold baths. Locks of a superior description are in use in the male prison.

The school-room is partitioned, and is one of the best in any county gaol in the kingdom.

The faulty arrangement of the sittings in the chapel, referred to in former reports of Inspectors-General, still remains unaltered; and the accommodation for female debtors has not been improved since my visit in 1866.

The prison cells are unlocked at six o'clock, A.M., and locked for the night at the same hour, P.M., during all seasons of the year. Each officer locks the cells of his respective class in the presence of the Governor, who counts the prisoners, and also attends the second rounds, to satisfy himself of the presence of each occupant in his cell by the insertion of a lantern through the trap. He again visits at ten o'clock, P.M., when the keys of the prison are deposited in an iron safe in his bed-room until morning. Occasionally he tests by personal inspection, at late and uncertain hours, the vigilance of the watch. Gas is kept lighted in the criminal cells for half an hour after lock-up. Three turnkeys patrol from ten, P.M., until six, A.M., next morning, inside and outside the prison. The accuracy of their rounds is marked by two tell-tale clocks, which are pegged from the outside to prevent tampering. The markings of the clocks are entered in the State of Lockings Book each day.

Photography is here turned to good account, consequently few old offenders escape detection, and several grave criminals have been brought to justice, traced through photographs taken in this gaol.

No escape was attempted from this gaol in 1867 or 1868; but 1 male effected his escape from Coleraine Bridewell in May of 1867; he was, however, retaken.

An officer on watch duty has charge of the separate prison for males during the night. He is locked within the prison to patrol through the passages and corridors, and has a key of the gates in the corridors; but not of the outside door of the prison or of the cells. There is also an alarm-bell under his control by which he can communicate with the night guard on duty outside. This practice should be more generally adopted, as it is of importance that a watchman should be within every separate prison at night; a prisoner might become ill, or some other casualty happen.

The large receipts from the industrial employment of the prisoners in this gaol show that their labour is not wasted, but is turned to useful account to lighten the burden on the ratepayers. Water-brushes for horses' feet, mats of a very superior description, which command the highest price in the market, and other remunerative works are carried on. Prisoners sentenced to hard labour work at stone-breaking, and the weaving of heavy mats in large mat looms.

The females are employed in the cooking of the food for prisoners, both male and female, in the laundry, and at knitting and sewing.

The skill of artisans, when in custody, is turned to the best account.

The food provided for the prisoners on the day of my visit, which I tasted, was of good quality; and I observe from the reports of the Chaplains, which are in the tabular form recommended for their use, that the provisions supplied to the gaol almost always meet their approval; yet when I questioned the prisoners in custody, one complained of the food which he received, but his statement was unsupported by proof. No other complaint was made to me by any of the inmates of the gaol.

Books and Accounts.

The various registries of discipline, statistics, and finance appear here to be kept with much care and attention. The Local Inspector, who devotes much time to the management of the gaol, looks particularly after this branch of his duties. The issue of provisions and of stores are now checked daily by the Governor, and the Local Inspector tests the accuracy of all accounts monthly before being submitted to the Board for payment. His journal and that of the Governor are very fully kept. The Chaplains and Medical Officer also have journals. A deputation of the Grand Jury at each assizes inspect the gaol and report.

All the books recommended by the rules of the Queen's Bench and the Inspectors-General are in use, with the exception of the Work Ledger and Daily Employment Book.

The committals of females for drunkenness were, I understand, solely of prostitutes in the town.

One hundred and eighty-five individual males and 48 females were committed to this gaol during the course of 1867, of whom 10 males and 2 females were juveniles; 12 males and 8 females were re-committed during this year, some frequently. Fifty males and 17 females had previously been in custody; 1 male and 3 females upwards of 21 times; and from returns in the Prisons Office, it appears that these 50 males and 17 females have been inmates of the gaol, the males 269 times and the females 196 times.

The small amount of crime amongst the female population of the county of Longford is a subject of congratulation. Out of a population of 71,694 individuals of both sexes, only 48 females were committed to prison charged with any offence within this county during the past year, 1867. The number of committals amounted to 68, the same parties having been re-committed again and again for loitering for prostitution in the streets of the town. I find here, as in other parts of the kingdom, the prisons for females are in a great measure occupied by women of this class, who, the hour they are discharged from gaol, return to their former haunts and mode of life, having no other means of support. On the day of my visit six of the eight females in custody were street prostitutes, committed for loitering or quarrelling in the streets of Longford; one of these, now 31 years of age, has been, I am informed, constantly re-committed to this gaol for like offences since she was 14 years of age. The two females who did not belong to that class were, one, a woman supposed to have been accessory to a murder committed in 1867, but ordered to be discharged on bail; the other a country girl, who had a quarrel with her brother, who is also in custody. She is under sentence of imprisonment for three months.

Thirty male criminal prisoners were in custody, two of whom were on remand, one charged with larceny, the other with stealing a heifer. The other male inmates of the gaol, with the exception of three convicted of larceny, had been sentenced to imprisonment for terms varying from one to nine months each for assaults, drunkenness, riot, and obstructing the police in the discharge of their duty.

The three men under convictions for larceny are habitual thieves, two are constant inmates of the gaol, recommitted for like offences, each have been sentenced to imprisonment for 12 months; the other male, also convicted of larceny, although stated to be an old offender, has only been sentenced for one month.

The statistical tables of committals and offences within this county do not show a large amount of crime in the district during the past year, 1867. Two males and three females were sentenced to penal servitude, and the two males now in custody to be imprisoned for twelve months. Nine males and three females were sentenced for six months, and two males and eight females for three months each. The other sentences in 1867 were for short periods of from two months to 24 hours.

Juveniles.

No juvenile of 16 years and under was an inmate of the gaol at the time of my visit, although several of the prisoners in custody under sentences for riot were of the ages of 16½, 17, and 18 years. Ten juveniles (all males) had been committed previously to inspection in 1868, three were for workhouse offences and absconding from the union; the others, with one exception, were for leaving service, riot, and assaults. The only juvenile convicted of larceny was a boy of 9 years of age, who was employed by his father to commit petty thefts; he was sentenced to imprisonment for 14 days, and to be sent to a reformatory for five years at the end of his punishment in the gaol.

Ten males and two females were committed in 1867, two (males) were twice committed during the year; one male was sentenced for six and one for three months; the rest for 14 days or shorter periods. One male was sentenced to be transmitted to a reformatory after his punishment of imprisonment in this prison.

Few persons arrested for debt are lodged in this gaol, three only were in custody previously to my inspection in 1868; five were committed in 1867, and three in 1866. No female debtor has been an inmate of it since the year 1862, when two were in charge.

No offender against the revenue laws has been committed to this gaol for many years.

As there are no bridewells in this county, all committals within the county are included in the preceding returns.

I found this gaol, when I inspected it, in a very creditable condition of order and cleanliness, the buildings well ventilated and for the most part in sound repair, sufficiently supplied with good bedding, blankets, sheets, pillows, and prison clothing, to meet the requirements of the establishment, besides some were in store, and at the time of my visit a tailor belonging to the town was engaged in making up new clothing for the prisoners. There is an abundant supply of water in this gaol, taken from the well-hole marked Z on the ground plan, and raised by the power of the tread-wheel into the large tank over it, whence it is distributed to the different yards and sections of the establishment. I observe that this tank is contaminated by a quantity of duck-weed, which adheres to the sides, and propagates with great rapidity, rendering the water unwholesome for drinking purposes. The tank should be thoroughly cleaned and steps taken to prevent the nuisance.

There is a good water-closet lately put up in the tread-wheel yard, but the privies in the different sections of the prison are not satisfactory, and as no stink-traps have been placed at the mouth of the sewers, they are often offensive. On the day of my visit the privies in the female prison and in one section of the males, in which 13 prisoners were confined, had a most disagreeable smell, notwithstanding that the sewers are stated to be flushed by buckets several times in the day. The main sewer from the privies in the sections runs through the yards within about 40 feet of the pump-hole, from which the entire supply of water for the gaol is obtained, and care should be taken that no filth is permitted to accumulate in the sewer, which can only now be flushed by pouring buckets of water through it. I would suggest that an arrangement be made to have it flushed by a pipe direct from the tank.

Each prison cell is furnished with a delft bason, but there is no water in the cells, and the basons must be brought down to the day-rooms for use, and as there is danger of their being broken, they are seldom used, the prisoners preferring to wash themselves in buckets in the yards. I consider that cheap lavatories under cover should be provided.*

There are excellent baths in both male and female prisons, supplied with hot and cold water, and every facility is given to have the 9th rule of the 109th section of the Prisons Act enforced—a requirement often neglected in the Irish prisons. The tread-wheel is partitioned, and a shed has been erected to protect the warder on duty, when in charge of the prisoners who work it.

New solitary cells have been fitted up on the upper stories of the prison, those on the ground floor were found to be damp and unwholesome. The laundry is imperfect, and the drying-room has merely a stove for drying the clothes, but it is stated to answer the purpose intended. The warders' rooms have been improved, and new grates put up. Gas has not been introduced into the cells or corridors of the prison, but the exterior lamps, the guard-room, school-room, and the Governor's house, are lighted by it. The price charged is 7s. 6d. per 1,000 cubic feet.

* Since my inspection three new lavatories have been put up in the yards of classes 8, 9, and 10, and two others are in course of erection. The lavatories are stalled, and have basons, towels, soap, combs, &c.

Some good locks, of Chubb's make, are in use, the keys of which remain always with the Governor; an iron chest has been provided for the keys of the prison, and, as a further security, the following regulations have been adopted by the Board of Superintendence:—

"I. The Governor or Deputy-Governor shall be present at the locking of each prisoner at lock-up, and shall test the lock of each cell after it has been secured by the person in charge of the class, and shall take up the key thereof immediately the locking of each class has been completed.

"II. The Governor or Deputy-Governor shall visit each prisoner again between 9 and 10 P.M., accompanied by the night-guard, or matron when visiting the females, and shall re-examine the locks, bolts, and bars, and enter the state of the same in his journal each night.

"III. All the keys of the prison, the pass-keys of the officers excepted, shall be in the Governor's possession when the final round has been completed.

"IV. The Governor and Deputy-Governor shall each make a circuit of the prison once at least in each week, between 10 P.M., and 6 A.M., to test the vigilance of the night-watch.

"V. The outer case of each tell-tale clock shall be secured with Chubb's patent lock.

"VI. The keys of the prison shall be kept by the Governor in his bed-room, in an iron chest to be purchased for that purpose.

"VII. An additional lock shall be placed on each door leading into the female prison from the yards, and back-doors shall be double locked by the Governor and Matron at the final round, and an alarm bell shall be provided for the Matron.

"VIII. When any lock requires to be repaired, it is to be sent to the manufacturer."

The males are classified according to the 7th section of the Prisons Act, viz., felons and misdemeanants, each subdivided into the tried and untried, with a further classification of those who are old offenders, and such prisoners as have not been previously in custody; but experience proves that all such attempts at classification are futile, and are seldom carried out in practice; indeed the only true system for prisoners is perfect separation of each individual. The male prisoners here sleep singly, and during the summer months take their meals in their cells.

Cellular separation is carried out for females in 16 cells, heated and fitted up with bells and appliances for the purpose, but the cells are scattered, and not under proper supervision, owing to the faulty construction of the building. Unlock is held at 6.30 A.M. in summer and 7 A.M. in winter. The turnkeys parade at 10 A.M., when the books are examined. The lockings are held at 6 P.M., in both summer and winter.

The turnkeys keep watch in rotation at night, and their vigilance is tested by two tell-tale clocks.

No escape from this gaol was attempted in 1867 or 1868.

One prisoner was punished six times during the year. This man was most insubordinate and outrageous. He afterwards, I am informed, became insane. Prisoners of this class are very difficult to manage, and require most judicious treatment. Two other prisoners were twice under punishment—one a female.

The record of punishments was duly submitted to the Board at its meetings for approval.

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour disposed of outside the gaol, for the last three years:—

1865, . £9 9*s.* 4*d.* | 1866, . £3 17*s.* 0*d.* | 1867, . £4 17*s.* 2½*d.*

The Governor is anxious to promote industrial employment to lighten the expenses of the prison, which have been very heavy during the last two years. I saw good clogs made in the gaol for the use of the prisoners, at a cost for materials of 2*s.* 8*d.* each; some mats also are manufactured, but the profits derived from the labour of the prisoners has hitherfo been very trifling.

The following report on industrial works has been forwarded to the Prisons Office:—

"Since 1st January to date of inspection, I have had many useful works done by prisoners who understand trades, viz., carpenter, 1; shoemakers, 3; plasterers, 4; blacksmiths, 3; tinsmiths, 2; and tailors, 2. Having a prisoner who understands mat-making, I have had him to teach four other prisoners; the work is progressing most satisfactorily, and I hope to manufacture a large stock of cocoa fibre that was on hands; by this, and oakum picking, which I am also briskly keeping going, I expect to realize a fair amount of profit for the gaol."

School was suspended at the time of my visit, in consequence of the illness of the teacher. All the Chaplains visit the school and enter their observations in the book kept for the purpose. Reading, writing, arithmetic, and geography are taught. The male teacher, who is also clerk in the office, is untrained, but he formerly taught in a National school. The females receive instruction from the matron.

The schools are not inspected by or in connexion with any public educational body. There is a good supply of books in the school. The approved forms are in use.

Class 1 (Males).—Breakfast—8 oz. meal in stirabout and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. bread and 1 pint of vegetable soup.

Class 2 (Females).—Breakfast—7 oz. meal in stirabout and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—12 oz. bread and ½ pint vegetable soup.

Class 3 (Males and Females under 15 years).—Breakfast—5 oz. meal in stirabout and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—8 oz. bread and one pint vegetable soup. Supper—4 oz. bread.

II.—Dietary for Prisoners whose term of Imprisonment shall exceed One Week, for Untried Prisoners who do not maintain themselves, and for Pauper Debtors.

Class 1 (Males).—Breakfast—8 oz. meal in stirabout and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. bread and 1 pint new milk. Supper—6 oz. bread and ½ pint new milk.

Class 2 (Females).—Breakfast—7 oz. meal in stirabout and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—12 oz. bread and ½ pint of milk. Supper—5 oz. bread and ½ pint new milk.

Class 3 (Males and females under 15 years).—Breakfast—5 oz. meal and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—8 oz. bread and 1 pint vegetable soup. Supper—5 oz. bread and ½ pint new milk.

Potatoes are to be substituted for bread at dinner on three days in the week, in the following proportions:—Class 1, 3 lbs.; Class 2, 2½ lbs.; Class 3, 2½ lbs.

Roman Catholic Prisoners, on the first and last Wednesdays in Lent, and on Good Friday, are to receive, in place of milk, 2 oz. molasses at breakfast, vegetable soup at dinner, and tea without milk at supper on those days.

Contracts.—Bread, white, per 4-lb. loaf, 8*d.*; brown, per 4-lb. loaf, 7*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt., 17*s.* 4*d.*; Indian meal, per cwt., 11*s.* 4*d.*; potatoes per cwt., market price; meat, per lb., 7*d.*; new milk, per gallon, 7½*d.*; salt, per cwt., 4*s.*; coal, per ton, £1 3*s.*; turf, per 100 boxes, £4 15*s.*; straw, per cwt., 1*s.* 6*d.*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 7*s.* 6*d.*; candles, per lb., 5½*d.*; soap, per cwt., £1 2*s.*

1865, . 2·43*d.* | 1866, . 2·43*d.* | 1867, . 3·22*d.*

Since the present dietary table has been introduced no extra diet has been ordered for prisoners, except to patients in hospital. I tasted the food provided for the use of the inmates on the day of inspection and found it of good quality. The Chaplains, also, who make their observations in the tabular form recommended for their use, generally report favourably of the quality of the provisions supplied; on a few occasions they have taken exceptions to the milk as being "poor and watery," and once or twice to the stirabout as being "too thin." The inspection of provisions by the Chaplains is made by each in rotation on alternate weeks, which they find more convenient, and which is in accordance with the provisions of the 69th section of the Prisons Act.

I questioned all the prisoners in custody on the day of my visit, and no complaint was made to me by any.

Books and Accounts.

All the superior officers have journals; that of the Governor is kept with much care, and in it he fully enters all occurrences in the gaol, which he considers worthy of note. Such as are specially for the consideration of the Board of Superintendence are marked in red ink in order that they should not be overlooked. He also marks in red ink the record of extra visits which he makes to the prison after lock up. The Local Inspector records in his journal such matters as come specially within his department.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Longford Gaol.

I observe in the journal of the Roman Catholic Chaplain an entry:—"I have made several visits to the prisoners and the prison without having made any entry of such visits on the Extern Officers' Gate-book. This has occurred sometimes from forgetfulness, at other times from the fact that I did not believe it necessary or important to make such entries, as I am but a short time discharging the duties of gaol Chaplain.—July 3rd, 1868."

The various registries of discipline and finance are here well and carefully kept, and the Governor deserves credit for his attention to this department. The markings of the tell-tale clock by the night patrol are regularly entered in "The State of the Prison at Lockings Book," and proper checks, which were necessary, have been introduced at the gate.

Net cost of gaol, including diet and salaries for the three preceding years:—

1865, . £1,388 8*s.* 10½*d.* | 1866, . £1,439 14*s.* 6*d.* | 1867, . £1,306 6*s.* 1½*d.*

Average cost of each prisoner per annum for the last three years:—

On the day of my inspection, in August, 1868, 39 male and 8 female prisoners, of all classes, were inmates of this gaol, 5 of whom were committed for drunkenness and 3 were debtors. Two females and 1 male were "on remand" and "for trial," and 1 male for a breach of the Revenue Laws. On analysing the offences and period of sentence of the convicted prisoners in custody on that day, I find as follows :—

Two females were also in custody, charged—one with concealing a birth, the other with aiding same.

The schedule of committals of prisoners during the years 1866-7-8 show that crimes against the person in this county are, with a few exceptions, confined to assaults of an ordinary description. In 1867 I find one committal for manslaughter, one for rape, and one for infanticide; but none in either 1866 or 1868. Crimes against property also appear not to have been of a grave character unless in the following instances: three committals in 1867 were for housebreaking, 3 for robbery, and 3 for cattle-stealing. In 1868 one committal was for cattle-stealing and one for robbery; and in 1866 one for robbery.

Female crime in the county Louth is, for the most part, confined to the prostitutes who inhabit the neighbourhood of the Military Barracks at Dundalk. These women are constantly recurrent to the gaol, charged with disorderly conduct, drunkenness, larcenies, and other offences.

Juveniles.

No juvenile under 16 years was an inmate of this gaol on either of the occasions when I made my inspections in 1868, but one boy, J. H., who is stated to be now past 16 years of age, was in charge under a sentence of two months' imprisonment with hard labour, having been convicted before the magistrates at Dundalk Petty Sessions of larceny. He is, I am informed, of the worst character, and is now under sentence for his second offence in the present year, having been previously convicted of stealing lead, with two other boys, whom, it is stated, he incited to the crime, and for which offence he was sentenced to imprisonment for one month. There is reason to fear that this lad will continue in the criminal courses which he has adopted, and it is to be regretted that he was not sent to a reformatory during the early period of his career and before he had passed the age when eligible for such institutions. Fifteen juveniles (14 males and 1 female) were committed during the eight months anterior to my visit; none were sent to reformatories. There are four convictions recorded against one boy, K., in 1868, yet he is under 14 years of age.

County of Louth Gaol.

I do not consider that a gaol is a fit place, except as a punishment, for juveniles who have entered into a career of crime; and it was for such that reformatory schools were established by the Legislature under the Act 21 and 22 Vic., cap. 103.

Eighteen male and two female juveniles were committed to this gaol in 1867; one, a male, was twice committed. Three had lost one, and two both parents; all belonged to and were chargeable on the county Louth.

Lunatics.

The Act 30 and 31 Vic., cap. 118, of last session, enacts under section 10 that:—"From and after the 1st of January, 1868, whenever any person shall be brought before two justices of any county, and it shall be proved to their satisfaction that such person was discovered and apprehended under circumstances denoting a derangement of mind and a purpose of committing some crime for which, if committed, he would be liable to be indicted, it shall be lawful for such justices (calling in the assistance of the medical officer of the dispensary district) to direct, by warrant under their hands and seals, that such person shall be taken to the lunatic asylum established for the county in which he has been apprehended." And the 11th section directs that "when it shall be duly certified by the resident medical superintendent or visiting physician of a district asylum that any person so removed has become of sound mind or has ceased to be dangerous, such person may lawfully be discharged from the asylum without the order of the Lord Lieutenant, as in the case of other lunatic poor." It would appear from the provisions of this Act that sufficient facilities are afforded for the removal of lunatics to district asylums; yet I find that persons unquestionably insane are still occasionally remanded to the gaol charged with assaults, because it has been sometimes found difficult to procure the attendance of a second magistrate, to inquire into the circumstances of the case.

It is unnecessary to observe how much the practice to which I refer interferes with the discipline of a strictly cellular prison, and besides, being injurious to the patient, it is attended with an unnecessary expense to the ratepayers, who equally pay out of the rates for gaols and lunatic asylums. In consequence of the insane being occasionally sent to this prison, the Board of Superintendence very properly have continued the services on the staff of the gaol of a nurse for lunatics, at a salary of £18 a year, with rations; notwithstanding that there is sufficient accommodation in the asylum of the district to receive all lunatics that may be committed to it.

It has been suggested by some of the leading magistrates of this county, that if the Act 30 & 31 Vict., cap. 118, were amended and powers given to one justice to commit to an asylum, it would get rid of the difficulties which are experienced in carrying the Act into effect; and I believe, that as the 11th section empowers the discharge of the person committed as insane on the certificate of the resident medical superintendent, or visiting physician of the asylum, the alteration suggested would be beneficial.

When I visited this gaol on the 24th of August, I learned with regret the unexpected death of the Governor on the day previous to my visit. I again inspected on the 4th of September following, and on both occasions I found the gaol in a satisfactory condition of cleanliness, order, and discipline. I questioned all the prisoners in custody and found no cause of complaint. The bedding and prison clothing were sufficient for the requirements of the establishment, and some were in store. The buildings were in sound repair, except where marks of damp showed on some parts of the walls and roof. The walls of the hospital still exhibit an appearance of damp, but I am informed by the county surveyor that the process which he has adopted to keep it out will be effective, and after it has been tested during the next winter, if successful, it will be applied to the walls of such other parts of the buildings as require to be staunched. The outer gates require repair, and are not secure; bars should be placed across on the inside to strengthen them. The water-closets in the cells are not in a satisfactory condition, there are leakages from the joints and cocks which should be remedied. This defect is, I conceive, in part attributable to the system practised in this gaol of not having a continuous contract for the plumbers' work of the establishment extending over a certain number of years, as is the custom in the gaol at Armagh and elsewhere. In Armagh gaol the contract for keeping in repair the entire plumbers' work of the prison, including the gutters of the roof, the water-closets, the pumps, spouting, gas fittings, cooking apparatus, and like works in the gaol is £18 yearly, and for that sum new cocks, basins, and other fittings are substituted for such as require to be replaced. I would suggest that a like course be adopted in this gaol, as conducive to economy and the proper condition of the cells, which now are sometimes untidy from the leakage of the water-cocks and joints.

There is an abundant supply of water to the gaol from two well-holes, united by blasting of the rock between them. Water is raised from them into a large tank by the power of a crank pump, which is worked by the prisoners, but on a most faulty principle, and which is dangerous to life, as accidents have happened from working a similar crank in other prisons. Within the last six weeks a life has been lost in Belfast gaol of a prisoner at the crank pump. This is the second death in that gaol under such circumstances. In Mountjoy Prison, also, two prisoners lost their lives while working such a crank, after which it was discontinued. I wish, therefore, to call the special attention of the Board to the necessity of having all danger prevented. I repeat here, in the hope that the matter may now be attended to, a plan of a perfectly safe crank, of which I gave a diagram in my report on this prison for 1866.

Diagram of Crank.

short shaft, E E, passing through the framework of the partition, A, of the compartment B, in which the prisoner is placed. The crank, C, is separate, and the pall at its end (which is kept in its place by a spring) drives the ratchet, and so transmits its motion through the shaft, E, and wheels. I J, to the main shaft, D; but should the prisoner in the compartment cease to work, although the action of the machine will not be interrupted, the ratchet travelling over the inactive pall will produce a clattering noise, which, with the increased labour on the remaining prisoners, must at once notify to the warder in charge when any one man stops work. The main shaft has also a registering apparatus which strikes a bell when a certain quantity of work has been performed, so that each relay of prisoners must accomplish an equal and known amount of labour.

The shaft runs at the back; the crank-handles are independent of each other, with a tell-tale rack connected with each; the movement is continuous; and a bell attached gives notice when the specified amount of labour has been accomplished, and the men are to cease work.

There is a good laundry in connexion with the female prison, but the drying-room has no heating apparatus beyond an ordinary fireplace; ropes are hung across the room on which the clothes are placed. The prisoners' clothing are here disinfected by means of hot steam. This is an excellent arrangement, which should be adopted elsewhere. When a prisoner on admission is suspected to bear the infection of disease, his clothes are by this means thoroughly freed from the poison which they may contain. It is now ascertained that such specific poisons, when exposed to the purifying action of boiling water or steam, lose their vitality, and any dangerous properties which they may possess.

The sewerage in this gaol is not satisfactory, and occasionally an offensive smell is observed. There is an abundant fall from the site of the prison, which is on the highest ground in the town, but the sewers of the borough do not reach it, and those from the prison are discharged into a large cess-pool in front of the building, from which a drain flows into the demesne on the opposite side of the road. I believe that the faults could be remedied by the adoption of the process in use at the Hibernian School, Phœnix Park, in many lunatic asylums, and in other public institutions; but perhaps as there is no land attached to this prison, the cheapest and most effectual plan would be, to conduct earthen pipes from the prison to the sewerage of the town. Another plan has been suggested by members of the Board, and will now be tested. I refer to Moule's earth closets; but I am not satisfied that they are suitable for a gaol circumstanced as this is, although perhaps useful in some localities.

This gaol is, in many respects, well suited for discipline, yet it has some defects which have been enumerated in former reports of Inspectors'-General. One, the greatest, is that there is not sufficient separation between the male and female prisons, and facilities are given for gross abuses, which have been proved to have arisen in other prisons, although in no other in the kingdom does this misarrangement exist to the same extent as here. Again, the stalls of the chapel are ill-constructed. The prisoners in the back rows, when on their knees during Divine worship, cannot be seen by the officers in charge. The marshalsea, likewise, is faulty, as has been shown in former reports, and the punishment cells are flagged and not heated.

Individual separation is strictly carried out with all prisoners criminally committed, except those in charge of lunatics or employed in the kitchen, or such as are exempt by the special directions of the Medical Officer in each case.

Lock-up is held at 6 P.M. in winter and 7 P.M. in summer, and the prisoners are unlocked in the morning at 6 in summer, and at 7 during the winter months. Gas is not lighted after lock-up in the cells where the criminal prisoners are confined, except for a short time, to enable the occupants to make their beds, and it is extinguished for the night from twenty to thirty minutes after lockings.

The Governor attends lock-up, accompanied by the chief warder on the male side of the prison, and by the matron and assistant matron on the female side, the locks are then carefully examined. It is the duty of the warder when turning off the gas to ascertain the presence of each prisoner in his cell. The prison-keys remain in the Governor's office until 10 P.M., when they are removed to his bedroom for the night.

At lockings a night watchman is placed in the interior of the prison. The sub-warders each take the duty in rotation; their vigilance is tested by one tell-tale clock placed in the central hall. No extern watch is held. The record of the markings of the clock is kept in the state of the prison at lockings book.

No escape from this gaol has been attempted during the past or present years.

Visiters to prisoners are admitted by order of the Local Inspector, or a member of the Board.

A difficulty is felt in procuring tarred rope for teasing by the inmates, and occasionally old common dry ropes are used. I found a quantity of such in store. It was full of dust, and most unwholesome for the prisoners employed at it, as tending to produce disease of the lungs. The work is, besides, I am informed, quite unprofitable. I would suggest that old rigging be purchased, cut into lengths and pressed. It can then be picked by the prisoners, and a good profit will be obtained from the labour. Oakum made from rope which is well tarred is not unwholesome to manufacture, and commands a fair price in the market.

withstanding that the Surgeon, Dr. Brunker, who is also medical officer of the County Infirmary, receives no remuneration for his professional services in the prison. The visits of the Local Inspector during 1867, fall far below the requirements of the 109th sec. of the Act 7, Geo. IV., cap. 74, but his absence was caused by bad health, and sanctioned by the Board of Superintendence. During the period of the year in which he was not incapacitated by illness he was punctual in his attendance.

Mr. Francis Lamb, who had discharged the duties of Governor of this gaol with zeal and efficiency for many years, and in whom the Board of Superintendence, and the Inspectors-General, had the fullest confidence, died on the 22nd August, 1868, and Mr. Henry Noble, the next discipline officer in charge, has been appointed by the Board to succeed him.

Hospital.

Hitherto all prisoners when sick have been treated medically in their cells, but the County Surveyor has now adopted measures to make the hospital habitable, which, it is hoped, will be effective.

The journal of the medical officer is well and carefully kept.

Two prisoners died in this gaol since the commencement of 1868. One of whom, a lunatic female, committed to the gaol as dangerous, on the 19th December, 1867, died on the 17th March following. According to the verdict of the coroner's jury, "From debility induced by her refusal to take the food necessary for her sustenance."

The Board meets monthly for the transaction of business, when the ordinary monthly payments are ordered. The general contracts for supplies are settled and paid half yearly at assizes, by cheques upon the Bank separate for each creditor. The warders and matrons receive their salaries monthly, the superior officers half yearly. Quarterly meetings are held by the Board for a thorough examination of the state of the prison.

One hundred and eighty-five males and 41 females, of whom 5 (males) were juveniles, were committed to this gaol in 1867; of whom 135 males and 15 females never had been previously in custody within the district, and 50 males and 20 females were old offenders, who have—the males 247, and the females 438 committals recorded on the books of the gaol against them; of these 15 males and 16 females have been inmates of this gaol from two to five times and upwards during 1868.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of the Town of Drogheda Gaol.

On the day of my inspection, in November, 1868, 10 females and 5 males (2 tried, 2 on remand, and 1 drunkard,) were inmates of the gaol. All the females were prostitutes, committed for loitering for prostitution in the town, and sentenced to one, two, and three months' imprisonment each. The males were, one, a man seventy years of age, who keeps a marine store in the town sentenced to imprisonment for four months for larceny; the other convicted of an assault on his wife, and sentenced to three months. These constituted the entire number of convicted prisoners in the gaol; 2 males, on remand, were charged with larceny.

One of the women in custody, M. M'G., now under a sentence of two months for loitering for prostitution has already been convicted 118 times within this district for like offences; she was presented by the Grand Jury as a vagrant and sentenced by the Judge to four years' penal servitude some years since, and immediately after her discharge from the convict prison she was again recommitted to this gaol for disorderly conduct in the streets of the town. During the present year she has been five times in custody, always on the same charge. Another woman, M. C., twenty-five years of age, now in custody, has been forty-seven times convicted; at the time of my visit she expressed to me her anxiety to be placed in an asylum, but unfortunately there is no such institution amongst the charitable establishments of Drogheda. Her present life is spent alternately between the gaol and the workhouse, but she will not remain in the latter institution. This woman has during 1868, previously to my visit, been four times convicted; she is now under sentence of imprisonment for two months. Her case is that of the great majority of her class.

During the past year only six persons were committed for offences within this borough of a character to be tried by jury, of these three were convicted; all the other offenders were summarily adjudicated on by the magistrates at petty sessions. The criminal Judge at assizes has seldom a prisoner for trial in this jurisdiction.

Juveniles.

Six juveniles (males) were committed to this gaol during the six months which preceded my visit in November, 1868; 3 of these were charged with larceny, one was acquitted, the other two, aged respectively ten and a-half and thirteen years (brothers), were convicted of stealing a pigeon and sentenced to one month's imprisonment each. The three other juveniles committed during the year were for absconding from the workhouse, from a Reformatory, and leaving service. Three juveniles (males) were committed in 1867, all for trifling offences which were summarily adjudicated on by the magistrates of the district; two were sentenced for one month, and one for fourteen days.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of the Town of Drogheda Gaol.

I found this gaol when I made my inspection in a satisfactory state of cleanliness, order, and discipline. The buildings are all in sound repair and well kept, but the woodwork requires to be painted. The ventilation of the buildings is good, the very objectionable cess-pool under the walls of the gaol has been removed, and a proper sewer has now been made, at a trifling cost, as it was mainly done by prison labour. Another sewer requires to be reconstructed when an opportunity offers, and a sufficient number of male prisoners are in custody.

The supply of prison clothing, bedding, sheets, blankets, and rugs is sufficient; but a few of the blankets and rugs are thin and worn; cots with beds stuffed with straw are here in use, and the bedclothes are folded in them during the day; I prefer hammocks without stuffing for beds for prisoners, as prohibited articles are frequently concealed in straw or fibre when used; the bed clothes also should not be wrapped up, as at present, but properly ventilated during the day, and left open for inspection.

There are three good baths in this prison, one on each floor, with hot and cold water, so that the ninth rule of the 109th section of the Prisons Act, can be carried out without difficulty. Water for prison use is obtained from a deep well at P on the ground plan of the gaol, and is driven into the cisterns under the floor of the chapel by the power of a wheel-pump, with a double crank-handle, worked by the prisoners. The supply is ample, but it has been suggested to connect the prison pipes by a branch from the town main, which would establish an unfailing supply; it has, however, not been carried out, as the cost of the water would be considerable.

A prisoner effected his escape in December, 1866, at the angle V on the plan of the gaol, where a cross-wall is built against the boundary wall, and a similar spot in the next yard is rendered insecure from the same cause. Both angles could, however, without difficulty, be made inaccessible for climbing.

Gas is supplied to the central hall, the kitchen, the debtors' rooms, the stores, and the hospital, but not to the cells of the prisoners. I am informed that the traps in the doors of the cells remain open after nightfall, to enable the prisoners to see in their cells by the light of the gas in the central hall.

Since last inspection no alteration has been made in the buildings.

Unlock is held in this goal at 6·30, A.M., and the prisoners are locked in their cells at 6 P.M., both in summer and winter. The gas in the central hall is kept lighting at night until 10 P.M.; but the prison cells remain in darkness during the short days of winter for a period of twelve hours and a half. The Governor, and the officers in charge, each in his or her class, attend lock-up. At between 9 and 10 o'clock the final rounds are made, and the Governor frequently visits the prison at uncertain hours during the night. No night-watch is held after ten o'clock, P.M., when the turnkey on duty goes to bed, unless political prisoners are in charge; but the Governor informs me that he can from his bedroom hear the smallest noise in the prison, and he has bells in his room by which he can call up the turnkey or the matron, should a cell-gong sound, and a prisoner require their aid.

No escape has been attempted from the goal during the present year, or since that already referred to in 1866.

Photography is not in use here. It might be turned to advantage in the detection of criminals from other districts, who are committed to this gaol, and a photographer in the town might be employed on such occasions at a price agreed upon.

The Governor here turns all the land belonging to the prison to a useful purpose, and plants, by prison labour, potatoes and other vegetables for the food of the prisoners, on all the spots where a crop can be obtained. At the time of my visit there was, in store, a supply of good potatoes, grown on the land.

The male prisoners are employed in pumping water, making mats and brushes of cocoa fibre and bass of different descriptions. When a tradesman is in custody, his skill is utilized for the benefit of the establishment; a turner was so employed on the day of inspection. Men and women both are employed to tease cocoa fibre; the women also sew, and wash the prison clothing and linen.

All prisoners who are capable to learn attend school, but the males receive educational teaching in the chapel, which is on the top corridor in the quarters allotted for females. It is most objectionable that male officers and prisoners should pass constantly through the female prison to the school as at present, and I would urge the Board to discontinue the practice. School for males might either be held over the kitchen (marked K on the plan), or in the central hall; but on no account should men pass backwards and forwards to the female prison; indeed, the imperfect separation of the sexes in this prison is the greatest defect in the establishment. Again, the 6th sec. of the Prisons Act directs that "One or more chapel or chapels shall be provided in every prison, and shall be strictly set apart for religious worship, or for the occasional religious and moral instruction of the prisoners, and shall never be appropriated or employed for any other purpose whatsoever." It is therefore, apart from other objections, illegal to use the chapel for any other purpose than those mentioned in the section of the Act. The male teacher who is likewise assistant turnkey and clerk, was appointed to the office after examination by the Inspector of the National Board of Education, and is well qualified; but the school is not in connexion with any public educational body, or inspected by their officers.

The food prepared for the use of the prisoners on the day of my inspection was excellent, and I observe that the chaplains almost always report favourably of the supply furnished by the contractor. Since the new dietary has been in use, no extra diet has been given to sane prisoners not in hospital. I questioned all the prisoners in custody, and no complaint was made to me by any.

Books and Accounts.

The Governor keeps the books and registries of the prison, without assistance except occasionally from the clerk and schoolmaster. The books are kept with care and attention. The various forms directed by the rules of the Queen's Bench, and recommended by the Inspector-General, are in use, and the Officer's Conduct Book, in which the conduct of all the subordinates of the establishment is registered, has been adopted. The superior officers have journals; in that of the Governor all occurrences which are noteworthy are entered. As suggested in the report of the Inspector-General for 1867, the Governor has adopted a check on officers leaving the prison; they now produce a ticket signed by the Governor before they are permitted to pass the gate.

The Board meets very regularly on the first Tuesday of each month, and there is generally a full attendance of members. At these meetings they examine the prison books, audit and pay accounts, and transact such other business as may come before them. Small sums under £2 are included in an aggregate cheque drawn in favour of the Governor, who produces vouchers at next meeting of the Board. All larger amounts and payments to contractors are settled by cheques drawn in favour of each individual creditor. The officers receive their salaries half-yearly at assizes, after audit by a Committee of the Grand Jury.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Mayo Gaol.

Number of prisoners sentenced to solitary confinement in 1867 and 1868:—

Two sailors for absconding from training-boat sentenced to 28 days' imprisonment, half to be spent in solitary confinement.

408 male and 121 female individual prisoners were committed to this gaol in 1867, of whom 6 males and 2 females were juveniles, 344 males and 88 females had never before been in custody; 54 males and 33 females were previous offenders, some of whom are constantly recommitted; 21 males and 13 females underwent from 2 to 5 convictions during the year, and it appears from the returns in the prison office that 59 of the males and 38 of the females have been in custody in this gaol, the males 256 times, the females 257 times.

When I made my inspection, 31 males and 20 females of all classes were in charge, of these 11 males were debtors, and 8 (5 males and 3 females) were on remand or committed for trial. The convicted prisoners were 12 males and 6 females, found guilty by juries at assizes and quarter sessions, and 10 males and 11 females summarily before magistrates at petty sessions.

Referring to the periods of the sentences of imprisonment of the prisoners, in association here, on the day of inspection, I find 3 males and 1 female under sentences for two years; 1 male for eighteen, 3 for twelve, and 1 for nine months; besides 4 females for twelve, and 1 for eight months. Altogether 14 prisoners were under long terms of sentence in this associated gaol.

The prisoners under sentences of imprisonment for shorter terms were 3 males, sentenced for six months; 1 for four, and seven for one and two months; 5 females were for three months; 1 for one month, and 3 males and one female were for seven and fourteen days.

I have enumerated the periods of sentences of the offenders, whom I found inmates of the gaol on the day of my visit, because I desire to exemplify the extent of the mischief which results from the present state of the law which tolerates the association of offenders together for long periods, mutually to corrupt each other, and to show the necessity for the removal of grave criminals to a central depot, as in Scotland, in which not only contamination of the less corrupt will be prevented, but likewise an equal punishment will be dealt to all offenders, and the gravity of the punishment will not depend on the locality in which the crime is committed, as at present.

I regret to observe in the calendar of offences of the prisoners in custody, that many were of an aggravated character. Two males charged with a murder seven or eight years ago, were for trial, and two others had been convicted of manslaughter. These crimes appear to have been the result of drunken quarrels, as were also two cases of grave assault, and waylaying by farmers' sons who were in custody, on the day of my inspection, undergoing sentences of imprisonment for two years each; a boy of eighteen years was also for trial, charged with rape.

As regards offences against property, I found in this gaol 2 males convicted of sheep stealing, 1 sentenced for two years, and 1 for eighteen months; a third was for trial, likewise for sheep stealing. Five prisoners, for larceny, were under sentences of from six to twelve months each, and another for trial, was also for larceny. Some of these prisoners are old offenders.

Amongst the female prisoners, 1 under sentence for twelve months, had been convicted of infanticide, and another was for trial for the same offence; three females convicted of aggravated assaults had been sentenced, one for two years, for assaulting a constable in the court when brought for trial; another for one year, and 1 for eight months; one female had been sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment for larceny, and two others, returned convicts, were for trial for the same offence.

Two prostitutes were in charge, sentenced to imprisonment for three months, for "loitering for prostitution."

It is painful to observe the more depraved, especially females, in association with the less corrupted. One female, S. L., now sentenced to an imprisonment of two years for an aggravated assault, is of the vilest character, and during the long period of her detention in the gaol must necessarily contaminate, by her conversation and conduct, those who are less depraved, with whom she has daily and hourly intercourse; besides the professional thieves and female shoplifters, for which this and one or two adjoining counties are remarkable, have in the gaols (all of which are in association) opportunities to recruit their ranks from amongst the prisoners and to instruct in crime those in whose company they are so constantly placed. The officers in charge of the female prisoners in this gaol are the hospital nurse, who resides in the hospital, a matron and assistant-matron. The situation of assistant-matron was vacant at the time of my visit, and, therefore, all the classes of female prisoners were in charge of a single officer. I am satisfied that both the Governor and Local Inspector are active and efficient officers, but it is physically impossible, under the circumstances of the gaol, to prevent the evils to which I refer.

On examination of the sentences of the offenders convicted in this county during 1867, I find that 7 males and 2 females had been sentenced to penal servitude, and 11 males and 1 female for terms of imprisonment of one and two years, besides 3 males and 2 females for nine, and 17 males and 6 females for six months' each. The sentences of imprisonment for periods less than six months, were 280 for males and 79 for females.

Offenders against the Revenue Laws.

I found three females in charge, convicted of illicit distillation of whisky, in the wild districts of this county, and sentenced to an imprisonment of three months each, 2 young women were sisters, the third was old and helpless, stated to be eighty-nine years of age, and who could not speak or comprehend a word of English; I found her in hospital under the care of another prisoner, as the Medical Officer dreaded that from her great age and infirmities, if treated as an ordinary prisoner, she would not survive the period of her imprisonment.

Debtors.

Five debtors males, were committed, previously to my visit, 4 of whom were then in custody; 9 males and 2 females had been imprisoned for debt in this gaol during 1867, and 7 males in 1866.

Juveniles.

Seven male and 2 female juveniles were inmates of this gaol in 1867, —one (a male) was under ten years of age; 2 males had been convicted by juries at assizes or quarter sessions; 6 others summarily before magistrates at petty sessions had been sent to reformatories after the term of their punishment in the prison; all but two had lost one or both parents. Two males, one under ten years of age, had been committed from the workhouse; 2 could read and write, and 4 were wholly illiterate. The age of neither of the girls exceeded twelve years, both had been convicted of larcenies, and both had lost their father, but their mothers were living.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Mayo Gaol.

Previously to my visit in 1868, 7 juveniles (males) had been committed for trifling larcenies, absconding from the workhouse of the union and leaving service; 1, a male, had been sent to a reformatory after the period of his punishment here, who, although fifteen years of age, was quite illiterate, never having been at school. This boy's father was at the time of my visit a prisoner in the gaol.

Lunatics.

I find that some insane prisoners have been committed to this gaol and the bridewells of the county, notwithstanding the provisions of the Act 30 and 31 Vic., cap. 118, which directs, that after the 31st December, 1867, no insane person shall be committed to a gaol, and gives powers to magistrates to send them direct to the asylum of the district.

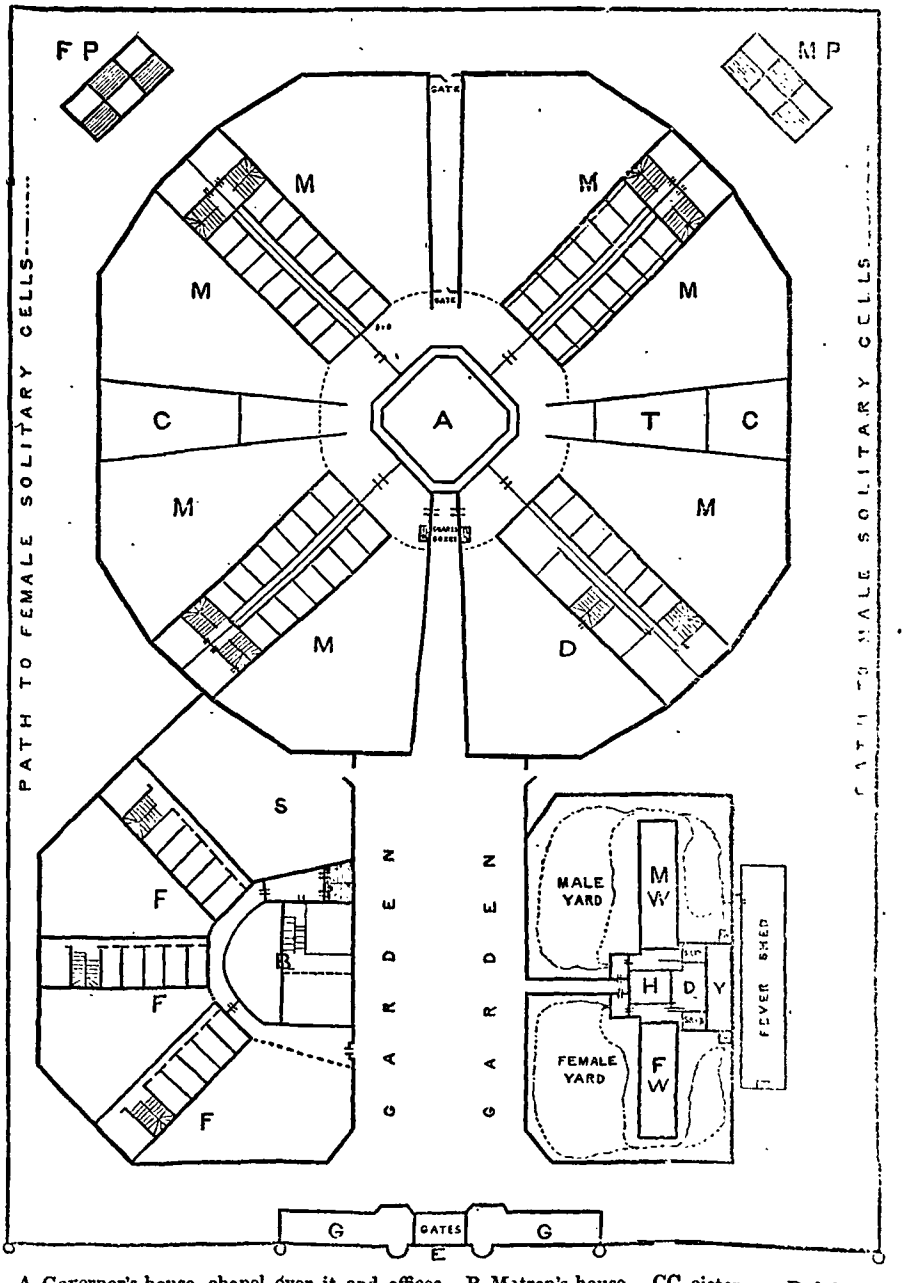
This gaol was, when I made my inspection, as on former occasions when I visited it, in a creditable condition of order and cleanliness. The grounds are kept with care and attention, the entrance being tastefully planted with flowers. The buildings are properly ventilated and now in sound repair; a door in the hospital then in a bad state having been since repaired. A notice of the penalties incurred by any person introducing prohibited articles into the prison, or aiding in an escape is placed over the entrance to the gaol, so that no person can pretend ignorance of the law on these subjects. This is a practice which should be more generally adopted elsewhere.

I found the clothing of the prisoners of both sexes, the bedding, blankets, sheets, and rugs in use sufficient for the requirements, and some in store. The Local Inspector and Governor accompanied me through the prison, and I questioned all the inmates, and found no just cause of complaint. A master debtor complained that he was not permitted to leave his quarters for exercise after lock-up. I pointed out to him that it could not legally be permitted—the rule on this subject is distinct. A female prisoner also complained, but also without reason.

The following is the ground plan of the gaol as at present:—



A Governor's house, chapel over it and offices. B Matron's house. CC cisterns. D debtor's prison. E entrance to the gaol. FF female prison. GG officer's quarters. H hospital. FW female ward. MW male ward. T tread wheel. MMM male prison. MP punishment cells for males; FP for females. S stone yard.

County of Mayo Gaol.

Since my last inspection, in 1866, no alteration or change has been made in the prison buildings, but a presentment was passed by the Grand Jury, in 1864, to carry out a plan for improving them, which has received the approval of the architect of the Board of Works. The presentment has been respited until the wishes of Parliament are ascertained, but as the plan then adopted, may yet be required I repeat it here :—

"It was proposed that one of the blocks of buildings marked M, in plan No. 1, be remodelled according to plan No. 2, which is suitable for an approved system of discipline.

"The building so altered can at any time afterwards be enlarged by uniting it and another block similarly remodelled to the central building at A."

County of Mayo Gaol.

"The following is an extract from the report of the architect of the Board of Public Works on this plan when submitted for his consideration:—'The new arrangement would afford a corridor with thirty six cells, with suitable convenience, an enclosed ring for exercising and a crank pump, and stone-breaking sheds for hard labour, all easily inspected by one officer, and a school-room.' He suggests a slight alteration in the method of admitting the light into the school-room, which, however, does not interfere with the plans, and can be adopted when the work is being carried out."

The supply of water from the well which is (including a jumper hole of 30 feet) 136 feet in depth is abundant since the new pumps have been placed, and a serious leakage in the main-pipe passing through the hospital garden has been staunched, but the sewerage is very defective, and although in the present unsettled state of legislation with regard to prisons I do not suggest that any expense be incurred at present, yet it is a subject of considerable importance in a sanitary point of view, and should not be lost sight of. I therefore repeat observations made in my report on this gaol in 1866 as they may be useful hereafter:—

"The sewerage of this establishment is supposed to deliver itself into a quarry on the grounds of the lunatic asylum adjoining; but although the deep drain from the area round the central block acts sufficiently, the latrine sewerage of the prison, which is at a higher level, and connected with cesspits in the yards, being ineffective, no discharge of the filth from the privies is discernible, and the water impregnated with the foul matter, which accumulates in the imperfect drainage, and cesspits must of necessity infiltrate through the soil of the surrounding area within the prison boundary. The Governor, who is most anxious to have his gaol in as satisfactory a state as circumstances will permit, informs me that he has partly filled up the cesspits with yellow clay, but the noxious deposit is apparently not discharged and must accumulate, vitiating the sanitary condition of the gaol.

"Whenever an effective system of drainage is adopted the lie of the ground will offer peculiar advantages for having one well-devised scheme of drainage for both the gaol and the lunatic asylum which adjoins.

"The evils which result from a system of imperfect sewerage such as exists here, is admirably pointed out by the Royal Sanitary Commissioners in their report in 1861, on the sanitary condition of the military barracks and hospitals in the United Kingdom. At page 163 in that report they recommend a plan which I am satisfied might be carried out here with advantage and ultimately effect a saving to the county."

The males are classified as prescribed by the Prisons Act, and the females nominally in three divisions, but with the very limited staff in the female prison supervision must be imperfect, at the same time I believe the Governor would, if in his power, carry out an efficient system. The prisoners sleep separately, and during the summer months they take their meals in their cells, but not in winter, as the cells are not heated. Gas has not been introduced into the gaol, and the prisoners are in darkness without employment during the long nights of winter. The main passages of the prison are kept lighted until 10:30 P.M., after that only the guard-room.

In summer the prison cells are unlocked at 6 A.M., and locked for the night at 6 P.M., but in winter the hours of lockings and unlockings depend on the hours of daybreak and dusk in the evening. The Governor and Deputy-Governor both assist at unlock and lock-up, each in a different part of the prison, and when grave criminals are in charge the Governor, wearing noiseless shoes, makes frequent and unexpected examinations of the cells in which they are confined during the night. Three turnkeys alternately form a night patrol until 10 P.M., when the watchman comes on duty, and remains in charge until unlock in the morning; his vigilance is tested by two tell-tale clocks placed so that they cannot be tampered with; one in the office, the other in a cell, both secured by Chubb's locks, the string of the latter passing to the outside of the buildings. The locks are repaired in Dublin. Photography has been introduced into this gaol, and with satisfactory results.

I have suggested some inexpensive improvements in the closets of the gaol, which would be attended with a very trifling expense, and although earth closets are generally unsuited for a prison, they might perhaps be adopted here as a temporary expedient. The large boiler is wasteful of fuel, and a more economic plan of cooking the food of the prisoners might be established.*

No schools are held in this prison, but Sisters of Mercy give moral and religious instruction to Roman Catholic females under direction of the chaplain

As the vast majority of the prisoners in custody here are agricultural labourers, it is difficult to find employment for them. They work the tread-wheel, which is not partitioned, and they break stones. I would suggest that, as a suitable employment for unskilled hands, old ropes and rigging be purchased at Westport, cut into lengths, pressed and given to the prisoners to tease. The work would be remunerative, and suited for the lower order of prisoners who have not capacity for more skilled labour. Some tailoring and shoemaking is carried on when artisans are in custody. The females sew, wash, knit, and sprig muslin. Two of the turnkeys are artisans.

* Since inspection, an American cooking boiler has been erected in kitchen, and large solid iron gates have been put up between the male and female prison wings.

The Chaplains report in the tabular form recommended for their use on the quality of the food supplied to the prisoners, and occasionally exception is taken to the quality of the provisions furnished by the contractor, which are then rejected and a proper substitute purchased at his cost. Samples of the provisions remain in the board-room for inspection of the Board and other authorities. I found the food, which I tasted on the day of my visit, of good quality. The new diet is found to answer the purpose intended.

The Governor's journal is well and carefully kept, and all observations specially demanding attention are marked with red ink, in the margin. The Chaplains and Medical Officers also have journals. The Local Inspector occasionally during the week checks the accounts and the issue of provisions, and also makes a general examination of the books and registries in the prison. The property of prisoners, when they are searched on admission, is at once entered in the gate-keeper's book, and then handed to the Governor who initials the entry and gives receipts to the prisoners. The various forms of books recommended by superior authority are in use.

There are good hospitals in this prison. The wards are roomy and well ventilated with water-closets attached, and have baths. No death had occurred in the gaol previously to inspection in 1868. But one female died in 1867. No inquest was held on her body. I cannot find that the coroner ever holds inquests on the prisoners who die in the gaol. On the day of my visit the hospital for males was unoccupied, but the old woman already mentioned and three other females were inmates of the hospital for that sex.

The Board meets monthly for the transaction of business, when the inferior officers are paid and the accounts are examined. The superior officers receive their salaries half-yearly at assizes. Each creditor is paid by cheque drawn in his favour, unless the amounts are small, when all are included in one draft, and paid by the Local Inspector, who produces receipts and vouchers at the next meeting of the Board.

Bridewells.

Bridewells.

I have referred in former reports to the very wretched building used as a bridewell at Belmullet, for which a high rent is paid by the county, and I beg again to call attention to the matter. Only 25 prisoners were lodged in that bridewell in 1868, and the entire cost of their food was 15*s.* 10*d.*, yet the expense to the county for the maintenance of this, the worst bridewell in Ireland, is unnecessarily great. At page 214, Appendix to the Forty-fifth Report of the Inspectors-General for 1866, and at page 196, Appendix in the Report for 1864, I have fully entered into this subject. I annex the following extracts from my report of this bridewell in 1866:—

"The premises used as a court-house and bridewell at Belmullet were not originally built for that object, but a small private house in the street of the town, with an out-house behind, have been altered to answer the purpose. In the front house petty sessions are held fortnightly, and one quarter sessions during the year. The bridewell consists of two very damp rooms on the ground floor, with two beds in the inner one; and two rooms over them similarly furnished, which are entered from steps on the outside. The outer doors are fastened with common padlocks, hasps, and staples.

"There is no sewerage, and no water on the concerns or near. The salary of the keeper is only £15, and 30*s.* a quarter is allowed him to purchase stationery, fuel, and light for the use of the prisoners, and his own. Notwithstanding that the bridewell-keeper receives only this very insufficient salary from the county, these miserable buildings cost the ratepayers a considerable sum, which would go far to repay the yearly instalments on an advance from the Treasury, sufficient for the erection of a suitable court-house and bridewell. The landlord, who is petty sessions clerk, receives from the county as rent for these premises £45, and as keeper of the court-house £8, making altogether £53 yearly; he likewise receives for stationery, fuel, and light of court-house, £6 12*s.* 2*d.*

"The required advance from the Treasury for building a bridewell could be procured, interest free, repayable in twenty half-yearly instalments, on the faith of a presentment on the rates.

"The rent of a court-house for holding petty sessions, can in no case legally exceed £10 a year."

The Local Inspector must travel 100 miles from his home at Castlebar on each visit to this bridewell; only two inspections of it were made in 1868. The other bridewells of the county were each visited four times by him during the year—one, five times. He states in his report that he travels 900 miles in the year without the advantages of railway accommodation, to inspect the bridewells of his district. Two of the bridewell keepers hold land, one is clerk of petty sessions, and two are court-house keepers. The miserable salary of £15 attached to the office of bridewell keeper in this county is quite insufficient, and the buildings are generally deficient in the primary requirements necessary for such institutions.

9 females from two to four times each. 134 males and 21 females never had previously been in custody; many of the remaining 26 males and 16 females had frequently been recommitted, especially the females, for drunkenness and loitering for prostitution.

On the day on which I made my inspection 16 prisoners of all classes (12 males and 4 females) were in custody under the following sentences of imprisonment:—the males, 3 for two years, 1 for eighteen months, 1 for eight months, 2 for six months, and 3 for one month each; 2 were for trial. The only female prisoners were 4 prostitutes; 2 for loitering for prostitution sentenced to imprisonment for two months each, and 2 others not yet convicted—one of these is a returned convict of the worst character now charged with robbery from the person—she was discharged from the convict depot at the conclusion of her last sentence to penal servitude, on the 18th October, 1867, since which period she has already been three times committed to this gaol. The others have also been previously convicted, 1 fifty-six, 1 sixty-three, and 1 five times—generally for loitering for prostitution—two from the town of Navan, are often almost immediately after their discharge, recommitted and again forwarded by car, in custody of the police, to this gaol, a distance of eighteen miles, at the expense of the county. The recommittal of females for loitering for prostitution, to an associated gaol has not a deterrent effect and it entails a heavy expense on the county. I believe that the law on this subject requires to be changed. These women will not remain in the workhouse and whether in association there or in the gaol they corrupt others not of their class with whom they may be placed.

The male prisoners in the goal, when I visited were 6 for larceny—4 sentenced to imprisonment for eighteen months and two years, and 2 for six months, two have been four times previously convicted of a like offence, and 1 at least of the others, who is a stranger to the district, has the bearing and appearance of an old offender and professional thief; but his antecedents have not been traced. The other males in custody were 1 convicted of manslaughter, 1 for assault, 1 for poaching after game, and 1 for begging. If the Prison Bill, introduced last session, were law, and all prisoners under sentence for terms exceeding six months were removed to a central depot, only 5 convicted male prisoners would be in custody. There were also in the gaol, on the day of inspection, 2 male prisoners for trial for cattle-stealing. No prisoner under arrest for debt was an inmate of the prison on the day of inspection.

Juveniles.

I found no juvenile in charge when I visited, and it appears from the prison registry of this gaol that only 2 (males) were committed, previously to inspection, in 1868. Eleven males and 1 female were in custody during 1867, 3 of whom were sent to reformatories after the term of their punishment in the gaol.

Lunatics.

Notwithstanding that the Act 30 & 31 Vict., cap. 118, of last session, prohibits the committal of lunatics to prison as dangerous, and authorizes the committing Justices to send them direct to the lunatic asylum of the district, I observe that prisoners admittedly insane are still committed by magistrates to this gaol, on remand, charged with assault.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Meath Gaol.

Such committals are not alone manifestly contrary to the spirit of the Act, subversive of all discipline in a place of punishment, and unnecessary, but also in a recent case, it would appear [from the information I have received on my inspection], that an insane person so committed died in the gaol, in August last, from starvation, he having refused to take food after his committal. I, therefore, beg strongly to urge the magistrates of the county not to entail on persons so circumstanced the many evils which have so often resulted from sending patients afflicted with diseases of the mind to a prison, which is destitute of all appliances for the proper treatment of disease, and from the depressing influences which such committals have on a mind morbidly sensitive, sometimes produces the result which in this case ended in the death of the patient. The following are the particulars of the case to which I refer—H. D. a labouring man, in the county Meath, became insane, and was, by order of a magistrate, removed, on the 4th of August last, by the police to Navan. In that order it was stated that he was committed for being a dangerous lunatic. On the 6th August he was committed from the Petty Sessions at Navan to Trim Gaol, "on remand until next Petty Sessions at Navan, on the 26th September, 1868, for having violently assaulted a sub-constable," and he was then forwarded by car to Trim, a distance of eighteen miles, in charge of the police. In the order of the magistrate for his removal to the gaol it was stated that "he had been committed for assault and being a dangerous lunatic." When being removed the police were compelled, from his state, to tie him with ropes on the car. After his removal to the gaol he refused food, and, notwithstanding the greatest care on the part of the Governor of the gaol and his officers, and of the surgeon, the man died on the 24th September following. I annex the report of the Medical Officer on the case, and I dwell on it in order to show the evils which result from the committal of innocent and irresponsible persons under such circumstances to a place intended for punishment :—

Henry Duke, a lunatic, and very much emaciated, was committed as a criminal to the gaol, on the 6th August, 1868, he refused to eat any food from that date until the 18th, when he began to use some food, which he continued to do until the 24th of August, then he refused every kind of food whatever, until his death, which occurred on the 24th September following.

Any attempt at introducing food by the stomach-pump had to be abandoned from the resistance he made, which would have injured him if persevered in.

A pint of beef-tea with six ounces of port wine were injected up the bowels at different intervals during the twenty-four hours.

The only liquid he drank during that time was water, of which he took about three pints daily.

The following is the finding of the Coroner's Jury in this case :—

COUNTY of MEATH, to wit: } I certify that Henry Duke, an untried prisoner in the gaol of Trim, came by his death in the said gaol, on the 24th September, 1868, from starvation, although every possible remedy was resorted to by Dr. Wallace, the Medical Officer of the prison, and the other officials of the prison, to induce him to take food, but to no avail.

Dated this 25th day of September, 1868.

I found this gaol, when I made my inspection, in a sufficient condition of order and cleanliness; the buildings are all in fair repair, and the roofs have lately been pointed, but the wood-work is unsound from age, especially in the female prison, and parts will require occasionally to be renewed. The grounds are well and neatly kept, and the stock of prison clothing of good quality and ample. The bedding is also sufficient, but some of the blankets though sound are thin and worn—when too much worn for bed-covering they make excellent petticoats for female prisoners, and it is the most economical use to which they can be applied. The ventilation of the buildings is satisfactory, and the sewerage is on an extensive scale, but not apparently on an improved principle—a large cesspool passes round the prison, connecting the privies, and a sewer from it leads into the Boyne. There are two wells on the premises, one outside the prison walls, beyond O on the plan, the water from which is pumped by the hand-pump C into the tank T, over the tread-wheel, whence it is distributed to the different sections of the gaol. Another well-hole under the tread-wheel furnishes the supply which is forced by the power of that engine into the larger cistern, but from its close proximity to the cess-pool the water cannot be fit for drinking purposes.

This gaol, which was completed about the year 1832, at an expense of £22,529, is, although well-placed, built after a most faulty plan, and wanting in all the requirements now considered indispensable for a prison managed on an improved system. The cells are too small for separation, they are flagged and are not heated—one section has not even sashes to the windows, but merely wooden shutters—supervision is impossible, and the prison can only be managed at a very great expense—hence each prisoner confined in it cost the county, in 1868, £83 17*s.* 4*d.*, in 1867, £76 15*s.* 11*d.*, in 1866, £54 13*s.* 11*d.*, and in 1865 and 1864 upwards of £56 in each year. The buildings are composed of five separate blocks, besides the chapel and hospital. On the day of my inspection 12 males and 4 females occupied these buildings. The male prisoners are divided into four classes and a reception ward.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Meath Gaol.

I found a wardsman in each of these class and a sixth man as cook in the kitchen; a patient in hospital required two prisoners to care him, and one man was in bed with itch; thus 10 prisoners out of 12 were employed in the prison and hospital, yet the grounds must be cared and water pumped, showing how completely the labour of the prisoners is absorbed in prison duties, hence no profit can be derived from the work of the inmates, and it is impossible that the punishment which the law contemplates for grave offenders, some of whom were in the gaol at the time of my visit, could be carried out on men who were necessarily employed at mere labourer's work, caring the grounds, pumping water, and cleaning the prison. There were 3 female officers to attend the 4 female prisoners. I have entered into these particulars because I desire to show that the expensive management of this gaol is mainly attributed to the faulty construction of the buildings, which could not be remodelled without a very considerable outlay, which the county would not be justified in incurring. From the same cause the prison staff is necessarily large, besides the extern officers and Governor there are a Deputy-Governor, 9 male and 3 female subordinate officers, and while the entire sum expended for the maintenance of the gaol, in 1867, amounted to £1,940 13*s.* 11*d.*, the salaries of the officers were £1,082 3*s.* 7*d.*, yet the Governor does not receive the same salary as his predecessor, Captain Pendleton, enjoyed. Should the contemplated change in the law, with regard to prisons, be carried out, and prisoners under long sentences be removed to a central depôt, this large and expensive establishment will become quite unnecessary for the requirements of the county.

Although I do not recommend any structural alteration in the prison, it becomes my duty to recapitulate the prominent defects of the gaol.

1st. The cells are too small for individual separation—are not heated and one section has not glass sashes. There can be no supervision over these cells.

2nd. The accommodation for debtors does not meet the requirements of the Prisons Act. That for females is merely a small room in the criminal prison.

3rd. There are not baths as directed by the 9th rule of 109th sect. of the Prisons Act.

The treadwheel and laundry are not partitioned and the drying-room is merely a room with a fire-place and two drying horses.

4th. The punishment cells are apart from supervision, flagged, open to the air, without sashes, and dangerous from the iron railings which protect the openings giving facilities for suicide. I had no opportunity of seeing those cells when the fire is lighted by which it is intended they should be heated, but I must suppose that the heating cannot but be very imperfect from the turf fire which is used for the purpose; as the Board desire my opinion on this subject, I have no hesitation in saying that the cells should be altogether disused and proper punishment cells fitted up in one of the blocks of the gaol, where the prisoner when in punishment would be under supervision of an officer, and the cell could be properly heated at a trifling cost. To alter the present punishment cells would be attended with considerable expense.

Notwithstanding that male criminal prisoners are divided into four classes, besides those in the reception ward, and females are in two divisions, yet there is no place where juveniles can be kept separate from adult criminals. Meals are taken by prisoners in their cells. No escape has been from the gaol in 1867 or 1868.

A fumigating chest in the store of male prison is used for the purpose of disinfecting the clothes of prisoners and to destroy vermin. Photography is not generally applied here for the tracing of the antecedents of strangers supposed to be grave offenders. In a few cases photographs of suspected persons were taken by a policeman stationed in the neighbourhood.

The locks of this gaol being old and worn, two dozen brass padlocks, by Chubb, of a superior description, have been procured for the cells by the Governor, who himself carefully keeps the keys. The unlockings and lock-up of the prison appears to be carefully attended to, and the tell-tale clock at the lodge is protected from being tampered with; a second tell-tale clock of a superior description has been procured but has not yet been placed. The prisoners' cells are locked for the night at 6 P.M. and unlocked at 7 A.M. The Governor examines all the locks and cells and enters in his journal the condition in which he finds them. The head turnkey afterwards tests the locks, and when the turnkey on duty is relieved by the first night watchman at 9 o'clock, P.M., he also examines all parts of the prison, and gives charge to the second watchman at 1 o'clock, A.M., who is again relieved by a third turnkey at 5 o'clock in the morning; the latter remains on duty until 7 o'clock.

Occasionally the Governor visits the prison at unexpected hours.

Gas is not supplied to the cells; it is extinguished in the classes at 6 o'clock, P.M., and in the other parts of the prison at 11, P.M.

The keys are given up to the Governor after the prison is locked for the night, and he keeps them in his bed-room; it is the duty of the watchman to call the hours and half-hours under the windows of the Governor. The toll-tale clock is pegged by pulling a string from the outside. There is no internal watch held in the prison after lock-up.

Three punishments were inflicted by a magistrate, a member of the Board of Superintendence, one was "to be kept in a solitary cell for one month." The other punishments were ordered by the Governor —one man was six times punished during the year, and another four times—this man who is a person of low intellect, ill-conditioned, and morose, when under punishment, in October, 1868, hung himself from the bars of the punishment cell in which he was confined, and it was with difficulty that his life was saved. He is now kept in hospital and constantly watched by two prisoners. He was sentenced to imprisonment for two years, in January, 1868, and his custody for fourteen months in this gaol will very seriously interfere with the management of the establishment.

A good kitchen-range has lately been erected at a cost of £40, and the old materials given in exchange. It is stated to be a source of considerable economy, as the old range was most wasteful of fuel. I questioned all the prisoners in custody; no complaint was made to me by any. The food for the use of the prisoners, which I tasted on the day of inspection, was of excellent quality, and the chaplains who report in the tabular form recommended for their use, seldom take exception to the supply furnished by the contractor; occasionally the milk is objected to, and on a few occasions the stirabout. Since the introduction of the new dietary table the orders for extra diet by the medical Officer has almost altogether ceased; formerly a good deal of extra diet was given.

All the superior officers have journals and that of the Governor is kept with particular care and attention. The various incidents which occur in the gaol are entered in it by him. The Local Inspector also notes in his journal various matters which come under his observation. There is an employment-ledger for every class, and a daily report sent in duly signed. The approved forms of discipline and finance are here in use, and appear to be carefully attended to by the Governor and Deputy-Governor.

1, on the 23rd of September, 1868.

There is a very large hospital building in this gaol, far too extensive for the requirements of the establishment. There are four good and roomy wards with water-closets attached and bath-room with pipes for cold water, but hot water must be carried up-stairs to it when required. There is also a large surgery, and two small exercising yards, but there is only one staircase for the use of prisoners of both sexes and the separation between them is insufficient. There was a deficiency of water in the water-closets of the hospital on the day of my visit. The medicines are procured at the Apothecaries' Hall, Dublin.

Besides the man who attempted suicide, with his two attendants, one man was in hospital who had been taken up for begging—he was affected with itch.

The Board meets on the second Saturday of each month for the transaction of business, when the salaries of intern officers and other liabilities which have been incurred are paid. All payments are made by cheque drawn in favour of each creditor, unless when the amounts are inconsiderable, they are included in one cheque and the vouchers of payment produced at next meeting of the Board. Extern officers receive their salaries half-yearly at assizes.

Each bridewell has been visited and inspected by the Local Inspector at least once in every three months during the year 1868.

216 male and 74 female individuals, including 5 male and 1 female juveniles, were committed to this gaol in 1867; of these 17 males and 13 females were re-committed more or less frequently during the year, making the total number of commitments to the gaol in 1867, 247 of males and 106 of females. These 17 male prisoners have already 110, and the 13 females 89 convictions recorded against them in the books of the gaol. NORTH DISTRICT.

I made two official inspections of this gaol in 1868; one on the 18th February, the second on the 8th July of that year. County of Monaghan Goal.

I have directed the statistical tables for this report to be made up to the latter date.

On my first inspection in February, besides 14 (6 males and 8 females) insane persons committed as dangerous lunatics, 8 males and 3 females under criminal committals were in custody—1 female and 2 males, who had been convicted by juries before the Chairman at quarter sessions and 5 males and 2 females summarily by magistrates at petty sessions. Although the spring assizes for the county were to be held on the second day following, no prisoner for trial was then in custody; a number of persons, however, were on bail, charged with riots, assaults, and having arms in a proclaimed district, and, subsequently, two men were committed for waylaying and grievous assault, from which death ensued.

At that assizes the presiding Judge found it necessary to call attention to the great increase of drunkenness in the county, from which the great majority of the cases then for trial had arisen.

The following were the sentences of the prisoners convicted at quarter sessions, in custody at that inspection:—1 female for larceny, a professional thief and receiver of stolen goods, who has for many years infested the counties of Tyrone and Monaghan, now sentenced to imprisonment for two years. This woman, who is sixty years of age, has, I am informed, spent her life in thieving, and she will, it is more than probable, return on her discharge from prison, to her former occupation. It is with regret I find persons of her class, inmates of a county gaol, as I believe, long sentences of penal servitude are the only means by which the public can be protected from their depredations. The other prisoners sentenced at quarter sessions were two males, one for cattle-stealing, to be imprisoned for sixteen months; he has been twice before convicted by magistrates of larceny, and is also supposed to be a returned convict; the other, convicted of assault and stabbing, had been sentenced for six months.

The prisoners convicted at petty sessions were two females, for larceny, both old offenders, and supposed to be returned convicts; one a street prostitute, sentenced for two months, the other, a shoplifter and pick-pocket, for three months; and the observations I have already made apply equally to those women, who will return to their former mode of life immediately on discharge from prison. Two males, both strangers, had been sentenced for larceny, one to two, the other to three months' imprisonment; they also are supposed to be returned convicts, but, as photography is not in use in this gaol, their antecedents have not been fully traced. The other male convicted prisoners were two for assaults, and one for deserting his wife.

When I made my second inspection in July, eleven male and five female prisoners, criminally committed, were inmates of the gaol. The females, two, already referred to, under former rules sentenced for larceny to imprisonment for two years and six months, respectively; and two prostitutes, sentenced summarily to two months' imprisonment, each, for assaults. The fifth female in custody was a returned convict, a professional thief, now charged with stealing one shilling.

No male, tried by jury at assizes or quarter sessions, was in custody but two, summarily convicted of larcenies, and sentenced for five months each (2 and 3 months, consecutively,) two workhouse offenders (boys), and an old man for having a dog without a licence sentenced for one month, and 6 for assaults (including 2 for trial) constituted the entire number of male prisoners criminally committed who were inmates of the gaol. At the assizes then held (July, 1868) the presiding Judge, Baron Fitzgerald, in his charge to the Grand Jury, congratulated them on the small amount of crime in the county, the number of cases reported since the preceding assizes being only ten.

It appears also that, with the exception of the four or five professional thieves in custody, the boys for refusing to work in the Union, and the man for having a dog without a licence, all the offenders in the gaol had been committed for assaults resulting from the drunkenness and quarrelling, which unhappily are on the increase in this county.

Juveniles.

No juvenile under sixteen years of age was an inmate of the gaol on either of my visits, although in July, three, whose ages did not much exceed that period, were in custody. From the return made to the prison office it appears that 5 male, and 2 female juveniles were committed in 1867. One was on remand at the close of the year, the others were summarily convicted by magistrates at petty sessions. One, a female, was twice convicted, having twice absconded from a reformatory. This girl, who is of a most perverse disposition, had misconducted herself in another reformatory in the south of Ireland, and was pronounced incorrigible. She was, however, with some others of her class, transferred to the reformatory at Sparke's Lake, in Monaghan, and hopes are entertained that she will ultimately be reclaimed.

In 1868, 3 males and 1 female were committed; 1 male, twelve years of age, was sentenced to be sent to a reformatory after his punishment of imprisonment of one month in the gaol. The female also, who was nine years of age, was likewise sent to a reformatory at the end of her sentence of imprisonment of fourteen days.

The Governor of the gaol very properly keeps all juveniles to be sent to reformatories in strict separation, and they do not attend the prison school, but are taught in their cells.

Lunatics.

When I visited the gaol, on the 20th of February, in the present year, 14 (6 males and 8 females) insane persons, committed as dangerous lunatics, were in custody. One of these, M. C., aged twenty-four, committed 24th December, 1867, died on the 3rd July following, of fever. The other, an old woman, A. C., aged 70, died on the 8th July from mortification, caused by bed sores and general sinking, notwithstanding that the Medical Officer had ordered her wine and quinine to support her constitution. With reference to the former, M. C., the Medical Officer remarks in his journal:—"The curious feature of this girl's illness was that from the day she took the fever she quite recovered her intellects, and they were quite clear up to a few hours before her death."

Early in the year 1869 the lunatic asylum of this district will be opened, and then this gaol will be relieved from the sad results of the Act 1 Vict., cap. 27, now happily repealed. It is, therefore, unnecessary for me to dwell further on this subject than to remark that one female lunatic, M. M.,* who has now been between ten and eleven years in custody here as a dangerous lunatic was formerly a returned convict, and had been an inmate of this gaol, when sane, frequently for robbery; and, it would appear, that having been accustomed to a prison life, her constitution did not suffer from committal to a gaol, which breaks the health of so many insane persons not so circumstanced.

* This woman, after frequent convictions and imprisonments in Monaghan Gaol, was, at spring assizes, 1853, sentenced to transportation for ten years, but was discharged in September, 1855. She was re-committed as a dangerous lunatic in December, 1857, and still remains an inmate of the gaol incurably insane.

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Monaghan Gaol.

In the month of October, 1868, the Board of Superintendence held an investigation into the conduct of one of the Turnkeys, who appears to have ill-treated a male lunatic, having struck him on the head with a bunch of keys. The Governor, on hearing of the circumstance, at once suspended the Turnkey, who sent in his resignation; and as the family of the lunatic were not inclined to proceed against the officer in a criminal court, it was unnecessary to take further steps in the matter. The lunatic, who was very violent and a most unfit subject for a prison, was subsequently removed to Armagh Lunatic Asylum.

The sewerage of the infirmaries, which are detached, and in which insane prisoners are kept, is defective, notwithstanding that the gaol is built on an eminence, and I observe the following memorandum in the journal of the Medical Officer on 23rd January, 1868:—"When the wind blows in a certain direction the stench from the privy of the female infirmary through the lower part of the prison is very bad; to-day it is intolerable." The lunatics are kept in the infirmaries, and the death of two out of eight within less than five months may have been hastened from this cause. The want of due separation of the insane prisoners and their sane attendants referred to by my colleague in his last report, still continues.

I found the prison buildings in sound repair, although marks of damp, referred to by my colleague in his report for 1867, still remain. The criminal prison was in good order, the plastering on the new work in the female prison which was renewed last year having now dried out satisfactorily. The alteration made in the crank-pump, although attended with expense, is found of great advantage in equalizing hard labour, and apportioning it to all prisoners. The cost of fixing clutch-brake and safety-cranks, and supplying self-acting gongs for notifying the time for changing the relays of men to work the pump was £24, this includes the apparatus for taking it out of gear when necessary. I found some of the privies when I inspected in July not in a satisfactory condition, and I have already referred to the observations of the Medical Officer on the subject.

Some improvement must be made in the old hospitals now occupied by lunatics, unless when the insane are removed to the new asylum these buildings are altogether disused, as not being required.

The ventilation in some of the cells is not sufficient during the summer months, and the bedding in use is not in a satisfactory state. The sheets were full of holes, and in the female prison only one on some beds. A few of the blankets also are thin and worn. All that could be repaired should be mended, the rest replaced by new ones from the store. The prison clothing is in fair order, and sufficient for present requirements, but some female underclothing is rather scanty.

I questioned all the prisoners in custody, and found no cause of complaint. The male criminal prisoners appear amenable to discipline; the few females in custody are employed for the most part as nurses of lunatics and to assist them to wash in the laundry, which is one of the most suitable employments for lunatics. When the insane are removed from the prison a more strict discipline in the female department must be enforced. No change or alteration has been made in the prison building since last inspection, nor do I suggest any expense to be incurred under existing circumstances.

The prison cells are unlocked at half-past six o'clock, A.M., in summer, and at seven in winter, and are locked for the night by the turnkey of the ward, in presence of the Governor, at six o'clock P.M. During the winter months gas is kept lighting in the cells until eight o'clock, when the Governor again goes round, and ascertains that each prisoner is in his cell. The night watch comes on duty at ten o'clock, when the keys are taken in charge by the Governor, who keeps them in his bed-room during the night. One tell-tale clock has been put up in the central hall, answering the double purpose of a clock to regulate the time, and a detector in case of neglect of the night guard on duty.

No escape was attempted from the prison in 1867 or 1868, previously to inspection, but a male prisoner, charged with assault, effected his escape from Carrickmacross Bridewell on the 15th of June, 1868.

Net profit—the produce of prisoners' labour disposed of outside the gaol—for the last three years:—

1865, . £4 17*s.* 0*d.* | 1866, . £4 5*s.* 6*d.* | 1867, . £12 13*s.* 6*d.*

Males sentenced to hard labour work at the crank pump for four hours daily; when sufficient water has been pumped up for the use of the establishment, the pumping machinery is thrown out of gear, and the power of the prisoners is wasted, weights being put on the axle to give the required amount of hard labour. Stone-breaking and oakum-picking for males, and knitting, flowering, and washing for females, constitute the principal employment of the inmates; but when a tradesman is in custody his skill is applied to the manufacture of clothing and other articles for the gaol.

School-hours.—Males, from 12 to 2 o'clock; females, from 12 to 2 o'clock.

It will be seen from the preceding schedule that no school was held in this prison previously to July, when I made my inspection in 1868, and the averages in 1867 were only 4 of males and 3 of females during the year. The persons appointed as teachers are, one of the turnkeys for males, and the assistant matron for females, both untrained. The school-rooms are partitioned.

Dietary and Contracts.

Of Prisoners whose term of Imprisonment shall not exceed One Month.

Class 1 (Males).—Breakfast—8 oz. meal in stirabout, and 1 pint of buttermilk. Dinner—14 oz. white bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup.

Class 2 (Females).—Breakfast—7 oz. meal in stirabout, and 1 pint of buttermilk. Dinner—12 oz. white bread, and one pint of vegetable soup.

Class 3 (Males and Females under 15 years).—Breakfast—5 oz. meal in stirabout, and 1 pint of buttermilk. Dinner—8 oz. white bread and 1 pint vegetable soup. Supper—4 oz. white bread.

Whose term of Imprisonment shall exceed One Week, Untried Prisoners, and Poor Debtors.

Class 1 (Males).—Breakfast—8 oz. meal in stirabout, and 1 pint of buttermilk. Dinner—14 oz. white bread, and 1 pint of new milk. Supper—6 oz. white bread, and ½ pint new milk.

Class 2 (Females).—Breakfast—7 oz. meal in stirabout, and 1 pint of buttermilk. Dinner—12 oz. white bread, and ½ pint of new milk. Supper—5 oz. white bread, and ½ pint of new milk.

Class 3 (Males and Females under 15 years).—Breakfast—5 oz. meal, and 1 pint buttermilk. Dinner—8 oz. bread and 1 pint of vegetable soup. Supper—5 oz. bread and ½ pint of new milk.

Lunatics—Beef and soup for dinner twice a week.

Contracts—Bread, white, per stone, 2*s.* 7½*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt., 17*s.*; meat, per lb.; 6*d.*; new milk, per gallon, 9*d.*; buttermilk, per gallon, 3*d.*; salt, per cwt., 2*s.*; coal, per ton, 19*s.* 2*d*; straw, per cwt., 2*s.* 6*d.*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 8*s.* 4*d.*; candles, per lb., 5½*d.*; soap, per cwt., £1 5*s.* 6*d.*

1865, . 2·5*d.* | 1866, . 3·26*d.* | 1867, . 3·26*d.*

The food for the use of the prisoners on the different occasions when I visited was of good quality, but I observe that the Chaplains, who report on the tabular form recommended for their use, sometimes take exception to the milk, and on one occasion, in March, 1868, the milk is stated to have been half water. I questioned all the prisoners in custody and found no cause of complaint.

Books and Accounts.

I found the books and registries of the prison well and carefully kept, and in the forms directed by the rules of the Queen's Bench and recommended by the Inspector-General. The Medical Officer enters in his journal the details of the various cases which require comments from him. The Local Inspector verifies the receipt and issue of provisions and the accounts, but he has not a separate journal. One should be provided for him, in which he could note the occurrences of the gaol under his inspection. Members of the Board also occasionally examine the books and satisfy themselves of the correctness of the entries. I found the Officers' Conduct Book blank ; it should be at once filled up, and it would be found a valuable record of the efficiency or otherwise of subordinates, the length of service, and the claims of those officers for promotion who are punctual and attentive to their duties in the prison.

Net cost of gaol, including diet and salaries, for the three preceding years :—

The turnkeys are supplied with fuel and light, but do not receive food rations. Since last inspection one turnkey was dismissed, having been convicted of supplying tobacco to a prisoner, and of having delivered a letter to another prisoner without the knowledge of the Governor. On a former occasion great laxity was proved to exist in this gaol in these particulars, and the Board has now shown a determination to punish every officer found guilty of such offences. the Prisons Act gives power to magistrates to summarily convict any person who shall bring or attempt to introduce letters, tobacco, or any other prohibited article into a gaol, and such offender shall be imprisoned with or without hard labour for one calendar month, unless he shall pay a fine not less than £2, or more than £5.

In 1868 one turnkey resigned, it having been proved that he ill-treated a lunatic in the gaol.

The old hospital buildings are set apart for the occupation of such lunatics as still remain in the gaol. I have already pointed out the defects of these buildings. The hospital accommodation in the criminal prison is sufficient for the requirements of the establishment.

The Board meets regularly each month for the transaction of business, when the salaries of the intern officers are paid monthly under a recent arrangement which is found to be an accommodation to men with small incomes. The salaries of the externs are presented for and paid half-yearly at assizes; also an estimated sum in advance for provisions, fuel and other necessaries, the Local Inspector's accounts having been previously audited and certified by the Board of Superintendence.

Bridewells.

As has already been remarked in former reports of the Inspectors-General, the keeper of the Carrickmacross Bridewell is an unmarried man, which is objectionable, as females are sometimes committed to his care, and there is no power given under the Prisons Act to appoint a matron to a bridewell.

In July, 1868, I was requested by the Chairman of the Board of Superintendence to ascertain why bedticks with the brand of the Monaghan Union were supplied to the bridewell at Carrickmacross, and I then ascertained that they had been purchased from the Guardians by the late Local Inspector, in November, 1856, at 2*s.* 3*d.* each, and the vouchers were produced to me from the books of the gaol.

Each bridewell was inspected by the Local Inspector once in every three months during the first nine months of 1866, but not during the last quarter, in consequence of the illness of that officer.

On the day when I made my inspection, besides 1 lunatic and 8 debtors, 17 male and 8 female prisoners were in custody. The females were—two committed for begging, and 1, a prostitute from Athlone, for drunkenness. Two others, likewise committed from Athlone, "were for loitering for prostitution," and sentenced to imprisonment for one and five months respectively; two, both old offenders, sentenced for six months, for larceny, and a servant girl for five months, for concealing a birth, these constituted the entire number of female inmates of the gaol at the time of inspection.

Besides a boy convicted of having travelled without a railway ticket, and a man sentenced to imprisonment for four hours for being drunk, 15 males were in charge, when I visited, 3 of whom were soldiers, 1 sentenced to imprisonment for two years for disgraceful conduct, and 2 for one year each, for larceny. Five others were offenders gainst the person, viz.—2 for stabbing and manslaughter, sentenced to imprisonment for two years and eighteen months respectively; 1 for felonious assault, for twelve months, and 2 for trifling assaults, sentenced for one month each.

The offenders against property were, an epileptic man, who had previously been an inmate of the lunatic asylum of the district, now sentenced to two years' imprisonment for stealing a blanket; 2 men sentenced for eighteen months for stealing wool; another for six months for stealing a mule; one under a like sentence of six months, for larceny; a workhouse offender committed for three months, for stealing clothes from the union, and 1 for one month for cutting timber.

There was also in custody, 1 male, sentenced to imprisonment for five weeks for attacking a house.

I have enumerated the different offences of the prisoners in charge, when I visited, because I wish to show, that although the sentences on the prisoners are heavy, the crimes are, for the most part, of a nature which do not show a generally criminal condition of the district, and crime amongst the female population is, in a great measure, confined to the prostitutes who inhabit the purlieus of the military station at Athlone.

Thus on the day of my visit, one-half of the males under sentence of imprisonment in this associated gaol, were for periods of twelve months and upwards, but it is unnecessary for me to dwell on the evils of such association, because should the Bill introduced by Government during the present session become law, all prisoners under long sentences would be removed to a central depot, as in Scotland, where a strict discipline would be enforced.

Juveniles.

Four male and 2 female juveniles only were committed to this gaol in 1867—all for trifling offences; 3 males and 1 female were sentenced for a term of one month each; the other two for short periods. During 1868, 4 were committed; a boy and a girl for stealing turf; a workhouse offender for stealing the union clothes, and the boy now in custody convicted of travelling without a ticket on the railway.

Lunatics.

One insane prisoner was in charge on the day of inspection, but under the salutary provisions of the Act passed in 1867—Act 30 and 31 Vic., cap. 118, it is no longer legal to commit the insane to a gaol, and it is hoped that this man will soon be transferred to the asylum of the district. I regret, however, to observe the occasional committals to bridewells in this district of insane persons, in consequence of the difficulty sometimes experienced in finding a second magistrate to sign the authority for removal to the district lunatic asylum, and I believe that it would prevent unnecessary harassing of the insane, and their illegal committal to bridewells, or to the charge of the police, under coercion, if the law were altered and the signature of one justice made sufficient for removal to the asylum, no abuse could arise from this change, as the authorities of the asylum have power to discharge the patient when fit to be at large.

I found this gaol, on my inspection, very clean and orderly, the prison buildings (with the exception of an old fever shed adjoining the female hospital) are in sound repair. That shed, however, is in a most ruinous state. It is perfectly useless, and such of the materials as are sound might be sold to pay for the cost of taking it down.

The entire roof of the prison has lately been repaired; the woodwork was painted in 1866; the bells are all in good order.

Since last inspection no alteration has been made in the general establishment, or in the arrangement of the buildings, and the defects enumerated in previous reports of the Inspectors-General on this gaol, still continue. Under present circumstances I do not counsel any expensive improvements, but there is one evil connected with this gaol which should be remedied as affecting the health of the inmates. I refer to the defective sewerage of the establishment, and I again call attention to the subject, because proper sewerage can be made by prison labour, and it will always be necessary so long as the buildings are in use, whether as a prison, barrack, or other public institution; besides I perceive that several cases of typhus fever (six cases) occurred during the past year in the gaol. The County Surveyor, Mr. Kelly, has submitted a plan for the improvement of the sewers, which I am informed has met the approval of the Board, and would do away with the evils which at present exist.

In my report on this gaol, in 1866, I called attention to the matter, and I here repeat the observations I then made:—

A privy in the marshalsea building has been pointed out by the Inspectors-General in their reports for several years as objectionable in a sanitary point of view; only water-closets should be in inhabited buildings. In order that the evils resulting from the effluvia coming from an open privy under such circumstances may be understood, I append the following observations published by the Royal Sanitary Commissioners in their report to Parliament in 1861. They state:—"It is a law of our organization that organic matters excreted from the body cannot be reintroduced into it without danger to health and life. The lungs are the medium through which aerial poisons of this nature reach the blood. The blood becomes gradually diseased, of which blanching and loss of vigour are the first effects, indicating a steady deterioration of the constitution and great susceptibility to colds from slight exposure—consumption, as well as diarrhœa, dysentery, fever, and other zymotic diseases are the results."

Again, cesspools are sunk in each of the prison yards, one close to the pump-hole, from which water for the use of the prison is taken; a sewer also passes close by. The evil is aggravated by the sinking of a new well-hole commenced last summer, even nearer to a cesspool and the sewer. This well-hole is evidently supplied with water principally by infiltration from the adjoining soil, and not from a deep spring, otherwise the supply of water would not fall off after dry weather, as at present; thus water polluted by fecal matter is in use in the gaol, imperilling the health and even life of the inmates, especially lunatics, whose low state of vitality makes them peculiarly susceptible of the poison.

The Royal Sanitary Commissioners remark—"The cesspool system of drainage is based on the assumption that the fluid shall be disposed of by polluting the subsoil, the worst possible expedient for health. Indeed drainage by cesspools is so objectionable that it ought never to be permitted near inhabited dwellings;" and water obtained from wells under such circumstances is contaminated by the "nuisances within the area affording soluble organic matter and salts, which are carried with the water to the lowest level, which is the well." The Commissioners further state that the impurities are not generally cognizable by taste or smell.

Parkes, in his work on practical hygiene, states that ten grains of such impurities in a gallon of water used for drinking purposes, are sufficient to produce diarrhœa and dysentery, diseases which appear to have peculiarly affected patients in this gaol. He quotes numerous authorities on the subject, and adds—"An endemic of diarrhœa is almost always owing either to impure air, impure water, or bad food, but is far more likely to be produced by bad water than by any other cause. The putrefying organic matter, whether floating in the atmosphere or in drinking water, is received into the mouth and produces its effect directly on the mucous membrane, or is absorbed into the blood, thus becoming the source of disease and death."

On the day of my visit, the stench from the privy in the house occupied as a marshalsea could be perceived even in the open air outside the building. According to the plan recommended by the County Inspector, the sewers will run outside and behind the prison, so that the danger of contamination, from cesspools and sewers, of the atmosphere of the gaol, as well as of the water in the well-hole, now being sunk, will be prevented. The outflow from the privies will pass into the new drains, and the cesspools now existing in each of the exercising yards, which require to be emptied periodically, and the filth barrowed through the prison, will be got rid of. A sub-main will be led from the separate cells of the female prison, and the drainage from the laundry, the Governor's house, and the outbuildings will discharge into the present main drain of the prison.

The following are other defects in this gaol:—

1. There is not sufficient separation of prisoners. The classification

NORTH DISTRICT.

County of Roscommon Gaol.

for males is under the Prisons Act. They are divided into two classes —felons and misdemeanants—each again subdivided into two more— the tried and the untried; and although each prisoner sleeps and takes his meals in his cell, no other separation is attempted. Neither the laundry nor the stone sheds are partitioned. The classification of the females is under the separate system, but I cannot ascertain that it is strictly enforced.

2. The male marshalsea does not admit of the classification which the law directs, and there is no marshalsea for females, who, when in custody, remain in the hospital.

3. The chapel is ill-constructed, and the sittings unsuitable.

4. There are no covered lavatories for males, nor baths in the prison, except those in the hospital for females, which are never used, notwithstanding that the Prisons Act, sec. 109, rule 9, enacts "all prisoners shall have free access to the bath and necessary in their respective parts of the prison at all reasonable hours."

I found the bedding, sheets, blankets, and the clothing of the inmates ample for the requirements of the prison, and of good quality. A supply of new blankets was obtained in 1866, and a quantity of prison clothing is in store. The well-hole now sinking for the supply of the prison with water had reached sixty feet when I visited, and it was five feet deeper than the old well-hole. Two prisoners were then employed at the work.

Unlock is held in the gaol at six, A.M., in summer, and at seven, A.M., in winter. The prisoners are locked for the night in their cells at six, P.M., in summer, and at five, P.M., in winter. No gas-light is furnished to the prison unless externally. The Governor is present at lock-up with the warder in charge, and he afterwards visits the prison at unexpected hours during the night. He has established a system of supervision over the night patrol, which is stated to be effective. There is, however, but one tell-tale clock. It is placed in the hospital, at the farthest end of the grounds; the guardroom for the night watch is at the entrance to the gaol. The markings of the tell-tale clock are entered in the morning State Book.

Photography is in use here for the detection of criminals, old offenders, who have wandered from other parts of the country.

No escape was attempted from this gaol in 1867 or 1868.

Members of the Board of Superintendence give orders for visiters to see prisoners, but I understand the privilege is not often exercised.

The Protestant Chaplain visits the school, and enters his reports in the book kept for the purpose. His reports are favourable. I found no record of the visits of the Roman Catholic Chaplain. There are no maps, black board, &c., supplied for teaching the prisoners, and the teachers are untrained. The male teacher acts also as Clerk to the Board.

This school is not in connexion with any public educational body.

The above schedule of the employment of the prisoners on the day of my visit is, I understand, a fair sample of the work which they perform. Except stone-breaking there is little remunerative employment, hence the profits obtained from the labour of the prisoners amounted to but £5 2*s.* 7*d.* in 1867, and but £4 15*s.* 2*d.* in the previous year. Shot drill and the tread-wheel are in use. The tread-wheel is partitioned, but not the relief stalls.

I found the food provided for the prisoners on the days of my visit of good quality, and no complaint was made to me by any of the inmates whom I questioned. The Chaplains regularly report on the quality of the provisions furnished for the use of the prisoners. With the exception of the milk, which is very often faulty and rejected, the food supply is generally stated to be satisfactory.

Books and Accounts.

The Governor enters all occurrences worthy of note in his journal, which, as also that of the Local Inspector, is carefully kept. All the other superior officers have journals. The various records of statistics and finance prescribed by the rules of the Queen's Bench, and recommended by the Inspectors-General, with the exception of the Officers' Conduct Book, are in use. The state of dietary abstract is checked and initialed daily.

None of the officers receive food rations, or allowances instead, but the warders are supplied with suitable uniforms. The officers take their meals in the guard-room at the entrance to the gaol.

Net cost of gaol, including diet and salaries, for the three preceding years:—

1865, . £1,729 18*s.* 2*d.* | 1866, . £1,596 9*s.* 4*d.* | 1867, . £1,626 7*s.* 11*d.*

There are separate hospitals for prisoners of each sex, but they are seldom used, especially that for females. The wards have water-closets and lavatories attached. No death has occurred in this gaol since 1866, when eight lunatics deceased.

The bath in the hospital is almost useless from the want of water. A boiler is placed in the bath-room, but the flue is out of order, and when a hot bath is ordered to be given to a patient, the water must be carried in tubs from the cook-house.

The Board meets for the transaction of business on the second Saturday of each month, when liabilities are discharged by separate cheques for each creditor, unless where the amounts are small; they are then included in one draft drawn in favour of the Local Inspector. The intern officers receive their salaries monthly; the Chaplains half-yearly at assizes; and the Local Inspector and Medical Officer quarterly.

Bridewells.

The bridewells in this county are not well maintained. The salaries paid to the bridewell keepers (£15 to each) are far too low for persons holding their responsible position. The accommodation in all is very faulty, and most of the requirements of the Prisons Act are wanting.

The Local Inspector regularly inspected the bridewells once at least in each quarter of the year 1868.

County of Sligo Gaol

The small number of females committed to this gaol is remarkable. From the preceding tables it appears that in no year since 1863 has the average number of prisoners of that sex in custody exceeded 5. On the day of my visit 3 (prostitutes) were the only occupants of the female prison, and 1 of these, who had been arrested in Sligo, is an inhabitant of the town of Ballina, in the county Mayo. In the course of the past year (1867), altogether 79 individual female prisoners were inmates of the gaol; some, however, were frequently committed—one twelve, another seven, and one five times during the year, hence the number of committals amounted to 118. One woman in charge when I made my inspection has already been 26 times convicted and sentenced to imprisonment here, and an associated prison such as this is has no terrors for persons of her class.

It is satisfactory to observe that crime amongst the female classes in this county is confined to few individuals, for the most part prostitutes belonging to the seaport towns of the district.

I found 20 males in charge, 1 an idiotic and epileptic boy, who had been sentenced to one month's imprisonment for begging; 3 were debtors; and 4 on remand, or committed for trial. Of the 13 convicted male prisoners in custody, 2 had been tried at quarter sessions, all the others summarily by magistrates sitting in petty sessions.

The following were the periods of sentences of the convicted prisoners in the gaol:—

„ „	one and two months, . .	6	1

Total convicted prisoners in custody on the day of inspection,		13	3

On examining the classes of offences of the male prisoners in charge, I find that but 2 of those under sentence were for larceny, 1 an old offender constantly recurrent to the gaol. The other, his first offence, convicted of stealing potatoes. One man, for deserting his wife, had been sentenced to two months' imprisonment, and the idiotic boy to one month for begging. All the other males were for assaults, one of whom had been previously in custody, committed as a dangerous lunatic. Two brothers were under sentence for manslaughter the result of a quarrel arising from drink. A returned convict was on remand from petty sessions for stealing meal; and a man was in custody charged with stealing a watch, but the offence was committed in the year 1866.

As has already been observed, the only female prisoners in custody were under committals for loitering for prostitution.

Juveniles.

The idiot boy whom I found in custody was the only juvenile committed to this gaol during the five and a half months of 1868 which preceded my visit. His father is dead, and his mother has now no means of support, although I am told that neither ever received relief from the union, or had been in gaol. He is fifteen years of age, and at the time of my visit he slept in the hospital, and required the attendance of two adult prisoners to care him. Since my inspection he has been removed, by warrant of the Lord Lieutenant, to the lunatic asylum of the district, where he should have been placed in the first instance.

Six juveniles (boys) were committed in 1867; 2 of whom were sentenced to one month's imprisonment as a punishment for picking pockets, afterwards to be sent to a reformatory. One female was also committed for larceny in 1867. She also was sent to a reformatory.

During the period which preceded my inspection, in 1868, 6 male and 2 female prisoners were committed for breaches in the revenue laws. Five males were, previously to my visit, in the gaol under arrest for debt; 3 were inmates of it on the day of inspection. Seven males and 1 female were so arrested in 1867.

NORTH DISTRICT. County of Sligo Gaol.

I found this gaol, when I made my inspection in June, 1868, in the same satisfactory condition of cleanliness and order as when I visited it in former years. The grounds are neatly kept and planted with flowers; the buildings well ventilated and in fair repair, except the woodwork of some of the sheds for stone-breakers, and the sills of a few of the windows, which are unsound. Painting is also required, and the wooden gate, at A on the plan, should be repaired.

The supply of prison clothing and bedding is sufficient, and, with the exception of a few rugs and blankets, they are of excellent quality. Water for the prison is derived from a spring of good water on the hill which rises behind the gaol in Captain Martin's demesne, at about half a mile distant, and it is conveyed by pipes into two large tanks, one on each side of the gate, whence an abundant supply to the different yards and sections of the prison is obtained in ordinary years, but at the time of my visit the supply was scanty, and the Governor accompanied me to the spring, which we found choked with sods, stones, and clay that had fallen through the opening. We then arranged that a proper cover should be placed over the spring, either a large flag, or a wooden frame and door of oak or some wood which will not easily rot.

There are, besides, two pumps on the premises—the water of that in the hospital yard is excellent. The tread-wheel throws up soft water from the river for washing purposes and the flushing of the sewerage.

The marshalsea building for males in this prison is excellent, with proper separation for the different classes. There is an abundance of storage suitably fitted up. The hospital is also commodious, but the prison for criminals is straggling and very expensive to keep up; hence the large outlay on the establishment and the average cost of the few prisoners in custody is very great, amounting in 1867 to £54 1*s.* 8*d.* for each.

The defects of this gaol have been enumerated in former reports of Inspectors-General. I shall, however, here recapitulate them—they are the want of proper separation and other requirements in the laundry and elsewhere; the school-room is unsuitable. There are no water-closets attached to the wards in the hospital, although a closet lies off each which could be fitted up for the purpose; the large gate is not sufficiently secure.

I do not however counsel that any expense, not absolutely required for security or the health of the inmates, be incurred in making alterations until the wishes of the Legislature are obtained on the proposition now before the House of Commons, to remove all long sentenced prisoners and grave offenders to a central depot, under the immediate management and control of Government.

Unlock is held at 6 A.M. in summer, and at 7 A.M. in winter. The prisoners are locked for the night at 6 P.M. in summer, and 5 P.M. in winter.

One turnkey patrols at night, in rotation, in the interior of the prison, so that prisoners can communicate with him if necessary; there is no exterior patrol. Two detector clocks are in use to test the vigilance of the turnkey on duty, one placed in the guard-room, the other in the passage to the Chapel. The watchman is himself bound to report any neglect of duty which he may commit.

This gaol is not artificially lighted by gas or otherwise.

Photography has not hitherto been employed in this gaol for the detection of offenders. In a former report I recommended that a photographer in the town of Sligo might occasionally be employed, when there is reason to believe that a professional offender, whose antecedents should be traced, has found his way into this gaol.

No escape has been attempted from the gaol in either 1867 or 1868.

Here discipline is maintained with few punishments, and in no instance was it necessary to call for the intervention of a magistrate during the present year. Nine punishments were inflicted by the Governor, but only on five individuals; 1 female was four times punished, and 1 male twice. The record of punishments was duly laid before the Board at its meetings and signed by the chairman.

The Governor has a general knowledge of trades which can be carried on in a prison, and one of the turnkeys, Buchanan, is a shoemaker by trade, and gives instructions in his art to prisoners, another warder (Crawford) is also a shoemaker, but he acts solely as gate porter.

Prisoners sentenced to hard labour exercise at shot drill for two hours, and work the treadwheel from 10 A.M. to 3 P.M. daily. Stone-breaking, and in winter bone-crushing, oakum-picking, net-making, and occasionally shoemaking and tailoring, constitute the industrial employment of the males. The females are occupied at washing, sewing, knitting, and picking oakum.

The hospital buildings are commodious and suitable, the wards properly ventilated, but without water-closets. There is only one bath for prisoners of both sexes. It is, as has been observed in former reports, on the female side, in a small dark room. The Medical Officers of the gaol are very attentive to their duties.

The total number of committals and recommittals to the gaol in 1867 amounted to 315 of males and 132 of females; which included 270 individual male and 81 female prisoners, of whom 14 males and 1 female were juveniles. Twenty-eight males and 21 females were committed more than once during the year, 1 male and 5 females having in that year undergone more than five commitments. One hundred and sixty-nine males and 31 females were returned as having never been in custody prior to 1867, and 108 males and 51 females have been committed—the males 486 times and the females 424 times.

I found when I made my inspection 26 males and 11 females inmates of the gaol, four of whom were pauper debtors, and two on remand or for trial. Twenty-two males and 9 females were under sentences—17 who had been tried by jury at assizes or quarter sessions, and 13 summarily before magistrates at petty sessions. Ten (8 males and 2 females) were under long sentences—4 of two years, 3 of eighteen months, 2 of one year, and 1 of ten months, the latter convicted of sedition. Seven had been convicted of larcenies or highway robberies, and were for the most part professional thieves, who return to their former mode of life immediately on discharge from prison. One, sentenced for eighteen months for assault with intent to rob, is known to be a returned convict.

The public can only be protected from the depredations of inveterate criminals of this class by long sentences of penal servitude and police supervision on discharge, in order that should they return to crime, they can at once be recommitted.

I believe that the principle of the Bill introduced last session into Parliament—that all criminals sentenced to imprisonments exceeding six months should be sent to a central depot, as in Scotland—would mainly tend to this result: their antecedents would then become known to the prison authorities, and through them to the presiding Judge, and they could not year after year pass from one gaol district to another for the purpose of plunder, and, when detected, often escape with short sentences of imprisonment; so that after a few months they obtain their discharge and recommence their former mode of life. Some of the females also belong to this class; two were under sentences of imprisonment for two years, and others, although now only sentenced to short imprisonments, are constantly recurrent to the gaol.

Five prisoners (4 males and 1 female) had been sentenced for six, 1 (a female) for four, and 2 for three months each, the rest for short periods.

At the assizes immediately preceding my inspection, Mr. Justice George, who presided, in his address to the Grand Jury of the county, congratulated them on the peaceful condition of the district:—"There was," he observed, "an almost total absence of crime from the calendar. He was sorry to find, however, from the returns of the Constabulary, that the habit of intoxication was very prevalent through the county, no fewer than 748 cases of this offence having been returned."

At that assizes a prisoner was convicted of a violent assault with a hammer on one of the warders of the gaol, the officer was, however, protected by another prisoner, otherwise he would have been seriously injured in the attack. The Judge sentenced the offender to five years' penal servitude.

Debtors.

The four debtors who occupied the marshalsea of this prison when I visited it were all supported at the expense of the ratepayers of the district. One, who has been an inmate of the gaol since December, 1865, was arrested on a decree for £10 15*s.* 10*d.*, with costs, amounting to £11 16*s.* 4*d.* As each prisoner in this gaol cost for maintenance an average sum of £36 18*s.* 5*d.* in 1866, £32 13*s.* 11*d.* in 1867, and £40 10*s.* 8*d.* in 1868, this man had already cost for maintenance upwards of £100; yet he has, I am informed, property, which he refuses to surrender to his creditors, and he is permitted, through a defect in the law, to live here without expense—a tax on the industry of the honest ratepayers, who are compelled to pay for his support.

Another pauper debtor in the gaol was in custody as I am informed, for a debt of £1 18*s.* 1*d.*, with costs, amounting to £2 8*s.* 9*d.* He is a farm labourer, and states that he has no means to pay the costs required to file his schedule, in order that he may pass through the Insolvent Court. It is, therefore, very possible that he also, may remain a long time in charge, maintained at the expense of the county. I believe the law of debtor and creditor in Ireland requires, for many reasons, to be altered.

Juveniles.

No juvenile was in custody on the day of inspection, but 14 males and 4 females had been committed during the year 1868. None of them were sent to reformatories at the expiration of their sentences. Ten males and 1 female were committed in 1867, 1 of whom was under ten years of age; 1 was sentenced to imprisonment for two months, 2 for one, and 3, including the female, for fourteen days. Three males were sent to reformatories. Six males had both parents living, the other juveniles had lost one or both parents.

I found this gaol when I made my inspection very clean and well kept, the ventilation good, and the buildings in fair repair, with the exception of some of the woodwork in the hospital, and a crack which appears in the wall of the female prison; but I observe by the minutes of the Board that it has been ordered to be set right, and the County Surveyor has undertaken to give his attention to the work. The Board of Superintendence, indeed, appears to be very anxious to have any deficiencies remedied. There is one matter, however, which is still neglected, although I called attention to it in my report on this gaol in 1866. The crank-pump, which draws water into a tank over the machinery from the river, is very faulty, and one of the prisoners in the gaol met, some time previously to my visit, an accident from the machinery being uncovered, by which he lost one of his fingers. Some improvement is required to be made in this pump, which is the only expense I would suggest to be incurred in the present uncertain condition of legislation with regard to prisons in this country. In the month of July, in the present year, the life of a prisoner was lost from an accident caused by the working by prisoners in separate stalls, of a crank-pump, on a faulty principle, in Belfast gaol. I therefore feel it my duty to repeat in this report the diagram of a crank for working a pump, without danger of accidents, which is taken from my report in 1866. The laundry, water-closets, and baths, are supplied with water by the pump which I have condemned.

short shaft, E E, passing through the framework of the partition, A, of the compartment B, in which the prisoner is placed. The crank, C, is separate, and the pall at its end (which is kept in its place by a spring) drives the ratchet, and so transmits its motion through the shaft, E, and wheels, I J, to the main shaft, D; but should the prisoner in the compartment cease to work, although the action of the machine will not be interrupted, the ratchet travelling over the inactive pall will produce a clattering noise, which, with the increased labour on the remaining prisoners, must at once notify to the warder in charge when any one man stops work. The main shaft has also a registering apparatus which strikes a bell when a certain quantity of work has been performed, so that each relay of prisoners must accomplish an equal and known amount of labour.

The shaft runs at the back; the crank-handles are independent of each other, with a tell-tale rack connected with each; the movement is continuous; and a bell attached gives notice when the specified amount of labour has been accomplished, and the men are to cease work.

The Inspector-General of the district, in his report for 1867, called attention to the illegality of having criminal prisoners employed in association with pauper debtors when working the pump. I find that the Governor selects only untried prisoners and misdemeanants for the work, but the association with debtors of criminals under any circumstances cannot be sanctioned. The requirements of the Act are imperative, and should be obeyed.

Hard water is obtained in this gaol from a well on the prison grounds, at a depth of ninety feet. It is pumped up by the power of the tread-wheel, which is partitioned with iron plates, and is distributed to all the yards to which prisoners have access, who are thus supplied with good water for drinking purposes. There are three good water tanks on the premises, giving an abundant supply of water to all parts of the gaol.

The lavatories, sinks, water-closets, and baths in the male prison are on an improved principle, obtained from M'Farlane's Saracen Foundry, at Glasgow. Those in the female prison are of wood, lined with lead. The laundry and drying-room are on a good plan. Four of the washing troughs in the laundry are stalled. The bath for females is now close to the boiler, where a supply of hot water can always be had. The sewerage is stated to be effective. There is a very good kitchen, and proper lifts for removing the food, and arrangements have been made for conveying it to the different parts of the establishment. It is much to be regretted that when the Board of Superintendence expended so large a sum on the improvements of the gaol, they did not make the alterations on the most improved model. The expense would not have been considerably increased had the plan for altering the gaol in the neighbouring county of Monaghan, which has been found satisfactory, been adopted.

Some of the cells in this gaol are much too small for separation. There is no gas in the cells or corridors of the male prison. It is only in the female prison, the debtors' apartments, the yards, and externally. The stock of bedding, blankets, sheets, rugs, and prison clothing is sufficient for the requirements of the establishment, with a stock on hand. When the blankets become thin and worn they are used for underclothing of females, for which they are well suited. I questioned all the prisoners in custody, and found no cause of complaint.

Tables are much required in the prison cells; a close stool in each cell is the only seat or table for the prisoners.

Since last inspection stalls for prisoners waiting for their turn at the wheel have been put up, with lattice doors, adjoining the tread-wheel, and gongs have been attached to the punishment cells. The gateway at the entrance has been widened and much improved. There is a good chapel in the prison, and the sittings in it are properly arranged.

The prisoners are unlocked at six o'clock in summer, and at sunrise in winter. They then make their beds, and go to their daily work; at nine they breakfast, and at ten o'clock the teacher instructs the male prisoners in their cells; at twelve the males again go to work, and the females to school. Dinner is served at three o'clock, and work is resumed at four, until six o'clock in summer, and sunset in winter, when the cells are locked for the night, and the personal clothing of the prisoners removed; the locks of the cells are then tested by the officer in charge. The Governor or his deputy afterwards ascertains the presence of each prisoner in his cell, collects all keys, except one, which is left in charge of the turnkey on duty until nine o'clock, when the night-watch is set, all the officers being present, and the Governor or his deputy has satisfied himself that the fastenings are secure. At half-past ten o'clock the gaol is locked for the night; all keys of exterior and main entrances are then given to the Governor, in whose keeping they remain until six o'clock on the following morning. No superior officer has during 1868 gone round the gaol at late and unexpected hours, the prisoners being few and committed for slight offences, it was not considered necessary to do so.

No escape has been attempted from this gaol during the past or present year.

An iron safe has been ordered for the secure custody of the keys.

The keys are repaired within the prison by a competent person.

Convicted prisoners receive visits from friends only once in two months.

Two tell-tale clocks have been provided to test the accuracy of the night patrol, and the markings of the clocks are regularly entered in the State of the Prison at Lockings Book.

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour disposed of outside the gaol, for the last three years:—

1865, . £22 0*s.* 10*d.* | 1866, . £41 1*s.* 2*d.* | 1867, . £61 7*s.* 6*d.*

Industrial labour is here prosecuted with zeal, and the results are satisfactory. Mats of a superior description, and brushes, which bring a high price in the market, are made. The prisoners break stones, and work at the tread-wheel; the skill of tradesmen, when in gaol, is utilized for the benefit of the establishment. The females sew and sprig muslin.

School-hours.—Males, 10 to 12 o'clock. Females, 12 to 1 o'clock.

The prisoners are instructed in their cells by a competent teacher. He appears to be a zealous and painstaking officer, but he requires books, which should be provided. The school-books belonging to the Commissioners of National Education can be obtained for a mere trifle, and it is a pity that the teacher should not be provided with means to properly instruct his pupils.

Note.—Since this report was written the following adequate supply of books has been procured by the Board of Superintendence, who are always anxious to carry out the suggestions of my colleague and myself, viz.:—20 Geographies, 12 books of Arithmetic, 200 First Lesson Books, 100 Second Lesson Books, 50 Third Lesson Books, and 25 Spelling-books.

Dietary and Contracts.

Breakfast.—Males—8 oz. oatmeal and 1 pint buttermilk. Females—7 oz. oatmeal and 1 pint buttermilk.

Dinner.—Males—14 oz. white bread and 1 pint new milk. Females—12 oz. white bread and ¾ pint new milk.

Supper (for prisoners sentenced to above seven days).—Males—6 oz. white bread and ½ pint new milk. Females—5 oz. white bread and ½ pint new milk.

Contracts.—Bread, white, per 4 lb. loaf, 8*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt., 16*s.* 6*d.*; Indian meal, per cwt., 11*s.* 6*d.*; rice, per lb., 3*d*; meat, per lb., 8*d.*; new milk, per gallon, 7½*d.*; buttermilk, per gallon, 2¾*d.*; salt, per cwt., 1*s.* 5*d.*; coal, Scotch, per ton, 19*s.* 3*d.*; ditto, English, per ton, 19*s.* 10*d.*; turf, per box 80 cubic feet, 2*s.* 4½*d.*; straw, per cwt., 3*s.* 3*d.*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 6*s.* 8*d.*; candles, per dozen lbs., 5*s.* 8*d.*; soap, per lb., 3½*d.*

The food for the use of the prisoners, which I tasted when I inspected, was of good quality; and I observe that the Chaplains, who report in the tabular form recommended for their use, generally report favourably of the provisions supplied by the contractor, with the exception of the milk which is occasionally objected to as being thin and poor.

Books and Accounts.

The various registries of discipline and finance in this gaol are according to the forms prescribed by superior authority, and they appeared to me to be properly kept; but on my last visit in August, 1868, it became my duty to call attention to the fact that checks were wanting, which should be provided. All moneys on receipt ought at once to be handed over to the Governor, and none be permitted to remain in the possession of a subordinate officer. In April, 1867, my colleague, in his report on this gaol, observes:—

"I discovered, with regret, some palpable errors in the abstract of daily consumption when compared with the other forms, which constitute checks upon it."

And in May, 1868, the Local Inspector pointed out to the Board of Superintendence other defaults in this department, which were then passed over; but subsequently, in July, the following orders were made at the meeting of the Board:—

"Ordered—That in consequence of the numerous inaccuracies in the keeping of the accounts and general inattention to his business, the Deputy Governor be given a month's notice, and that advertisements be issued for the appointment of a successor on the 14th of August.

"Ordered—That in consequence of an error in the advertisement for coal, fresh tenders be invited, to be considered the next Board, 14th August."

The Deputy Governor and Clerk left the prison on the day following the meeting of the Board, and was dismissed.

All the superior officers, except the Local Inspector, have journals; that of the Governor is fully kept. The markings of the tell-tale clock are entered in the State of Prisons at Lockings Book.

Net cost of gaol, including diet and salaries, for the three preceding years:—

No change has been made in this department of the prison since last inspection, and the observations I then made still apply. No death has occurred in the gaol since January, 1866.

The regular hospitals are seldom used, being reserved for contagious diseases only; they have neither water-closets nor baths. Five cells in the second floor of the male prison are set apart for ordinary hospital cases, but the cells are very small, and quite unsuited for some diseases frequent amongst prisoners. I highly approve of cellular hospitals for prisons, such as have been adopted in the Belgian prisons, but they are of a very different construction from the cells here in use.

In December, 1867, a convicted prisoner was attacked with fever, but not attended with fatal results.

The Board meets monthly for the discharge of business, when the subordinate officers receive their salaries, and other liabilities are discharged. Small sums are paid by the Local Inspector, who accounts at the next meeting of the Board. Other accounts are paid by cheques, signed by three members of the Board, and countersigned by the Local Inspector.

The Governor and extern officers are paid their salaries half-yearly at assizes.

During the past year, 1867, 243 male and 57 female individuals were committed to this gaol, of whom 1 female and 8 males were juveniles. Of these, 202 males and 39 females had never previously been in custody; and 21 males and 14 females had been recommitted—some frequently during the year—41 males and 19 females committed in 1867, have been in custody, the males 290 and the females 532 times, showing how completely crime in the county of Westmeath is confined to few individuals.

I found in this gaol, when I made my inspection, 16 male and 4 female prisoners—(a boy committed for "leaving service," having previously on that day been bailed out). The following were the offences and sentences of the prisoners in custody:—

One prisoner was on remand, accused of "stabbing" in a drunken fight.

This small amount of criminals belonging to so a large an agricultural district as the county Westmeath, would seem to show a very satisfactory state of the county as regards crime, were it not that the perpetrators of a foul murder, committed some months anterior to my inspection, have never been discovered, and no person has been made amenable for that crime.

Three prisoners, convicted at quarter sessions of assaults, had been sentenced to imprisonment for twelve months each—one of whom was a policeman, not belonging to the district, who in a drunken row had used his sword; another prisoner, convicted of cattle stealing, had been sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment, with hard labour, at the assizes. All the other prisoners in custody had been summarily convicted by magistrates at petty sessions; one, however, convicted of stealing fowl is an old offender. This man has been convicted before the magistrates of four different larcenies of fowl, and has been sentenced to two months' imprisonment for each. Offenders of this class are generally irreclaimable, and it is to be regretted that opportunity was not afforded to have him tried at quarter sessions or assizes, in order that he might be sentenced to penal servitude.

All the other male prisoners in custody had been convicted summarily before the magistrates at petty sessions of trifling offences.

The females in charge on the day of inspection, were two prostitutes, committed for vagrancy and drunkenness—1 sentenced for six months, the other for fourteen days; 1 woman, for begging, sentenced for fourteen days, and 1 for larceny, for two months.

The female, H. F., committed for drunkenness, is a returned convict, who is constantly recurrent to the gaol—often recommitted a few hours after discharge on the termination of a previous conviction. A gaol has no terrors for persons of her class who have no means of earning a livelihood but by prostitution; and it is to be regretted that asylums, such as are on the continent of Europe, are not established for them. The following extract from the recommittals to this gaol shows the antecedents of this woman:—

Committed for loitering for prostitution, drunkenness, &c., between 16th March 1845, and 12th February, 1856, 130 times.

At Lent assizes, 1856, she was prosecuted as a vagrant, and sentenced to four years penal servitude.

She was discharged from the convict prison in February, 1860, and on the 11th March of that year, she was recommitted to the gaol for a like offence, and from that period to the present time she has recorded against her 112 convictions, beside having been in custody for an attempt at suicide, making a total, including the sentences to penal servitude, of two hundred and forty-four convictions against her.

Juveniles.

I found 1 boy, O. K., in custody, who has been several times recommitted to this gaol for assaults, disorderly conduct, and larceny. He is stated to be past sixteen years of age and too old to be sent to a reformatory. This lad is now under a sentence of two months' imprisonment, with hard labour, for assault. I am informed that one of his parents is dead, the other has remarried and cast him off. If he had been sent to a reformatory before he had passed the age when he could have been received into such an institution, he might have become a good citizen, which is now scarcely to be expected. I observe, however, that only 3 juveniles (males), under sixteen years, were committed here previously to inspection in 1868. All three were sent to reformatories after the period of their punishment in the gaol—no female was so committed. In 1867, 8 male juveniles and 1 female were in charge—1 was not convicted; 1 was sentenced to imprisonment for one month, and 1 for two months; the rest for short periods, not exceeding fourteen days, were sent to reformatories.

In my report on this gaol in 1866, I called attention to the advantage which might be derived by the application of photography to the identification and detection of old offenders, professional thieves, and strangers committed to this gaol. An arrangement might be made by contract with some person in the town of Mullingar for the occasional taking of such photographs, and the antecedents of professional thieves and others becoming known to the prison authorities, previously to their trial, would in many instances procure the infliction of deterrent and reformatory sentences of penal servitude, instead of imprisonments in this gaol.

When I made my inspection of this gaol I found it very clean and orderly, the buildings properly ventilated, in sound repair, and well kept. The accommodation for all classes of criminal prisoners is abundant, and that for male debtors quite sufficient, fully meeting the requirements of the 8th rule of the 109th sec. of the Prisons Act; but that for females is inadequate, consisting of only one room for both classes of such prisoners without a separate exercising ground; as, however, few female debtors are committed to this goal, none having been in custody during the last three years, I do not recommend any expense to be incurred in reference thereto. The supply of bedding and prison clothing is ample for the small number of prisoners committed to the gaol; there is always an abundance of pure water, which flows from a covered well on a rising ground outside the prison bounds, into a tank marked D on the plan of the gaol. The cisterns on the roof of the male and female prisons and the laundry are supplied by two force pumps, placed on the water course, a branch of the river Brosna, which passes through the prison, and afterwards receives the sewage of the establishment as marked on the annexed plan. From the abundance of the water supply and the short course of the sewers to the river much filth cannot lodge in them; nevertheless, no sewers should be without traps, to prevent the escape of noxious gases in dry weather. The mouths of these sewers are open, a defect which could easily be remedied, and at a very trifling expense, by placing effluvia traps on the mouth of each. The troughs in the laundry are partitioned into five stalls, and have a supply of hot and cold water; the drying-room, which is large (with nine horses) works well, and both male and female prisons have baths; that for male prisoners adjoins the water tank at D; the baths for females are behind the laundry. In three yards belonging to the male prison, corresponding with the cells heated for separation, there are covered lavatories. In the other compartments the prisoners wash at the water-cock in the yard, or at a bucket during bad weather. Water is in every cell of the female prison, and in all the yards of the male prison.

One of the day-rooms, enlarged by the addition of the adjoining room, an arch having been thrown across, is fitted up as a school with seventeen stalls. Alarm bells have been put up from the hospital and the female prison. Gas has been introduced into the prison halls, &c., for the accommodation of the night guard, but not into the cells.

Approximate separation is carried out in this gaol for females and for three classes of males, but the cells in the male prison are small, their measurement 9 feet by 6, and varying in height. They contain from 402 to 540 cubic feet of air each; they have no ventilating shafts, are flagged, and not artificially lighted; the bells are on a bad model, and are easily put out of order. The cells are distributed over three tiers of corridors. There are 13 for prisoners in Class No. 1, 16 in No. 2, and 14 in No. 3. The different sections have separate heating apparatus; and separate doors opening into the yards, so that there are altogether eleven outside doors to the male prison. The construction of this prison requires an expensive staff, and even then proper supervision by superior authority is very difficult; hence the large outlay in this gaol, notwithstanding that the Governor and Local Inspector manage the establishment with skill and economy, and the prisoners' labour is turned to a useful account. Much money is made by the mill, which besides is found to be a great convenience to the inhabitants of Mullingar and the neighbourhood.

I have felt it my duty to repeat the above observations, taken from my report in 1866, because they explain the circumstances of the gaol, and the expense of the establishment, each prisoner having cost £46 15*s.* 4*d.* for the year ending 31st December, 1867.

The stock-locks on the doors are of a good description, but can all be passed by one key, and would afford no obstacle for an escape should a pass-key be obtained. The many outer doors are another cause of insecurity in this gaol. The cell fastenings are large padlocks and open to the same objection. These observations, however, apply to many other county gaols in Ireland. A smith who works in the forge on the premises makes and repairs the locks; he is assisted by a prisoner who works the bellows. This, again, gives an opportunity for tampering with the locks of the gaol. The cells are unlocked in summer at 6.30, A.M., and in winter after the day breaks.

The cells are locked for the night at six o'clock, P.M., in summer, and at five in winter. The Governor and his deputy see all the cells locked by the turnkey in charge, having first ascertained that each prisoner is in his cell; and then the locks are duly tested. The night patrol goes on duty immediately after the lockings. A superior officer makes a final round at ten P.M. Two turnkeys hold watch in rotation, and their vigilance is secured by two tell-tale clocks, one in the office, the other on a corridor of the male prison, which are carefully secured against being tampered with. The hospital is locked at six, P.M., and the Governor makes a final inspection of it at ten, P.M.

There is one matter to which I wish to call attention with respect to the working of the mill. Formerly the prisoners worked it with large cranks, three at each, and the cranks were not stalled, so that each man could see what the others were doing. Since my last inspection the cranks have been altered, one man only works at each crank, which is stalled, and he does not see how his fellow-prisoners are working. The crank-handles are part of a continuous shaft, and a man not sufficiently on his guard is liable to be struck by the crank on his head or stomach at any moment. Two men were killed by the use of a similar crank in Mountjoy Prison before it was abandoned; and two men have also lost their lives in Belfast Gaol from a like cause. The last death occurred a few weeks previously to my inspection of this gaol. A prisoner in one of the stalls was struck by the handle of the crank in the stomach. He was carried by it over the shaft and pitched on his head on the other side, and when taken up was dead.

The following diagram represents a crank in use in many gaols in Ireland, and which can be put up here for a few pounds, and is perfectly safe and free from danger, besides having other advantages. I would, therefore, urge the Board of Superintendence to have such a crank connected with the mill without delay.

short shaft, E E, passing through the framework of the partition, A, of the compartment B, in which the prisoner is placed. The crank, C, is separate, and the pall at its end (which is kept in its place by a spring) drives the ratchet, and so transmits its motion through the shaft, E, and wheels, I J, to the main shaft, D; but should the prisoner in the compartment cease to work, although the action of the machine will not be interrupted, the ratchet travelling over the inactive pall will produce a clattering noise, which, with the increased labour on the remaining prisoners, must at once notify to the warder in charge when any one man stops work. The main shaft has also a registering apparatus which strikes a bell when a certain quantity of work has been performed, so that each relay of prisoners must accomplish an equal and known amount of labour.

The shaft runs at the back; the crank-handles are independent of each other, with a tell-tale rack connected with each; the movement is continuous; and a bell attached gives notice when the specified amount of labour has been accomplished, and the men are to cease work.

The preceding schedule of the employment of the prisoners on the day of my visit fairly represents the work at which they have been generally engaged during the year, except that when a tradesman is in custody his skill is turned to useful account for the benefit of the prison. Corn is purchased in the market and resold at a profit, after grinding into meal of 6*d.* per cwt. There is a good kiln on the premises for drying the corn. Indian corn is bruised in the mill for horse and fowl feeding at 10*s.* per ton. Stone-breaking pays 8*d.* and 9*d.* per ton. Four of the turnkeys are tradesmen.

As has been observed there is a good school-room in this gaol, with stalled seats placed round the wall. The teacher appears to be very attentive to his duties, and some of the prisoners have considerably improved in reading and writing under his instruction. One man sentenced for assault in January of the present year, who I am informed was illiterate when convicted, can now read and write fairly. The boy also, O. K., who has been several times recommitted, has learned to read and write in the gaol. The school is visited by the Inspector of the National Board of Education, and he reports favorably of the qualifications of the teacher who ranks 2nd of the 2nd class.

The provisions supplied to this gaol are excellent. The meal is ground in the mill, and of the best quality. I found a stock in hand of old meal of last year's corn. The potatoes, bread, and milk provided for the use of the prisoners were of good quality when I made my inspection, and the Chaplains report almost always favourably of the food sent in by the contractors. I observe that on two occasions exception was taken to the milk, but to no other article. I questioned all the prisoners in custody and found no cause of complaint.

Since the present dietary has been established the issue of extra diet to healthy prisoners by the medical officer has ceased.

Books and Accounts.

The journals of the Local Inspector and Governor are well and carefully kept. In them they enter such observations as are considered noteworthy. The Chaplains and Medical Officer also have journals.

The males have remained stationary in number for the periods recorded, but there is a slight fluctuation in the females. A reference to the schedule headed "Number of committals, specifying offences, &c.," will show the preponderance of crimes against the person and public peace, and order on the part of the former sex, and against property on that of the latter, who are derived almost exclusively from an abandoned and degraded class—a large proportion, moreover, not belonging to the county. Among the males, however, there were two under long terms for larceny—viz., from 12 and 18 months respectively. There were two returned convicts (a husband and wife), ascertained to be such; but photography, a very useful aid in tracing the antecedents of suspects, is wanting here.

There was 1 male lunatic who was about to be removed to the Asylum, and the happy change of the law affecting the committal of the insane to prison will prevent the recurrence of those most unfit inmates to institutions designed for dealing with responsible criminals.

There was no juvenile in charge, and during the past year, or the expired portion of the current year, 5 males only, falling within this denomination, have been committed here, two of whom were transferred to reformatories.

I found this gaol at my official visit clean and orderly, and sufficiently furnished for the requirements of the numbers in custody at this season of the year with bedding, blankets, sheets, &c., and prison clothing; and I am assured that, in the event of any necessity arising, a fresh supply will be immediately procured. The building was in sound repair, free from damp, well ventilated, and greatly improved in security by the construction of an insulating area round the outside walls, and by the removal of rusticated projections at the front entrance, which had hitherto afforded facilities of ingress. No other alteration has taken place. There is an abundance of water raised by a stalled tread-wheel and a hand-pump, as the sewerage is effective: and having regard to the uncertain condition of intended legislation, tending to create hereafter a new constitution, a distribution of county and borough prisoners, I refrain from submitting, with respect to the defects enumerated in former reports, any suggestions which might involve an unnecessary expenditure. The male punishment cells, however, require correction, being without the means of artificial heating, and unprovided with window sashes and shutters for excluding the light.

The males are still under the old and imperfect form of classification, felons and misdemeanants being merely subdivided into the "tried" and "untried." The females are subjected to "individual cellular separation;" but there is no night-watch of matrons for this section, an omission which is in contravention of the prescriptions of the Act for enforcing the "separate system."

The discipline observed at lock-ups, and in the interval until unlock, is generally satisfactory as to the locking-in of each individual prisoner in his cell, the final rounds, the assorting of the keys, and the condition of the locks. It does not appear, however, that there are after lock-up any subsequent ascertainment of the presence of each prisoner, any examination of the fastenings of the cell doors, or any visits on the part of a superior officer at late and unexpected hours in the night.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

County of Carlow Gaol.

Further, there is no gas supplied in any of the cells, and no patrol in the interior of the prison, and the keys of the hospital are only given up to the Governor when there are male patients. The tell-tale clocks, moreover, which constitute the most constant and reliable check upon the regularity and vigilance of the night patrol, are not sufficiently protected against tampering, and consequently require to be fitted with metal straps, placed so as to cover the keyholes, and fastened with padlocks of the most approved patent.

Punitive labour is stated to be fulfilled daily by the tread-wheel, shot-drill being seldom resorted to. The males are employed in making brushes, clogs, and mats, and in weaving, three of the turnkeys being capable of giving rudimental instruction in these branches of industry; no distinctive hard-labour is provided for females, who are engaged in teasing cocoa fibre, making up shirts for males, clothing for themselves, and in washing for the use of the prison generally.

I regret to repeat the statement, which has appeared in former reports, that no secular instruction is given to prisoners of either sex.

No complaints were preferred to me with regard to the diet by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly, except by one male, who had been repeatedly punished for insubordination, being an old offender, who had been several times in this gaol, and was represented to me as an incorrigible ruffian. He refused his stirabout one morning, on the ground that it was not fit to eat, and ordered it to be removed (although the Chaplain who inspected the provisions on that day pronounced it to be "good"), and subsequently complained that it was not given back to him. The Chaplains are regular in their inspection, observing the tabular form of comment, and generally reporting favourably. I found some exceptions, however, taken from time to time to the bread and milk, but more rarely to the latter.

All the superior officers are provided with journals, and the majority of the books prescribed and recommended by competent authority are kept with correctness. "A Work Ledger," however, is wanted, and an "Officers' Misconduct Book." It would be desirable to establish pass-checks, to be issued by the Governor to the intern officers, as a guarantee for passing through the gate, the allowed time of absence to be specified on the docket.

Females,	11	7	7	8

Upon reviewing the above group of schedules, we note a considerable fluctuation in the males, the females exhibiting a comparatively trifling variation in amount. The higher figures observable in the former sex are to be attributed partly to the long detention of lunatics, but chiefly to the sudden influx caused by the committal of a large number charged with complicity in Fenianism, and its offshoots.

The character of crime remains the same as that recorded in former reports—offences against the person, and public order preponderating among the males, and larceny and prostitution prevailing among the females, who are almost exclusively derived from an abandoned class. There were no returned convicts in charge, but as photography is not in use here, a valuable auxiliary is wanting in tracing the antecedents of those suspected to belong to this category.

I regretted to find no less than twenty lunatics, or one moiety of the total confined (viz., 17 males and 3 females), still detained here; but they were about to be speedily transferred to the asylum, which is now prepared for their reception, and the wise legislation of the last session of Parliament, which withdrew from magistrates the power of committing the insane, and therefore held irresponsible to criminal prisons, has finally relieved the latter from the pressure of those most unfit inmates.

There was but 1 juvenile (a male) in custody. Offenders falling within this denomination are not rife here, only 4 males in the current year, and the same number in 1867, and 1 female, having been committed, none of whom were transmitted to reformatories.

I found the building, at my inspection on the above days, creditably clean and orderly, in sound repair, and well ventilated. The water supply is abundant. Although the sewerage is now effective—the sewer adjoining the scullery, which was formerly foul, having been thoroughly cleared—it would be very desirable to convert some of the ordinary privies into water-closets. The stock of bedding, blankets, &c., is adequate for the requirements, and also of shoes, but the clothing is deficient. I am assured, however, that some material in store is about to be made up for use.

The classification of the males is even below that prescribed by the old Prison Act (the 7th Geo. IV., cap. 74), being limited to a division into the tried and untried, the lunatics, and latterly the political prisoners. The females are simply placed in two divisions, but both sexes sleep and take their meals in single cells. No alteration has taken place, either structurally or otherwise, since the last inspection, and consequently the defects, which have been so frequently enumerated and commented upon in former reports, continue uncorrected; but I am bound to state that this inaction does not arise from indisposition on the part of the local authorities to take the necessary measures for improvement, but at the instance of my colleague and myself they remain in abeyance, pending projected legislation, which will probably effect considerable changes in the constitution and distribution of prisons, and would thus render nugatory any intermediate expenditure.

The system of discipline observed in the following particulars is generally satisfactory—viz., in the locking in of each individual prisoner in his cell, the subsequent ascertainment of his presence, the examination of the several fastenings of the cells, the night patrol, the custody of the keys, the condition of the locks, and the mode of repairing them.

Gas, however, is not supplied in the cells. There is but one tell-tale clock (two at least, completely protected against the possibility of tampering, being indispensible), and the still more reliable check of frequent visits by a superior officer at late and unexpected hours in the night is wanting, in order to test the vigilance and regularity of the watchmen.

Hard labour is stated to be carried into effect daily, for two and a half hours of actual movement, by the tread-wheel, which is not fitted with partitions, when a sufficient number of males under sentence to the above penalty is available for raising water, and also the hand-pump, and by stone-breaking, although this latter mode of employment can scarcely be considered as penal upon prisoners derived chiefly from the rural class. Industrial labour is maintained by the manufacture of mats, which are in brisk demand, at a remunerative price, and in breaking, dressing, and weaving flax as material for the prison clothing, which, as well as shoes, is made up within the walls. Any prisoner, who is acquainted with a trade, is turned to account for the service of the gaol; but one turnkey only is a trained handicraftsman—viz., a weaver.

School-hours:—Males—from 1 to 2 o'clock; Females—from 1 to 2 o'clock.

The males are instructed by the Head Turnkey, who is, however, a competent teacher, and has from time to time received gratuities from the National Board of Education, with which the schools have been placed in connexion. The District Inspector's reports are favourable as to the fitness of the master, and his mode of conducting and discipline. He has further noted the want of some requirements, which ought to be supplied.

The secular tuition of the females is almost a nullity, they being ordinarily few in number, and under sentences for short periods, and the class from which they are supplied being chiefly of an abandoned character.

Religious instruction is, however, imparted to them on Sundays by the Sisters of Mercy.

The Chaplains occasionally inspect, and enter their observations. The form of registry recommended by the Inspectors-General as being more suited to the low state of proficiency usually found among the pupils, ought to be kept in addition to that prescribed by the National Board.

Dietary and Contracts.

For Prisoners whose term of Imprisonment shall not exceed One Week.

Males.—Breakfast—8 oz. meal in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. bread, and 1 pint vegetable soup.

Females.—Breakfast—7 oz. meal in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—12 oz. bread, and ¾ pint vegetable soup.

No complaints were preferred to me with respect to the provisions by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly, and I learned with pleasure that the establishment of the new dietary, approved by the Executive in accordance with the recommendation of the medical committee appointed to inquire into this vital subject of gaol administration, has produced entire satisfaction; an opinion which is corroborated by the favourable reports of the Chaplains, who observe the tabular form of comment upon each item of food, and are regular in their inspection. I will, however, urge that potatoes ought to be introduced as soon as possible, great weight being attached by the committee to the salutary and corrective elements contained in that esculent. A third meal of supper—bread being now issued, it becomes necessary to fix an earlier hour for dinner, which hitherto has been served out at four o'clock, P.M.

Books and Accounts.

The superior officers are furnished with journals, which are duly submitted to the Board, and the registries and the forms directed and recommended by competent authority are kept here, except a "General Visiters' Book," a "Daily Employment of Prisoners' Book," which includes a time table showing the exact period of the performance of each kind of work, and a "Work Ledger;" but the latter, I am informed, is about to be procured. An "Officers' Default Book" has been provided; but pass-checks, under the hand of the Governor, ought to be adopted, specifying the time of absence granted to every intern officer on a docket, which should be given up on the return of the recipient. A book is also needed for entering the markings of the tell-tale clock, a very essential check on the vigilance and regularity of the night patrol.

The quarters for males and females are spacious and airy, but wanting in proper means of separation between the sexes, there being but one staircase accessible in common to both. Water-closets are attached to the wards, but fixed baths are still wanting. A slipper bath, however, was about to be provided. The sanitary condition of the prisoners was and had been favourable, and there was but one patient (a male) under treatment in hospital at my inspection.

Bridewells.

The bridewells of this county are miserably defective; and, in the event of legislation with regard to these minor prisons, it is to be expected that they will be abolished, as the cost of maintaining them, if the requirements prescribed by statute were exacted, would be very considerable. The subjoined tabular synopsis is compiled from the notes of the Inspector-General and the Local Inspector taken at their respective visits.

Females,	43	38	33	35

An examination of the above schedules will lead us to the conclusion that there is no very notable fluctuation in the numbers of criminals of both sexes, nor variation in the character of crimes; for, on reference to the table of "Committals, specifying the Offences," &c., we find an almost normal preponderance of acts of violence, riot, and disorder among the males, to which are to be added treason-felony and other modifications of political disturbances (11 tried and 1 untried inmates of the gaol belonging to this category), and the complement of military and naval offences, and infractions of the Mercantile Marine Act, incidental to the seat of a garrison and a seaport.

The first group of delinquencies stated above embraces the females also, consisting as they do chiefly of prostitutes, committed under the Towns Improvement Act, from Fermoy and Queenstown, and constantly recurrent; while larcenies, and other forms of offences against property, are recorded against both sexes. There were no returned convicts in custody; a return, which may be relied on here, as photography is extensively and successfully used in tracing the antecedents of old offenders. There were no lunatics detained here, but some cases had occurred of prisoners committed for other offences becoming insane who, upon certificates, were transferred duly to the Asylum. There were but 2 juveniles in charge; 44 and 36 males, falling within this denomination in the years 1867 and 1868, and 12 and 3 females respectively in the same period, passed through the prison, of whom 6 males and 5 females were transmitted to reformatories. Juveniles directed to be thus disposed of, are kept in strict separation and seclusion during their preliminary period of imprisonment, in order to prevent contamination, and to impress upon their minds the penal character of a gaol.

I found the portions of the building which were occupied by prisoners in a praiseworthy condition of cleanliness and order, and well ventilated; the rebuilding and remodelling of the remainder is progressing, but I apprehend that a twelvemonth will elapse before the new cells are fit for reception. In the meantime, in consequence of the inevitable limitation of accommodation, and the necessity of the prisoners employed in serving the masons being brought into approximation, if not into contact with the free labourers, it is impossible to enforce a regular system of classification; very much to the credit of the Governor and the staff, such active vigilance and discipline have been maintained that no insubordination has occurred. In some of the kinds of industrial labour, however, the prisoners are still kept apart, and take their meals singly in as far as the numbers render it practicable.

A plan, which appears to be well conceived, has been designed by the Local Inspector for supplying gas to the cells, the amount of light being sufficient for reading and working at trades, and the burner, which is contained in a ventilating chamber of glass, being protected against tampering on the part of the inmates, but under the control of the officers patrolling the corridors. It is proper to add that, pending the completion of the interior building operations, it is of vital importance that measures should be taken for strengthening a very weak point of the boundary wall, where it adjoins the Queen's College, an improvement which could be effected at a very moderate outlay. The sewerage is stated to be effective; and the supply of water, which is raised by the tread-wheel from the river, and subsequently filtered, is ordinarily adequate, and wholesome for use. In case, however, of a long drought it has been found necessary to purchase water for drinking, as the river becomes brackish in taste when the current is not full and strong enough to stem the influx of high tides. The forms of discipline observed at unlock and lockings are satisfactory in the several particulars of ascertainment of the presence of each prisoner in his cell, of the examination of the security of the fastenings, of the final rounds, the night patrol, and the report of the accuracy and vigilance of the latter, as tested by tell-tale clocks thoroughly protected against tampering, of occasional visits on the part of the Governor during the night, of the proper custody of the keys by him, and of the state of the locks, which are repaired within the walls in the presence of an officer.

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour disposed of outside the gaol, for the last three years:—

Hard labour is enforced on the part of the males by the tread-wheel during about two hours and a half of actual movement daily, and on that of the females by a capstan pump, which, however, is worked with so little resistance as not to afford any punitive element. Industrial employment is maintained with as much activity as is consistent with the interruption and confusion caused by the alteration of the buildings, a large number of prisoners being assigned to the contractor. All materials, however, for wear and use, are manufactured and made up within the walls; and some remunerative return, but not considerable, is derived from the sale of mats, of stone broken fine, and from picking oakum, though the introduction of iron and wire for ship building and rigging has unfavourably affected the latter branch of production. The females are here, as elsewhere, chiefly engaged in washing, sewing, and knitting.

Juveniles, and such adults as evince a desire for learning, and are recommended, are admitted to school daily during the hours stated. Both sexes (a matron being present during the tuition of females) are instructed by a competent master, the schools being placed in connexion with the National Board of Education, whose registry, as well as that framed by the Inspectors-General, is duly kept here. The District Inspector reports of the males:—"The course of training and instruction is suitable to the circumstances of the pupils, and their proficiency is satisfactory, considering the time spent at school. The school is progressing satisfactorily." And of the females:—"The course of instruction is satisfactory, and the pupils answered well for their time at school. The school is making good progress." The Chaplains visit from time to time, and record their observations in the Daily School Report Book.

Very few complaints were preferred to me by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly, in relation to the diet, exception being taken to the potatoes, which had become discoloured, the probable effect of blight, and to the milk; but there appeared to be a jealousy of those assigned to the building works under the contractor, who receive an extra allowance.

The Chaplains are regular in their inspection, observing the tabular form of comment on each item of food as approved by the Inspectors-General. Their objections were very few, and applied to the potatoes and to the milk, which, during the unprecedented heat of the past summer, it was almost impossible to keep sweet. Very little extra diet is now issued, and it is rather in the form of a substitution of one element for another than an increased amount.

The new scale of dietary is found to be generally satisfactory.

Books, &c.

The superior officers are all provided with journals, and the several books and forms directed and approved by competent authority are kept with laudable accuracy, and in addition an Officers' Default Book, a Night-watch Report, and a system of written passes for intern officers seeking leave of absence, are well devised, and worthy of adoption elsewhere.

The by-laws, which will doubtless be recast whenever the buildings in progress are fit for the reception of prisoners to be subjected to the system of individual cellular separation, are somewhat lax with regard to the admission of visitors to prisoners, each member of the Board having power to grant an order.

I am bound to bear testimony to the loyalty and fidelity of the staff during the anxious period, in which a large number of political prisoners of importance were consigned from other jurisdictions to the custody of the authorities here.

Hospitals.

The sanitary condition of the prisoners was and had been satisfactory, there being but one patient, a male pauper debtor, in the temporary hospital allocated to that sex, which is adequate to the requirements.

The female hospital is in want of a fixed bath and a water-closet. It is proposed to make a trial of the earth close-stools, of Moule's patent.

Bridewells.

I invite attention to the defects enumerated in the annexed tabular synopsis, compiled from the reports of the Inspector-General and of the very efficient Local Inspector, which detail the want of the primary requirements of water and sewerage in many of these imperfect buildings; and I should suggest that, irrespectively of their condition, the facilities already afforded, or about to be afforded, by railway communication with the county gaol, will enable the authorities to discontinue a considerable number of them.

The number actually in custody on the day selected for the record of my inspection is not only in excess of any of the above annual averages, but considerably above the cellular accommodation provided for the males—viz., 56 cells; and on the female side almost equal to the total of the cells allocated to that sex. This disproportion has entirely ceased to exist in other jurisdictions, and, I presume, is to be attributed here to the existence of a worse class, incident to a large city, the seat of a garrison, and a seaport. The females, indeed, frequently outnumber the males, and, as reported to me, reached on one occasion the high aggregate of 97. An examination of their committals will show the extraordinary recurrence of the same individuals, and affords a sad evidence of the inadequacy of short incarceration in a criminal prison, especially one administered on the antiquated and vicious system of association for purposes of repression, or reformation. Although there were some male prisoners at the period of my visit undergoing long sentences for grave offences, no less than 11 being under rates from 12 months to 2 years, crime in this locality is generally not of a heinous character, assaults, street riots, breaches of the peace, and larceny being chiefly prevalent.

There was one male, ascertained to be a returned convict; but as photography is not employed here in tracing the antecedents of old delinquents, valuable aid to justice is wanting.

There were no lunatics of either denomination still detained here. Recently, however, a "criminal" lunatic had been transmitted to Dundrum Asylum.

Three juveniles, all males, were in custody; and taking into consideration the large street population which is to be found here, the number of prisoners falling within this category is comparatively trifling.

Twenty-one males and 3 females passed through the prison in 1867, of whom 12 males and all the females were transferred to reformatories; and during the current year the whole of those committed—viz., 10 males and 2 females, were similarly disposed of.

There were 2 master and 2 mistress debtors, and 3 pauper males; but it is to be hoped that at no distant period the Legislature will relieve criminal prisons from the presence of those unfit inmates.

I found this prison, at my inspection, generally in a creditable condition of repair, order, and cleanliness, well ventilated, and adequately furnished with bedding, blankets, sheets, and clothing. There is, however, no fumigating apparatus for purifying the prisoners' own clothing. The supply of water is ample, even to overflowing at times, which is conducted to water-closets and lavatories placed at the end of each corridor, and brought to bear upon the sewers, which are reported to be effective. The laundry, which is very ill contrived, and the male factory, are unpartitioned, thus nullifying the approximation to "individual separation" which is maintained at the tread-wheel, at the stone sheds (now rarely occupied), and in the cells, which are provided with artificial heating and with bells, but not with gas. The prisoners of both sexes sleep singly, and take their meals in their cells, when the numbers do not exceed the accommodation; but in all other respects the associative system is still in existence, the classication consisting solely of sub-divisions of felons, misdemeanants, and juveniles of both sexes into the "tried" and the "untried." I recapitulate these defects, but I feel bound to refrain from urging upon the local authorities any definite action with regard to increased accommodation, and more stringent means of discipline, inasmuch as such action in the present uncertainty of projected legislation might be rendered nugatory by an alteration of the classes of prisoners to be retained in ordinary county or borough gaols, and in the constitution and redistribution of the latter.

The forms of discipline observed in the following particulars, as detailed in the annual return to "Queries," are satisfactory—viz., in the lock-up and unlock, the ascertainment of the presence of each prisoner in his cell, the examination of the fastenings of the latter, the night rounds and patrol, and the custody of the keys. There is, however, but one tell-tale clock (two at least being indispensable for testing the vigilance and regularity of the watch), which is imperfectly protected against tampering; and I would, therefore, suggest that an iron strap should be affixed to the clock-case, and secured by a padlock of the most approved patent. The Governor, moreover, only takes up the keys of the hospitals when prisoners are confined there, when safe custody is of special importance. The locks are stated to be in good order, and to be repaired, when occasion demands, within the walls; but they are old, and of an ordinary kind.

Hard labour is enforced during three hours and a half of each day in summer, and two hours and a half in winter, the means of carrying into effect this form of penal discipline being provided by the tread-wheel or by stone-breaking.

Industrial employment is actively maintained, some of the turnkeys being capable of giving primary instruction, and of superintending such works as are available within the walls of a gaol. All articles for use and wear, except blankets and rugs, are manufactured and made up by prison labour, and some remunerative return is derived from the sale of mats outside, of skewers for wool-combers, and oakum-picking; but the supply and demand for the latter material has been unfavourably affected by the introduction of iron in ship-building and of wire for rigging. The females knit, sew, and wash for the Bride-well, as well as for the gaol.

The females are instructed by the Matron, but in very limited numbers, as prostitutes and persons of disorderly disposition form a great preponderence. The schools are not placed in connexion with the National Board of Education, but the Form of Registry recommended by the Inspectors-General is kept here, and the Chaplains are assiduous in their visits. I found some evidences of laudable improvement in the writing copies.

Dietary and Contracts.

1st Class—Breakfast—Males, 8½ oz. Indian and half oatmeal in stirabout; ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. brown bread, 1 pint new milk. Supper—6 oz. brown bread; ½ pint new milk.

2nd Class—Breakfast—Females, 7½ oz. Indian and half oatmeal in stirabout; ½ pint new milk. Dinner—12 oz. brown bread, ½ pint new milk. Supper—5 oz. brown bread, ½ pint new milk, 3rd Class—Breakfast—Males and Females under fifteen years, 5 oz. oatmeal in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—8 oz. brown bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup. Supper—5 oz. brown bread, and ½ pint new milk.

Weekly prisoners and shorter periods get same diet, but no supper. Potatoes are given to all classes for dinner three days each week—First Class, 3 lbs.—Second and Third Class, 2½ lbs.

Contracts.—Bread, white, per 4 lb. loaf, 6½*d.*; ditto, brown, per 12 lb. loaf, 1*s.* 10*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt., 18*s.*; Indian corn, per ton, £11 10*s.*; potatoes, per cwt., 7*s.*; meat, per lb., 7*d.*; new-milk, per gallon, 7*d.*; salt, per cwt., 2*s.* 3*d.*; coals, per ton, 17*s.* 11*d.*; straw, per cwt., 3*s.* 6*d*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 4*s.*; soap, per cwt., £1 4*s.*

1865, . 2·4 | 1866, . 2·7 | 1867, . 2·93.

No complaints with regard to the diet were preferred to me by any of the prisoners, except by one male, who expressed a desire to revert to the skimmed milk as formerly issued, and, of course, in a larger quantity than the new milk, as regulated by the Medical Commission, to whom the whole question of prison dietary was referred for full consideration. That dietary is now in force, and is found to give satisfaction; very little extra diet being now granted, and being chiefly a substitution of one element of food, of the same value, for another. The Chaplains inspect the food regularly, observing the approved tabular form of comment, and almost universally making a favourable report of each item of consumption. The dinner is supplied at an earlier hour than heretofore, in consequence of the addition of a supper meal.

Books and Accounts.

All the superior officers are provided with journals, except the Local Inspector. The books are generally well kept, with the notable exception of the gate porter's record, which is the most important check upon the discipline of the prison, and upon the daily issue of rations, but which has been entered up in such a manner as to be utterly inoperative for these vital objects. A "Time Book" is wanting in order to show the actual period of employment of different kinds on the part of each individual prisoner throughout the day; and written "passes" specifying the time of leave allowed to the intern officers to be signed by the Governor, and to be given up upon the return of the recipient, are imperatively required, instead of the verbal leave now accorded. Bye-laws, moreover, are urgently needed. I have to observe that the admission of visiters to prisoners is of a very lax character, and ought to be forthwith considerably modified, the exclusion of relatives and friends being a very material element of penal discipline.

The quarters allocated to the sick of both sexes are spacious, cleanly, and well ventilated, with convalescent yards attached. The rooms on the lower story, however, are floored with tiles, for which planks ought to be substituted; and those on the upper tier are not fitted with water-closets. There is a fixed bath common to both sections. The sanitary condition of the prisoners was and had been satisfactory, and there was but one patient in hospital, a male debtor recently committed, who was labouring under a disease of the chest.

Population of the county is 271,478. Total in custody, 20 males and 9 females, of whom 4 males were debtors, and one male and one female were for trial.

It will be observed that on the day of my inspection, the identical number of prisoners, male and female respectively, were in custody as when the gaol was last inspected by my colleague in 1867.

The total number of prisoners tried at Assizes and Quarter Sessions in 1864 were 172, in 1865 101, in 1866 95, in 1867 78. Thus in four years these numbers have diminished by more than one-half.

During the past year there has only been one political prisoner in custody, and none on the day of my inspection.

It is observable by the Schedules of Committals for every offence, that the state of crime in proportion to the population of the county, and considering the poverty of the people, is by no means serious, nor are the majority of the cases of a grave nature. In fact, during the past year there is no committal for murder, and there are only two under the head of "shooting, stabbing, conspiring to take life."

I found the prison clean and orderly, the building in sound repair and secure, with the exception of two angles at the side of the gateway by which a prisoner could escape, were he permitted to obtain access to this portion of the building—as these corners could be secured by a very small outlay, I would call the attention of the Board to this matter. Some of the privies were dirty, and especially one in the yard adjoining the treadwheel. Now that the county and town gaol are amalgamated, I feel bound to urge the importance of the frequent recommendations of my colleague and predecessor being carried out, in regard to the formation of a suitable laundry, drying-room, and female marshalsea and as the prisoners are removed from the town gaol, this gaol should be at once converted into the female prison, for under the present system no proper classification or discipline can be maintained amongst the females.

The beds and bedding of the convicted prisoners are good, but those of the females and untried prisoners so worn that I felt it my duty at my inspection to recommend an additional blanket to be served out to those last-mentioned prisoners, unless they were immediately supplied with new blankets. There is no gas in the cells, the prisoners are therefore, in the winter, in darkness and idleness from dusk till daylight, and in the summer they are unemployed from 8 in the evening until 6 in the morning; these being the hours at which lockup and unlock take place in summer and winter respectively. There are no tell-tale clocks provided, so that it is impossible that a proper test can exist as to the vigilance of the night watch, though the Governor occasionally goes round the prison at unexpected hours.

The Governor keeps all the keys of the prison in his bed-room at night. They are brought to him at about 10 o'clock.

The prison locks are repaired out of the gaol and without the supervision of a prison officer, a practice which should be corrected.

The punitive labour is chiefly enforced by the treadmill. If proper arrangements were established both in the male and female prisons for washing, the profits of labour in this particular branch alone could be increased considerably.

"The prisoners are sometimes employed at gardening, and cleaning up the prison premises; no other industrial work."

9. Say if entered in Report Book, and when given:

"No entry in Report Book. Books and maps fair."

11. Are the accounts of the attendance and proficiency of the scholars kept neatly and correctly:

"No rolls opened since first quarter of present year; no entry in Report Book since 13th March last; no entry in Register since 4th June, though some of the prisoners attending the school were admitted to the gaol since that time."

15. State your opinion of the Teachers as to (I.) acquirements, (II.) character, and (III.) method of conducting the School?

"I. Has been Probationer for years. II. Good. III. Poor."

"In my opinion the school is doing very little good. It is open only an hour in the day, and during this time little can be done except a very short lesson in reading and writing, and perhaps a very little arithmetic."

"The outlines of the Map of the World should be taught to the pupils."

"The state of the accounts as referred to under Query 11. When I made a special visit to the school on 19th May last, I found the account-books in the same state as they are in now, and I then reported the matter. Nothing has been done since. The teacher says that during part of the time he has been ill, and in hospital; but it is impossible to tell from the books how long he has been unable to attend to his duty.

Class 3—Males and females under fifteen years.—Breakfast—5 oz. of meal in stirabout, and ½ pint of new milk. Dinner—8 oz. of brown bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup. Supper—4 oz. of brown bread.

2. Dietary for prisoners whose term of imprisonment shall exceed one week, for untried prisoners who do not maintain themselves, and for pauper debtors.

Class 1—Males.—Breakfast—8 oz. of meal in stirabout, and ½ pint of new milk. Dinner—14 oz. of brown bread, and 1 pint of new milk. Supper—6 oz. of brown bread, and ½ pint of new milk.

Class 2—Females.—Breakfast—7 oz. of meal in stirabout, and ½ pint of new milk. Dinner—12 oz. of brown bread, and ½ pint of new milk. Supper—5 oz. of brown bread, and ½ pint of new milk.

Class 3—Males and females under fifteen years.—Breakfast—5 oz. of meal in stirabout, and ½ pint of new milk. Dinner—8 oz. of brown bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup. Supper—5 oz. of brown bread, and ½ pint of new milk.

Potatoes are substituted for bread at dinner on three days in the week, in the following proportions:—Class 1, 3 lbs.; Class 2, 2½ lbs.; Class 3, 2½ lbs.

Since this new dietary scale has been introduced there have been fewer complaints of the diet, and I have every reason to believe that the prisoners are better in health, and are less frequently ordered extra diet by the medical officer. I tasted the food, and found it good, and had no complaints of it from any of the prisoners.

Contracts.—Bread, white, per 4 lb. loaf, 6¾*d.*; brown, per 4 lb loaf, 5¾*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt., 14*s.* 6*d.*; potatoes, per cwt., 4*s.*; meat, per lb., 4½*d.*; new milk, per gallon, 5½*d.*; salt, per cwt., 1*s.* 4*d.*; coal, per ton, £1 2*s.* 4*d.*; turf, per statute box, 1*s.* 0¾*d.*; straw, per cwt., 2*s.* 2*d.*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 7*s.*; candles, per lb., 5½*d.*; soap, per cwt., £1 5*s.* 8*d.*

Net cost of gaol, including diet and salaries, for the three preceding years:—

1865, . £1,849 19*s.* 8*d.* | 1866, . £2,041 18*s.* 2*d.* | 1867, . £1,740 18*s.* 5*d.*

1865, . £30 16*s.* 7·933*d.* | 1866, . £34 12*s.* 2*d.* | 1867, . £39 17*s.* 5·56*d.*

Now that the two gaols are amalgamated, the cost of each prisoner per annum should be reduced, as the same staff that is at present maintained in the county prison should be sufficient for the amalgamated gaol. Photography is not practised here, though it has been found to be of such great importance in the detection of old offenders where it is regularly used.

The books and accounts are, as a rule, carefully kept, but the journals of the extern officers are not sufficiently full or detailed. In fact, they are merely notes of their attendance. This has been remarked on more than once by Inspectors-General.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

County of the Town of Galway Gaol.

As this gaol is now amalgamated with the county gaol, it would seem almost superfluous to record here the very numerous defects of construction, accommodation, classification, instruction, discipline, and the want of nearly all modern improvements; at the same time I cannot avoid remarking on some of the most important facts which I noticed on the day of my inspection.

There were no lavatories nor baths, so that the prisoners used tubs in the yard for ablutionary purposes. There is no means of pumping the water, as there is not sufficient force to work the tread-wheel, by which the water should be pumped. The only water, therefore, available is obliged to be carried in buckets. The bed-clothing and prisoners' clothes were nearly unfit for use. In the female prison there are no locks to the cell doors, and the prisoners of all classes met and conversed together in the day-rooms. The cells used for prostitutes are both dark, damp, and ill ventilated.

I found but 14 prisoners in custody, 1 of whom has been convicted 147 times, which shows how little effect punishment in an associated prison has upon such an offender.

Lunatics.

Contrary to the provisions of the recent Act 30 & 31 Vict., cap. 118, I found in the hospital a dangerous lunatic, the committal expressly stating the man to be "a lunatic and dangerous, and that he violently assaulted the complainant."

The male hospital is attended by a female matron, assisted by a prisoner. His chief occupation was to watch the "dangerous lunatic," who seemed to be in a most precarious state, and to be painfully terrified at the idea of being in gaol.

The prison was unlocked at six, A.M., in summer, and at daylight in winter, and is locked up at seven, P.M., in summer, and at dusk in winter. The Governor attended the locking of the cells of the male prisoners; he also visited the prison again at ten o'clock, P.M., at which hour the night-watch was placed on duty. There is no tell-tale clock, so that the vigilance of the night-watch could not be tested with any degree of regularity. The Governor keeps the prison keys in his bed-room at night.

As the tread-wheel was the only punitive labour available in the gaol, and as it could not be used for want of sufficient power, this description of labour was reduced to nil. The only industrial employment was mat-making, brush-making, picking oakum, and needlework, consequently the net profits of prisoners' labour was very insignificant.

There was no schoolmaster nor was there any secular instruction given.

Dietary and Contracts.

Breakfast.—Males—8 oz. of Indian meal in stirabout, and ½ pint of new milk. Females—7 oz. of Indian meal in stirabout, and ½ pint of new milk.

Dinner.—Males—14 oz. of brown bread, and a pint of new milk. Females—12 oz. of brown bread, and ½ pint of new milk.

Juveniles.—Males and Females—5 oz. of Indian meal in stirabout, and ½ pint of new milk for breakfast; 8 oz. of brown bread, and 1 pint of oatmeal gruel for dinner; 4 oz. of brown bread for supper.

Gruel substituted for milk to all prisoners for dinner whose sentences do not exceed a month. Gruel substituted for milk at dinner to all classes on two alternate days of each week.

Contracts.—Bread—white, per 4-lb. loaf, 7½*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt. 17*s.*; Indian meal, per cwt. 11*s.*; meat, per lb., 4¾*d.*; new milk, per gallon, 6*d.*; salt, per cwt., 1*s.* 6*d.*; coal, per ton, £1 5*s.*; turf, per box, 11½*d.*; candles, per lb., 6*d.*; soap, per lb., 3*d.*

The dietary form ordered by the Lord Lieutenant in March, 1868, has not been followed. The bread was still made of half wheat flour and half Indian meal. I received several complaints from the prisoners of their diet, and found one prisoner suffering from the effects of this food. She was consequently ordered white bread by the doctor.

By the amalgamation of the county and town gaols a very considerable saving should be effected, as the present staff of the county gaol is sufficient for the safe custody of the prisoners of both gaols.

It is worthy of remark that the absolute cost of the ordinary diet consumed by the prisoners in this gaol in 1868 was £56 8*s.* 5*d.*, whereas the salaries alone of the officers amounted to £474 for the same period.

Books and Accounts.

The Governor kept nearly all the books himself in a very orderly and precise manner. His journal is a minute record of his duties, and of any extraordinary matter of moment connected with the prison or the prisoners.

The journals of the Local Inspector and Chaplains are meagre and insufficient in detail.

Considering the many difficulties and defects the Governor had to contend with, I think much credit reflects upon him. Were he wanting either in zeal or vigilance, the condition of the gaol and discipline of the prisoners must have long since assumed even a more deplorable and disgraceful aspect than they presented at the time of my visit. I found the gaol as clean, and as well ventilated as the circumstances would permit.

There were in custody on the day of my inspection 27 males and 9 females, a much smaller number, as will be seen by the above table, than were in custody on any of the corresponding dates in the three preceding years. When the population of the county, namely, 201,800, is taken into consideration, this state of things may be considered very satisfactory. On a scrutiny of the table, showing the number of committals, &c., it will be observed in comparing the total number of male criminals committed to gaol this year with those committed in 1866, that the number has decreased, whereas the total number of females of the same class has increased in the ratio of 88 to 104. Common assault and larceny appear to be the crimes most resorted to in this county. I found 14 males and 7 females committed for these offences, the total number of prisoners being only 36, amongst whom was a lunatic on the charge of manslaughter. A prisoner was told off to take care of him.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

County of Kerry Gaol.

Notwithstanding this, I found him alone in a cell, in the wall of which were large nails loosely put in, with which he could have either injured himself or others. The floor was wet, and the prisoner appeared ill, cold, and dejected. He refused his food, although he was allowed extra diet, but would only partake of a small quantity of the ordinary prison diet. Had the prisoner, by means of these large nails, done himself or others any bodily injury, the Governor, no doubt, would have incurred serious blame for permitting these nails to remain in the wall of the cell in which a dangerous lunatic was confined.

I directed the prisoner to be at once removed to another cell, and the nails in question to be taken away.

The accommodation of this prison is of a very inferior order.

The cells are cold, with no bells attached to them; the floors are flagged. The old-fashioned wooden bedsteads are still in use. There are no food-traps to the doors. The prisoners' food is brought to them in the day-room, from whence they take it to their cells in a most irregular manner. The prison is not heated nor lighted with gas, though there is now gas in the office, in the hall of the central building, and between the outer walls. The solitary cells are both cold and damp, and open to the wind and weather, as the windows are not glazed. They are, in my opinion, quite unfit for human beings. The prisoners have no means of communicating with the officer on duty from any cell, except by knocking at the door, and on a windy night I am of opinion that prisoners in the solitary cells, either male or female, might knock for a long time before they were heard. Not long since a naval prisoner, sentenced to solitary confinement, was taken very ill during his incarceration and, I am informed, nearly died in the hospital of a disease contracted in these cold and damp cells. The adjoining exercise yards were wet and in bad repair.

There were no prisoners in hospital. The male hospital is on the ground floor, which cannot be wholesome. Both hospitals were in a most untidy and dirty condition, the matron's room not having been done out at all, and altogether most irregular. The prison was visited not long since with a low fever, which had disappeared previous to my inspection. But so long as the privies are allowed to remain in the filthy condition that I found them in, and that dirt is allowed to accumulate, the health of the prison cannot be satisfactory. The privy in the capstan yard, close by the hospital, is alone enough to breed fever. This yard is also dirty and badly kept. The lavatories are well supplied with water, and if kept clean would answer their purpose.

There are two tell-tale clocks, but they are not protected against being tampered with. Six, P.M., is the hour for lock-up in summer, and 6.30, A.M., for unlock. In the winter this takes place at 4.30, P.M., and at 7, A.M., respectively. Thus the prisoners are left in idleness for twelve and a half hours in summer, and fourteen and a half hours in winter, and during the most part of this latter period they are in darkness. The night-watch is kept by two turnkeys, who are alternately on patrol for two hours outside the prison, but there is no watch in the interior of the prison. The Governor, or Deputy-Governor is present at lock-up, but neither at unlock. This is an omission of duty on the part of the Governor, as a superior officer should be present and see each prisoner at both lock-up and unlock—the prison keys are kept in the Governor's room at night. Five turnkeys on duty sleep over the gateway. I found their rooms both dirty and untidy. There is no Governor's house proper, but he is provided with rooms in the central prison, which are not contiguous to one another, but are scattered here and there—eight of his family, including 3 maid servants, reside in the gaol, through which prisoners pass and repass unattended by a turnkey.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

County of Kerry Gaol.

The Deputy-Governor with his family (which is, I am told, four in number, including two maid servants) also resides within the prison. The head matron's apartments are also in the central prison, but at such a distance from the female prisoners that they would find it difficult to make her hear them at night, unprovided as they are with bells. The female prison opens into this central prison, but the connecting door is kept locked.

Such arrangements as these are improper and conducive to great irregularities. Outside the prison wall, and between that and the extern boundary wall there are between 2 and 3 acres of land used by the Governor, on part of which he keeps cows and poultry, and the remainder he uses for a garden. This is a direct breach of the Tenth Rule, cap. 74, sec. cix. of the Prisons Act, 7 Geo. IV. In the outside wall (besides the ordinary gate at which a porter resides) there is a door, the key of which is kept by the Deputy-Governor, as he rents some land outside this wall. This door should be at once built up, and until it is, the Governor alone should be responsible for the key. I cannot but remark that while Governors and Deputy-Governors are allowed to hold land in the manner described, they cannot be expected to give their whole time to their prison duties. The Governor also keeps dogs in the prison, a practice which is forbidden in every well disciplined gaol.

The kitchen is situated close to the female laundry and I found that the male prisoners are allowed to go from this kitchen into their own quarters (which is some distance off), unaccompanied by a turnkey.

The kitchen and the bakehouse were both very dirty and no regularity or cleanliness preserved in either. The flour in use in the bakehouse is kept in a sack, there being no bin to put it into.

There are some wooden sheds between the hospital and bakehouse, which were put up in the famine time. These I was not able to inspect, as the nurse, who had the key, was out when I went round the prison. They are only used for lumber, and should be removed as they obstruct the passage, which is narrow enough, without these sheds. Punishments have been inflicted for smoking, which offence could not take place under a proper system of discipline and supervision, as no prisoner could obtain the means of smoking in a well regulated and efficiently officered gaol, but the laxity of discipline in this gaol affords abundant means to the prisoners to evade and break prison rules. There were also scribblings and drawings on the walls of some of the cells which the Governor did not appear aware of until I drew his attention to them. In one cell a window was broken, and on inquiry I was informed by the occupant of the cell, that it had been so for some time. This the Governor also expressed his ignorance of, but did not impugn the veracity of the prisoner's statement.

The school-room is stalled, but the stalls are so low that prisoners can see and communicate with one another if they care to do so. However, in this gaol they have so many other opportunities of exchanging ideas one with another that they may not desire to do so while at school. No prisoners over 18 are given secular instruction. The Deputy Governor superintends the school. The following is from the last report of the Government Inspector of Schools:—

"The course of training and instruction given in this school is good; and the proficiency of the pupils fair for time in the house.

"The teachers are efficient and attentive to their school duties, and the school, on the whole, duly progressing."

There is a female laundry in which the prisoners' clothes are washed; but the same want of discipline is evident here as is so remarkable in the entire gaol, though this portion of the prison appeared to be more cleanly than any other. I examined some of the clean shirts in store, but found them very badly washed and untidily folded. The position of the laundry, detached as it is from the female prison, and adjoining the cook-house, is highly objectionable.

The bedding of the prisoners was sufficient and of a good quality, but the prisoners' clothes were very much torn and out of repair; their boots are never greased or cleaned. Several of the prisoners had on a mixture of prison and private clothing; and one prisoner wore the waistcoat of a turnkey. Some were allowed to wear coloured wrappers round their necks. In fact there seemed to be no rule maintained on this very important matter of prison rule, nor did the Governor appear to think such practices irregular, notwithstanding the 13th sec. Act 19 and 20 Vic., cap 68, directs that—

"Prison dresses shall be worn by all prisoners (whether of ability to maintain themselves or not) who shall be sentenced to undergo any term of imprisonment exceeding one month, unless the Board of Superintendence, by a special order in writing, shall otherwise direct."

The spare clothing is kept in the following irregular manner—Each warder keeps in one of the cells of his ward some clean shirts together with other articles of clothing, so that when a prisoner comes into the prison he is clothed from the stock of clothes in the charge of the warder to whose care he is intrusted. The prisoner's own dirty clothes are kept in the same cell with those prison stores, and as they are not fumigated or purified in any way before they are put away, the vermin, &c., which these clothes contain must get into the spare prison clothes. The smell in one of these clothes stores from the prisoners' own dirty clothes was so offensive that I was obliged to leave the cell. Some of the shirts were out of repair, torn, and required mending.

Class 1, Males.—Breakfast—8 oz. meal, in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. bread, and 1 pint vegetable soup.

Class 2, Females.—Breakfast—7 oz. meal, in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—12 oz. bread, ½ pint of vegetable soup.

Class 3, Males and Females under 15 years.—Breakfast—5 oz. meal, in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—Not less than 8 oz. brown bread, and 1 pint vegetable soup. Supper—4 oz. brown bread.

II. Dietary for Prisoners whose term of Imprisonment shall not exceed One Week, for Untried Prisoners who do not maintain themselves, and for Pauper Debtors.

Class 1, Males.—Breakfast—8 oz. meal, in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. bread, and 1 pint new milk. Supper—6 oz. bread, and ½ pint new milk.

Class 2, Females.—Breakfast—7 oz. meal, in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—12 oz. bread, and ½ pint new milk. For Supper—5 oz. bread, and ½ pint new milk.

Class 3, Males and Females under 15 years.—Breakfast—5 oz. oatmeal, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—Not less than 8 oz. brown bread, and 1 pint vegetable soup. Supper—5 oz. bread, and ½ pint new milk.

Potatoes are substituted for bread at dinner on Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, in the following proportions:—Class 1, 3 lbs.; Class 2, 2½ lbs.; Class 3, 2½ lbs. Equal parts of oatmeal and Indian meal are given in the stirabout.

Contracts.—New milk, per gallon, 4*d.* for year 1868; coals, per ton, £1 3*s.*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 8*s.*

* Handcuffed—one 9 hours, and one 7 hours.

The bread made in the prison is very good; the flour is also of an excellent quality, and ground by the prisoners in the capstan mill. The milk was also good, so was the meal of which the stirabout is made. On inquiry I discovered that the new dietary formula was not strictly adhered to, and that the Governor was entirely ignorant of this fact. The stirabout, which is ordered to be given to the prisoners for breakfast, was given to them for their dinner, and bread supplied for breakfast. The excuse given by the Governor for this breach of the Lord Lieutenant's order was, that the stirabout could not be made in time for breakfast.

The cost of each prisoner for the year in this gaol is much more than it should be, owing chiefly to the excessive number of officers in proportion to the number of prisoners, there being on the day of my inspection only 36 prisoners, whereas the number of officers amounts to 22. Of these, 16 are resident. Their services in 1867 cost £1,267 14*s.* 7*d.* including salaries, rations, and clothing. The total expense of the gaol, exclusive of officers, amounted in that year to £1,193 12*s.* Thus the absolute cost of the officers exceeded the other gaol expense by £174 2*s.* 7*d.* When the accounts for last year are completed, this extravagance will be even more patent than it was in 1867, as the number of prisoners are so much fewer now than they were at any time during that year, while the staff remains the same.

Books and Accounts.

I examined all the books and diaries, and found some of them kept very regularly, but others are not kept at all; and although it was 12.30 P.M. when I arrived at the office, there was at that time no morning state drawn up. I found that some of the books are not daily written up. The books are kept by the Deputy-Governor. There have been no new by-laws drawn up for this gaol since the year 1830, consequently the present ones are now almost useless.

Debtors.

There was one male and one female debtor in custody. I found the male debtor walking about the prison yard, and amongst some criminal prisoners who were at work, in contravention of the provisions of 6 sec. 7th George IV., cap. 74, though there is a good yard attached to the marshalsea. The Governor told me he sanctioned this very irregular proceeding and left the yard-door of the marshalsea open for a certain time every day in order to allow this debtor access to the ordinary prison yard. The marshalsea was dirty, and one of the upper rooms was very damp.

Considering the unsatisfactory condition in which I found this gaol, and which I have thought it my duty to point out, it remains only for me to state what in my opinion are the principal causes of this state of things. The building itself no doubt is very defective in construction, and wanting in many of the necessary means for carrying out the modern system of prison discipline. On the day of my inspection gas was being laid down, consequently the yard near the gateway was partially torn up; but in the above remarks I have made every allowance for this unavoidable condition of the gaol. I find many defects mentioned by former Inspectors-General unremedied and unheeded. I cannot but think that if these defects and requirements were properly pointed out to the local authorities they would pay more attention to the recommendations of the Inspectors-General.

By the foregoing report it will be seen that the Governor is in a great measure to blame for the laxity of discipline, the want of system, and the proper supervision of the prisoners and subordinate officers. Defective as the building is, I regret to say I could find no valid excuse on the part of this officer for the many irregularities I have pointed out.

Bridewells.

I was unable to inspect the Bridewells, owing to the late period of the year of my appointment, but I attach hereto the last report of the Local Inspector.

Owing to the proximity of this gaol to the Curragh Camp the prostitute class forms a large proportion of its inmates, one of whom was committed twenty-nine times in 1867 and another twenty-seven times in 1868.

The accommodation is very good and ample. The prison was clean, secure, and in good repair. The sewerage is good, and there is an abundant supply of water pumped from the canal by an excellent crank pump, which has been completed this year.

The water-closets and lavatories are well suited for their purposes; the latter being stalled. They are kept clean and tidy. There are four good baths for the use of males, and the same number for the females in convenient positions in the gaol. The kitchen is commodiously fitted with boilers and fire-places, and supplied with hot and cold water, and the necessary utensils. I found this department well organized, and clean. It is under the male prison, and the meals when cooked are elevated to the different stories by means of a lift. The laundry is also on the basement floor; it is rather small, but sufficient for present requirements. It is in contemplation of the Board to take in large washing contracts, in which case the laundry would require to be enlarged and divided into male and female departments. This, however, could be carried out with very little cost, and as the profits from this branch of prison labour is considerable, it would be a very advantageous addition to the gaol. Gas is supplied all over the prison; it is extinguished at 8.15 o'clock P.M. in winter in the cells, and at 11 in the officers' quarters, but is lighted all night in the prison hall. There are three tell-tale clocks, which are pegged by the night-watch, who goes on duty at 10 o'clock at night within the gaol. The Governor goes round the gaol at unexpected times between 11 o'clock P.M. and 5 A.M. frequently during the year. This duty was performed 285 times in 1867. The gaol is heated by a heating apparatus, and is also well ventilated.

I pointed out to the Local Inspector and Governor a desirable improvement in the present mode adopted for prisoners to see their friends, which would enable both prisoner and friend better to see one another, and, at the same time, to be fully under the supervision of the officer in charge.

The stores were well arranged, of a good quality, and sufficient for the requirements of the gaol. The prisoners' clothes were clean and in good repair. The female prisoners knit the prison stockings, a practice which it would be well was adopted in all gaols.

† Prisoners under sentence of hard labour were also employed at industrial labour and are included under that head.

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour disposed of outside the gaol, for the last three years :—

1865, . £17 1*s.* 8*d.* | 1866, . £14 5*s.* 11*d.* | 1867, . £26 19*s.* 10*d.*

I found one female prisoner in the refractory cell. She made a complaint to me against one of the matrons, but on investigation of the charge I was unable to discover that it was justifiable. Another female prisoner charged the Head Warder with having struck her on several occasions; however I am of opinion that this officer is not guilty of such a cowardly offence.

The profits from prison labour is small, but as will be seen by the above table has increased somewhat during the last three years.

The school is in connexion with the National Education Board, and the master is a regularly-trained teacher; but I think more means of improving their minds should be afforded to the adult prisoners. The females receive no secular instruction, except that which the Sisters of Mercy may impart to the Roman Catholic prisoners. I feel that this is an omission that demands the attention of the Board of Superintendence, as the reformation of prisoners should not be lost sight of in the management of a prison.

Dietary and Contracts.

2.—Dietary for prisoners whose term of Imprisonment shall exceed One Week, for Untried Prisoners who do not maintain themselves, and for Pauper Debtors.

Class 1 (Males).—Breakfast—8 oz. meal in stirabout and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. bread and 1 pint new milk. Supper—6 oz. bread and ½ pint new milk.

The diet of the prisoners is excellent, and is carefully inspected by both the Protestant and Roman Catholic Chaplains. The formula issued by the Lord Lieutenant last March is strictly adhered to.

All the provisions are got in by contract, and appear to be of a very good quality.

The books and diaries are well and regularly kept. The journals of the Local Inspector and Governor are full and lucid records of the principal daily occurrences connected with their duties; and both these officers are thoroughly conversant with the details connected with these books and accounts, and are alive to the importance of a constant supervision on their part of such books.

Net cost of gaol, including diet and salaries, for the three preceding years :—

The hospital receives careful and constant attention from the medical attendant, whose journal is both full and explicit. The sexes are duly separated, and the building supplied with proper appliances for the sick. I am bound to remark that a better distribution of the funds of this department would be advisable, as I do not think the medical officer's salary is proportionate with the duties he is called on to perform, while on the other hand a due regard for economy is not observed in the apothecary's department, the total cost of which exceeded the medical officer's salary in 1867, by the sum of £6 17*s.* 9*d.*

Photography is now practised in this gaol, and I have no doubt will be found a great assistance in the detection of old offenders.

Upon an examination of the foregoing group of schedules, we do not find anything, either in the amount or in the character of crime arising in the two jurisdictions, which demands special comment. Offences involving various gradations of violence, but chiefly assaults and breaches of the peace, are prevalent among both sexes, to which are to be added larcenies. There were in custody on the day of my inspection two males charged with highway robbery within the county. Military offenders tend to swell the returns on the part of the males in the city, and on that of the females prostitution and disorderly conduct produce a similar result; the constant recurrence of the latter sex to gaol, as attested by the table of re-committals, evidencing the inefficacy of mere prison discipline for the purposes of their repression and reformation, and furnishing a cogent argument for the establishment of refuges or other institutions, which would save them from the sad necessity of reverting on their discharge to their former courses.

There were no debtors in charge, and it is to be hoped that the Legislature, which already has happily interposed on the part of lunatics, will also free the prisons hereafter of these anomalous inmates. There were no "returned convicts" ascertained to be in such confinement; but as photography is not employed here, the means of recognising and tracing old offenders are wanting; nor were there any juveniles, although from time to time they appear on the registry—28 males in the county, and 16 males in the city, who came within this category, having passed through the prison during the current and past year, none of whom, however, I regret to add, were sent to reformatories.

I found the prison at my official visit clean and orderly, and in sound, general repair, except that the roof of the old prison requires to be rendered, and the tread-wheel building to be roofed and slated.

The sewerage is now effective, and the water-closets and lavatories, recently erected, are in satisfactory working order, and free from effluvia. Ventilation and light are also adequately provided, but gas has not been introduced into the cells. The supply of water is abundant, and the stock of clothing, which has lately been renewed, is sufficient. The circular path of the exercising-yard has been judiciously flagged since the last inspection, but the passage from the female exercising-yard to the hospital has not yet been closed, although the objections to its continuance were pointed out by my colleague in his report for 1867.

The system of individual cellular separation is enforced almost in its integrity throughout the criminal classes, the crank-pump, the tread-wheel, the stone-sheds, and the laundry being partitioned, and educational and industrial instruction being carried into effect with all prisoners in their cells, in which they also take their meals; the excess of accommodation over the ordinary number enabling them to sleep singly in other cells, which have not been occupied during the day time. At shot-drill, at exercise, in the chapel, and in the hospital (which is not on the cellular principle) the prisoners are in association, but in the three first cases they are under the unremitting supervision of officers.

The routine observed at lock-up, and subsequently until unlock on the following morning, is generally satisfactory—viz., as to the locking-in of each individual prisoner, the ascertainment of his presence, the testing of the fastenings of the cells (which have been effectually strengthened), the night rounds, patrol, and unexpected visits at late and unexpected hours on the part of a superior officer, and in the custody of the keys. There is, however, only one tell-tale clock, and there is no female officer or patrol on night; but these defaults have been modified by means of bells, which maintain communication between the male night watch and the Governor and Matron.

The locks are reported to be in good condition, and are repaired, when required, under the inspection of the Governor or other prison officers.

Hard labour on the part of the males is fulfilled by means of the tread-wheel, the crank-pump, and by shot-drill; the time of actual movement amounting to two hours and a quarter daily. There is no distinctive labour of a punitive character for females, nor industrial employment from which a remunerative return is derived by the sale of articles outside the walls; but prison duties, cooking and washing, constitute the chief occupation for either sex. Some of the turnkeys, however, are capable of giving rudimental instruction in the trades with which they are acquainted.

School-hours.—From 12 till 2, P.M., for Males and Females.

The prisoners of both sexes are taught in their cells respectively by the turnkeys and by the matron; but as these latter have never been trained in any educational institution, very little is effected in either departments, the males being generally under brief rules, and the females consisting chiefly of prostitutes. The schools are not in connexion with the National Board; and consequently there is neither official inspection, nor are there premiums offered to stimulate the energy of the teachers.

The approved form of registry is in use.

Dietary and Contracts.

Breakfast.—Males—4 oz. of oatmeal, same of Indian, made in stirabout, with ½ pint of new milk. Females—3½ oz. of oatmeal, same of Indian, made in stirabout, with ½ pint of new milk. Juveniles (male and female)—5 oz of meal in stirabout, with ½ pint new milk.

Dinner.—Males—14 oz. of brown bread, with 1 pint of new milk. Females—12 oz. of brown bread, with ¾ pint new milk. Juveniles—8 oz. of brown bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup.

Supper.—Males—6 oz. brown bread, and ½ pint new milk. Females—5 oz. brown bread, and ½ pint of new milk. Juveniles—5 oz. brown bread, and ½ pint of new milk.

All prisoners over a week receive potatoes three times each week.

No complaints with regard to the diet were preferred by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly. The Chaplains are assiduous in their inspection of the provisions, observing the tabular form of comment upon each item of consumption, as recommended by the Inspectors-General, and very rarely taking exceptions. I tasted the bread and the milk, which latter I found to be of very good quality. Extra diet is now rarely issued, a change in the elements rather than in the amount of food being found sufficient.

Books and Accounts.

All the superior officers, extern and intern, the Local Inspector, the Chaplains, the Medical Officer, the Governor, the Head Turnkey, and the Matron, are provided with satisfactory journals, and the books and forms prescribed and suggested by the several authorities, are generally kept with fulness and accuracy. The by-laws require revision in some particulars, and especially in relation to the admission of visitors to prisoners; those sentenced to terms exceeding a month, being permitted to see their friends monthly, instead of once in three months, which is the almost universal rule in the gaols of both kingdoms.

I would suggest the immediate adoption of an Officers' Misconduct Book, to be invariably laid before the Board in dealing with any dereliction of duty, so as to enable them to measure the antecedents of each officer. Written passes are also required for the intern officers, the time of absence allowed to be specified under the signature of the Governor, and the dockets to be given up on the return of the recipient.

The quarters assigned to the sick of both sexes are roomy, airy, cleanly, and fitted with baths and water-closets. The males are placed on the ground story, which is floored with Shankhill flags (an objectionable material as retaining surface moisture); and the females on the upper story. The Board is convened monthly for the transaction of general business, and for the payment of the smaller accounts, including the salaries of the subordinate staff, and the cost of conveying prisoners. The expenses of the Bridewells are discharged quarterly, and all other liabilities, comprising the salaries of the superior officers and contracts, are disposed of at each assizes.

Annexed is a tabular synopsis of the Bridewells, compiled from the observations of the Inspector-General and the Local Inspector at their several visits. When we analyze the above returns we are struck at the small amount of detected criminality which exists in this jurisdiction; and when we examine the table headed "Number of committals, specifying the offences," &c., we find a remarkable similarity of character prevailing there, offences against the person and against peace and order presenting a large preponderance among the males, while the record of the females reveals the degraded class from which the inmates of this sex are usually derived.

currency, such as the passing of base coin, constitute the far larger proportion of the remainder. There were happily no lunatics in detention here, and recent legislation has prevented the recurrence of this most unfit class of inmates to gaol; nor were there any returned convicts (known to be such) in charge; but photography, a valuable auxiliary to justice in ascertaining the antecedents of prisoners, is wanting here.

Juvenile offenders have also declined, and were not represented on the day of my inspection, nor had any been committed during the present year; and but 4 males and 1 female falling within this denomination passed through the gaol in 1868, of whom 2 males and the female were transferred to reformatories.

I found the building at my early and unexpected visit on the above day, in a very creditable condition of cleanliness, order, and repair, free from damp, well ventilated, and abundantly supplied with water. The sewerage in some of the sections of the building is very satisfactory, and capable of being flushed; and it is intended to abolish all privies connected merely with cesspools, and to render the whole equally effective—an improvement which is essential to the establishment of this vital principle of health. Important additions have been made to the security of the prison since the last inspection, and the several remaining defects noted in former reports have been fully taken into consideration by the local authorities; and I feel confident that measures would be at once adopted for correcting them if it were not for the position of abeyance in which all matters involving outlay are placed, pending projected legislation, and the uncertain results of it.

The bedding, blankets, and sheets are sufficient for the requirements, but the clothing, especially for females, is rather scanty. There is, however, material for making-up in store, and the stock of shoes is ample.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

King's County Gaol.

A lift for raising provisions is about to be provided, and the cook-house is to be isolated, so as to prevent all intercourse between the cooks and the other prisoners. The laundry (which is quite inadequate), the lavatories, the school-room, and the crank-pump not being fitted with stalls (an indispensable adjunct for preventing undue communication). The maintenance of the system of individual separation, which is applied to the criminals of both sexes, is impaired in these localities, as well as in the chapel and in the exercise yards, in which latter, however, supervision by officers is more easy and effectual.

The system of discipline observed in the following particulars is generally satisfactory:—At lock-up, in the examination of the security of the cells, in the ascertainment of the presence of the prisoners, in the night patrol (which, however, is limited to the interior of the building only), in visits at night on the part of a superior officer at uncertain periods, in the protection of the tell-tale clocks, in the custody of the keys, in the supervision of the locks, and in the mode of repairing them.

Punitive labour can scarcely be said to exist here, being fulfilled by the crank-pump daily for one hour only of actual motion. The extension of the English system of hard labour, both in character and duration, which will doubtless be carried into effect at no distant period, will involve a considerable alteration in the relative proportion of this form of punitive discipline to industrial employment. The latter is actively maintained by oakum-picking, weaving blankets, frieze, linen, and tickens; and all articles of clothing, as well as shoes, are made-up within the walls, and all repairs are executed by prison labour, several of the turnkeys being handicraftsmen—viz., a weaver, a shoemaker, a smith, and a carpenter.

School-hours—Males, from 10 o'clock, A.M., to 12 o'clock, noon. Females, from 10 o'clock to 11 o'clock, A.M.

The above schedule, which embraces the details of the school department, affords evidence that it amounts almost to a nullity, especially as regards the females, who are occasionally taught by the Matron, the males being instructed by the Clerk, who is qualified by previous training in an educational institution; but the total aggregate of prisoners of this sex is very low, and but few of them are sufficiently young or desirous to profit by his tuition.

The approved form of registry is observed; and the Chaplains visit from time to time, and enter their comments.

Dietary and Contracts.

Males.—Breakfast—4 oz. of oatmeal and 4 oz. of Indian meal made into stirabout, with ½ a pint of new milk. Dinner—14 oz. of brown bread, and 1 pint of new milk. Supper—6 oz. of brown bread, and ½ a pint of new milk.

Females.—Breakfast—3½ oz. of oatmeal and 3½ oz. Indian meal made into stirabout, with ½ a pint of new milk. Dinner—12 oz. brown bread, and 3 naggins of new milk. Supper—5 oz. of brown bread, and ½ a pint of new milk.

Potatoes are substituted for bread at dinner on three days in the week—males, 3 lbs.; females, 2½ lbs.

Roman Catholic prisoners, on the first and last Wednesdays in Lent and on Good Friday, get, instead of milk, 2 oz. molasses at breakfast, vegetable soup for dinner, and tea without milk for supper.

Prisoners whose term of imprisonment does not exceed one week get vegetable soup for dinner instead of milk, and no supper.

No complaints were preferred to me by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly, with respect to the dietary, the new scale of which, as approved by the Executive, in accordance with the recommendation of the Medical Committee, is in operation here, and is found to be highly satisfactory. The tabular form of comment on each item of food is adopted by the Chaplains, who are regular in their inspection, and usually make a very favourable report, the objections being directed almost exclusively to the milk in the earlier part of the year. I tasted the daily samples of the bread, milk, and stirabout, and found them all to be of unexceptionable quality.

Books, &c.

The superior officers are furnished with journals, which are duly submitted to the Board at each meeting. An Officers' Default Book and pass-checks for the subordinate intern officers are established here, as well as a Daily Order Book, which is read by the Governor at the morning parade—a practice deserving of imitation in all prisons. The several books and forms, prescribed and recommended by competent authority, are kept with laudable accuracy.

The Board is convened monthly, and at each meeting the salaries of the intern officers and all other current claims are discharged, the mode of payment being by means of an aggregate cheque drawn in favour of the Local Inspector, who subsequently accounts for the several disbursements. The salaries of the extern officers are presented for at each assizes.

A regulation is in force here which is a very valuable auxiliary to the maintenance of discipline—namely, the inspection of the whole prison at uncertain periods by two members of the Board, to whom this duty is delegated.

* The 4 male prisoners under six months' sentence, were a father and 3 sons who were convicted of assault at Newcastle West. The wife of the oldest prisoner and their youngest son, a boy of 14 years of age, had been in the gaol awaiting trial along with the others for the same offence, but they were discharged at the assizes without being placed on trial. This young boy about a year before got a sentence of two months' imprisonment for an assault.

Females,	13	12	11	11

The abnormal fluctuation in the averages of males is to be attributed solely to the existence of the Fenian conspiracy and its effects, as a reference to the table headed "Number of criminals, specifying the offences," &c., shows not only how large a proportion is due to this cause, but the preponderance of offences involving various gradations of personal violence and disorder, as contrasted with skilled crime directed against property. The females, whose aggregate was, of course, not influenced by the political movement, present an uniformity of averages, and the same character of delinquencies; inasmuch as they are to a considerable extent derived from an abandoned and degraded class; 3 of the 9 sane prisoners of this sex in custody being known prostitutes, and 1 of loose reputation. The length of the sentences of the tried males further attests the gravity of the charges established against them; 4 being under rules for two years, and 8 for twelve months. I found one very singular case of a youth, named James H., who was on the 24th of October, 1867, conveyed to gaol as John H., under sentence of one month and one week for fighting, &c., at Bruff. On the 12th of May he was again lodged in gaol as James H. for the like terms as before; the facts being the two brothers John and James were both sentenced at Bruff Petty Sessions, on the 26th of August, 1867, to the above terms of imprisonment. John was in place, and his brother, fearing that his arrest might deprive him of it, personated him and surrendered himself to the police as John, under whose warrant he was lodged in prison, where he further stated his name to be John. After his discharge he was in course of time re-arrested and committed as above. The two brothers are twins, and bear a remarkable likeness to each other, there being moreover a pearl on the left eye of both of them.

There were 2 females and 1 male recognised to be "returned convicts," photography being used here as a reliable aid to justice in tracing the antecedents of old offenders. The male to whom my colleague adverted in his last report, made a rambling statement to me upon matters which appeared to be irrelevant and groundless, and his whole demeanour and language led to the conviction that he was either insane or feigning insanity. There were still 7 lunatics, 6 males and 1 female, detained here, but I trust shortly about to be removed to an asylum, thus finally freeing the prison authorities from the pressure of a class whose presence was incompatible with the maintenance of due discipline. There were also 3 master debtors, 2 of whom (one being apparently instigated by the others) preferred complaints against the Governor and some of the staff in reference to the withholding of letters, and the exclusion of porter, &c., but I ascertained that they had attempted to elude the prison regulations by the surreptitious introduction of letters, and had been frequently guilty of gross disrespect and insubordination towards the superior officers. There were no juveniles in charge, but during the past year, and the unexpired portion of the current year, 32 males and 1 female, belonging to this denomination, were committed here, of whom 3 of the former sex were transferred to Reformatories upon the expiration of their preliminary sentences.

I found this prison at my inspection as I am bound to state, and I perform the duty with much pleasure, in its normal condition of order, cleanliness, and discipline; well-ventilated and free from damp, a few spots in which it had exhibited itself being now staunched, and having dried out. The supply of water, raised from three wells, is abundant; the sewerage is effective, and, as well as the water-closets, is provided with effluvia traps, but the springs of the water-closets are easily liable to disarrangement. The cells for both sexes are artificially warmed, the heating apparatus being adequate and furnished with gas-burners, and with all the appliances statutably required for giving effect to "separation." Some of the wires, however, connected with the gongs are still slack and inoperative. The stock of bedding, blankets, and sheets, and of shoes and prisoners' clothing (some material having been recently made up) was sufficient.

Since the last inspection a store for prisoners' clothing, and a fumigating-room have been constructed; the end wall of the board-room, and a portion of the Governor's house have been studded, and the doors leading from the head warder's quarters to the hall have been built up solely by prison labour. Two other door-ways, which were unnecessary for communication, have also been closed, and strong wooden doors have been placed inside the remainder, one important addition to the security of the prison being thus effected. It is intended to fit the windows of the male pauper debtors' day-room with muffed glass and a grating, as it commands a view of one of the exercising yards for criminals, in order to prevent any undue intercourse.

The system of "individual separation" is now applied to all criminal prisoners of both sexes, subject to the following exceptions:—1st, lunatics and their sane attendants are exempted, but this class will cease to exist at no distant period. 2nd, cooks; and it is to be hoped also that the employment of prisoners for this purpose, which has been found to tend to favouritism, and frequently to grave breaches of discipline, will be specially provided against by legislation. 3rd, All prisoners when attending school and chapel, and when engaged at exercise; with regard to the two latter, strict supervision renders irregular communication nearly impossible; but at the former, under pretence of learning a lesson aloud, or by passing scraps of papers old offenders contrive to keep up an understanding with each other, unless they are placed apart in deep separate compartments. In all other respects this form of discipline is maintained, and the practice observed in the following vital particulars of security is satisfactory, viz., in the locking in of each individual prisoner in his cell, in the ascertainment of his presence, in the examination of all the fastenings of the cells, in the night watch and patrol, in the final rounds, and in the frequent visits at late and unexpected hours on the part of a superior officer, as a check upon the vigilance and regularity of the watch, which are further tested by two tell-tale clocks. These, however, require to be further protected against tampering by affixing to the cases metal straps fastened with patent padlocks, the keyholes being then covered.

Punitive labour has been fulfilled by the crank-pump, by picking oakum of the heavier sort, and by stone-breaking; from the two latter a remunerative return has been obtained, a large amount of stone having been raised on the premises during the remodelling of the gaol, and prison labour was also turned to important account in sinking the wells, and in alterations and repairs, including plastering and painting. Only one of the turnkeys is a trained handicraftsman, viz., a cabinetmaker, who acts as a carpenter, but there are others who are capable of giving rudimental instruction in employments available within the walls; in the event, however, of vacancies arising, it would be desirable to secure the services of tailors and shoemakers. The females are engaged in washing, mending, sewing, and knitting. The whole question of the proportion of time to be devoted to hard labour will be solved whenever a Prisons' Bill shall extend to this kingdom as is projected; the nature and duration of that penal element which is now by law enforced in Great Britain.

The school which, in consequence of the occupation of the gaol by a considerable number of those involved in the Fenian conspiracy, was for a long time in abeyance, has lately been re-opened. Both sexes are instructed (a matron being always present at the tuition of the females) by a competent teacher, who holds a first-class certificate under the National Board of Education, with which it is to be regretted that the school is not placed in connexion; as thus books and other requirements could be procured on advantageous terms, an examination from time to time by the District Inspectors would be insured, and probably gratuities would be granted if the conduct of this department were reported to be meritorious. The pupils are in association, although under the supervision of an officer, and it would therefore be desirable that the school-rooms should be partitioned, or that stalls should be erected in the galleries. The approved form of registry is in use as heretofore; the Chaplains have occasionally to visit the schools.

No complaints with regard to the provisions were preferred to me by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly. The new scale of dietary has been established; and potatoes, a corrective element, to which the Medical Commissioners appointed to report upon this vital branch of prison administration appear to attach great value, were about to be introduced. The tabular form of comment, recommended by the Inspectors-General, is observed by the Chaplains, who are regular in their inspections, and almost universally record a favourable opinion of the several items of food.

Books, &c.

The registries and the several forms recognised by competent authority are kept with laudable accuracy, and the superior officers are furnished with journals which are examined by the Board. A very voluminous code of by-laws is now in force, the final sanction of the Executive having been accorded. Pass-checks are issued here to the intern officers when they obtain leave to pass through the gate; and an "Officers' Default Book" has also been provided, an indispensable auxiliary to the proper administration of a prison.

I have to recapitulate the observations directed in my report for the year 1866, to "the very objectionable practice which has been allowed to grow up here, and which elsewhere has been found to lead to very disastrous consequences, namely, a permission to the families of officers to reside within the walls. The number of such persons amounts, irrespectively of the Governor's family, but including two visiters, to no less than thirty-six, a total nearly equal to the daily average of male prisoners during the last three years. It is impossible to overstate the detriment to order, discipline, and security caused by the presence of so large an aggregate of individuals having constant facilities of egress and ingress, who are wholly exempt from authority, and are not amenable to the by-laws and statutes affecting prisons, and as the children approach or reach maturity, the danger is of course greatly enhanced." This evil has increased far beyond my anticipations, for in the annual return furnished at the close of the year, I find that the numbers of such persons amounted to no less than forty-nine, being actually in excess of the total inmates of the marshalsea and criminal prison on the day recorded above, if we deduct the lunatics, who are now merely temporary inmates awaiting removal to the Asylum. It will be indispensable in the Prisons' Bill which will, it is to be hoped, at no distant period be submitted to the Legislature to preclude the continuance of this anomalous intrusion.

The condition of the bridewells of this county, wanting as they are in almost all the primary requirements of minor prisons, calls loudly for remedy, or abolition. The latter would appear to be the preferable alternative, having regard to the paucity of the numbers confined, the facility of railway communication, and the establishment of the more approved system of discipline in the commodious and secure central gaol.

There is little variation in the numbers of either sex to be noted in the above schedules, but the males in the expired portion of the current year up to the period of inspection evince a tendency to decline. The character of crime remains unchanged from that recorded in former reports; offences of violence and disorder, and infractions of the public peace constitutes a large preponderance as appears from the table headed "Numbers of committals specifying the offences," &c., to which are to be added larcenies. It is almost needless to observe that the female inmates are chiefly derived from the class of prostitutes to be ordinarily found in a seaport town, which is further the seat of a military garrison. There was 1 "returned convict" in custody, but as photography is not employed here, an important aid in tracing the antecedents of grave offenders is wanting. There were happily no lunatics detained here, nor was there any juveniles in charge. Under the latter category during the past and current year 16 males and 5 females were committed here, of whom half the males and all the females were transferred to reformatories, upon the expiration of their preliminary sentences.

I found the gaol at my inspection clean and dry, and structurally secure, save in the particulars detailed below. The supply of water is abundant, the main sewerage effective, and the stock of bedding, blankets, sheets, &c., and prison clothing adequate for existing requirements, except that of shoes, which are deficient. Having conferred fully with Mr. Corbett, C.E., the architect appointed by the Building Commissioners, in reference to the several points of improvement which I feel bound to suggest, I now proceed to enumerate them succintly.

1. A further provision of baths, there being but one in the prison.

2. The correction of the defects in the laundry (the boiler being imperfect), and in the drying-room.

3. The procurement of seats or forms for the Roman Catholic Chapel.

4. Pipe-tile drains, and water-tables, or eave-gutters or down-shoots, to be attached to the buildings are needed for the prevention of flooding; the yards being occasionally overflooded to such a depth as to be almost impassible.

5. The conversion of a portion of the Protestant Chapel into a stalled school-room for males, by transposing the wooden partition now standing, and by removing the wall which divides it from the passage leading into the male gallery.

6. The female school-room to be stalled.

7. The formation of a female hospital, as devised by Mr. Corbett, by cutting off a portion of the male debtors quarters, and by dividing the pauper debtors gaol into two, one to be assigned to each denomination of debtors, viz., "masters," and "paupers."

8. A door to be opened from the lower gallery of the male prison directly into the stone-yard, and a cross wall now dividing the stone-yard from the hospital yard to be removed, and rebuilt at a short distance, in order to prevent the passage of the "hard-labour" prisoners through the latter as at present, which is highly objectionable.

9. The reconstruction of the existing stone-sheds, so as to give them sufficient depth, and width to afford shelter, and to guard against undue communication; and the building of additional sheds, in order to provide means of fulfilling the increased amount of hard-labour (as already enforced in Great Britain), which will doubtless be prescribed in this kingdom.

10. A connecting door to be opened between the matron's quarters and the female galleries, so as to facilitate communication at night, if required, and port holes to be made in the wall, in order to convey the sound of the gong when struck.

11. A second tell-tale clock to be procured, and both to be protected against tampering by attaching a broad metal strap, fastened by a padlock of the most approved patent, the key of which is to be kept in the sole possession of the Governor.

12. An iron grating to be placed on the side at which prisoners are stationed when holding converse with their visiters, in order to prevent contact, and the transmission of prohibited articles, or means of escape, for which the present more defective arrangement offers great facilities.

13. The raising of three walls for the purpose of security, viz., the outer boundary wall at Merchants'-quay; the wall dividing the male and female yards; and the wall of the store adjoining Newgate-lane, with a parapet and a gutter.

These amendments having been submitted together with an estimate by Mr. Corbett, to the local authorities, I regret to state that those numbered 4 (partially), 7 and 10 alone were recommended to be immediately carried into effect, the remainder being deferred on the alleged grounds of the very high rates at present in course of collection within the city, and the large outlay already incurred, no provision being thus made for correcting the vital defects in the security of the prison. Subsequently also to my inspection, I have been informed that several leaks have been found in the male prison, to which, however, the attention of the architect has been directed by the Local Inspector.

The summer lock-up takes place at 6 30 P.M., and in winter at 4 30 P.M., unlock being held in the former season at 6 A.M., and in the latter at 7 30. The Governor attends the lock-up, and sees every male prisoner locked into his cell by the turnkey who has charge of the class. The female prisoners are seen by the governor, and locked up by the matron or assistant matron. At unlock the male prisoners are unlocked by the class turnkey, and a roll of the whole is called by the head turnkey. The Governor, subsequently to lock up, in company with the officers on night duty, makes a tour of the male prison, and ascertains the presence of each prisoner by challenge, and tests the security of the fastenings. He goes his final rounds at 10 P.M., and further states that he visits the prison from time to time at later and unexpected hours. The night watch is performed by two of the turnkeys in rotation, one who patrols all round the building, and the other, who remains within the male prison. There is only one tell-tale clock, which is inadequately protected against tampering. The locks are reported to be in excellent order, and all the keys are stated to be delivered up to the Governor at 10 P.M., and placed by him in a safe which stands in his own bedroom.

Neither of the teachers were qualified by previous training in any educational institution. The approved form of registry of progress had hitherto been in use, and the Chaplains had visited from time to time. Since the foregoing, however, was prepared for type I lament to state that the Board, in accordance with the report of two of their members appointed for that purpose, determined to wholly discontinue school instruction, upon the allegation that the short periods for which the greater numbers of Dietary for prisoners whose term of imprisonment shall exceed one week, for untried prisoners who do not maintain themselves, and for pauper debtors:—Class 1. The meal used is half Indian meal, and half oatmeal. The bread is made of second quality flour; and potatoes are substituted for bread at dinner on three days of the week.

No complaints were preferred to me with regard to the provisions by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly. The new dietary which was approved by the Executive upon full consideration, in accordance with the recommendation of the able and conscientious Medical Committee appointed to inquire into this vital principle of prison administration, is established here. The further increase suggested by the Committee is conditional, and dependent entirely upon the extension to this Kingdom of the scale of hard labour now exacted in England under the 28th & 29th Vic., cap. 126.

The Chaplains are regular in their inspection, observing the approved form of tabular comment, but no column had been prepared for noting their observations upon the "vegetable soup," which constitutes an important element of change in the new dietary. Their opinion is generally favourable, but I found not unfrequent exceptions to the milk during the late contract; the present contractor, however, appears to give satisfaction. On the other hand I am informed by the Local Inspector that he has been from time to time obliged to deduct a large amount from the account of the bread contractor for "short weight," and that on one occasion an attempt was fortunately detected to substitute bread of a very inferior quality by covering it with a thin layer of good bread. It is much to be regretted that the food contractors here are not compelled to enter into stringent bonds, so as to enable the local authorities to exact severe penalties for defaults.

The addition of supper has necessitated a change in the hours hitherto assigned for meals, which now are fixed for breakfast 9 A.M., dinner 3 P.M., and supper 7 P.M.

Books, &c.

The superior officers both extern and intern are furnished with journals, and the several forms ordered by the Court of Queen's Bench and recommended by the Inspectors-General are maintained here, except a general "Visitors Book," and a "Daily Employment Book," which contains a "time table" showing the exact period assigned to every kind of labour in the case of each prisoner. The "Gate-Porter's Book" is not sufficiently explanatory in the column headed "Observations," and the "Discharge Book" is very unsatisfactory and unintelligibly filled.

An officers "Misconduct Book" is imperatively required, in which even infringement of the rules, or deviation from duty should be entered, so as to enable the Board whenever an officer is charged with any dereliction, to deal cumulatively with the case, having regard to his recorded antecedents.

"Pass-checks" also are much needed to prevent all irregular egress from the prison. The dockets specifying the exact time of absence allowed, to be issued under the signature of the Governor, and to be given up upon the return of the recipient. The "Visiters to Prisoners Book" is not regularly kept, no entry being made during the absence of the gate-porter at dinner.

The cells for both sexes being more prepared for carrying out the system of individual separation, it is indispensable that a code of by-laws for legalizing the application of this mode of discipline in its integrity should be framed, and submitted for approval and sanction; and it would be advisable at the same time to define with accuracy the precise duties of each officer.

Vacancies.

Six Turnkeys—two dismissed for insubordinate conduct; one refused to be certified for; two resigned; and one superannuated. The vacancies were filled up by appointments made by the Board of Superintendence.

Officers on Gaol Allowance.

The governor, matron, assistant-matron, and head turnkey, are supplied with fuel and gas-light. The hospital nurse with fuel and candle-light. No other allowances are given.

Since the above schedule was furnished several changes have taken place among the officers. The Protestant Chaplain, the Very Rev. A. L. Kirwan, Dean of Limerick, has died; the matron, and the clerk and schoolmaster resigned upon superannuation; and one of the turnkeys was also permitted to resign, instead of incurring dismissal, he having upon investigation finally admitted the falsity of the accounts furnished by him, of the expenses of the conveyance of male juveniles to reformatories. An inquiry was held under an order of the Lords Justices, in June, 1867, which occupied several days, into serious charges preferred against some of the officers of the prison, and in this statutable report my colleague, who was present during the proceedings, felt bound to express his opinion "that it was essential for the interest of the prison that several members of the staff should be removed, and some of the offices recast." He further took occasion to observe, that "making every allowance for the doubtful character of part of the evidence against the officers of the gaol, and the want of corroboration by unimpeachable testimony of some of the witnesses, yet enough was indisputably proved to inculpate almost every intern of the gaol; and the abuses which were admitted to have existed casts a grave stigma on those concerned in its management, with the exception of the Local Inspector, through whose exertions the facts brought to light were principally elicited.

Notwithstanding, however, the necessity for a complete reform in the administration, I lament to state that since the last inspection various instances of laxity and neglect have been reported to the Prisons' Office, such as the escape of prisoners. The Board in one of these cases having declared their inability to fix the guilt, "as it was impossible to accurately define who was really at fault, and in whose charge the prisoner was at the time of his escape." Further charges have also been brought against the turnkeys for failures of duty in pegging the tell-tale clock, in searching prisoners, in maintaining order among the latter, and in allowing them to be congregated without supervision; against the apothecary by the Medical Officer, and Local Inspector, for an insufficient and improper supply of medicines and medical appliances (which he contracts to furnish for the use of patients), as well as the mode of keeping and compounding such medicines; and against the matron, now on probation (having been promoted from the office of assistant matron) for grave irregularities and omissions in the female work Account Book; irregularities which appear to have been enhanced by her explanation, "that prisoners confined for a week and under were never inserted in it; that she was directed by one of the Inspectors-General not to insert the name of such prisoners, that she could not recollect which, that Mr. Hurley (the late clerk) could recollect, as it was he who told her not to do so, but Mr. Hurley, when referred to, totally denied all knowledge of such an order." It appears, moreover, that no such limitation has ever existed in the male Work-Account, the names of all prisoners, even those under rules for twenty-four hours being invariably inserted.

At the period of my inspection I sought an interview with the Board, and from the cordial manner in which they received the suggestions which I felt conscientiously bound to offer, I entertained the strong hope that thenceforth the pressure of personal and local interests would not have been allowed to sway their decisions in condoning with undue lenity derelictions of duty on the part of existing officers, or in the selection of candidates for appointments as they became vacant; but the nomination of Miss Gaynor lately assistant matron, to the important post of matron, who at the protracted investigation referred to above, was found in the words of my colleague "to be inefficient for discipline," leads me to fear that other influences than the desire to obtain the most efficient staff, which public competition alone can secure, still prevail, and I would, therefore, once more appeal to the gaol authorities, and trust not in vain, and impress upon them that the rate-payers having at a large cost provided a building fitted with all the material requirements for giving effect to the most approved system, viz., that of "individual cellular separation," such cost and such requirements become absolutely nugatory without moral aid, and unless this form of discipline is administered by competent officers of certified character and special training.

Hospital.

At present there is but one hospital for both sexes with a single staircase common to both, placed in a yard through which all prisoners sentenced to hard labour must pass on their way to the tread-wheel, and stone-sheds; but in the earlier part of this report the remedy for this crying evil is suggested by the establishment of a separate infirmary for females, adjoining the section of the gaol allocated for their occupation. There are water closets, and a bath attached to the existing building. The sanitary condition of the prisoners has been for some time satisfactory.

A considerable reduction is observable in the average of the males during the last two years, probably due to the abatement of disturbing causes, such as Fenianism, and the excitement arising out of a contested election, which swelled the preceding aggregates. The females are largely derived from the class of prostitutes, and here, as elsewhere, more frequently recur to prison than the other sex. A reference to the schedule, headed "Number of committals, specifying the offences, &c.," proves the proportionate prevalence of crimes against the person, and against public order and peace, on the part of both sexes, but the sentences of those returned as being in custody, although the total of the latter is small, are of great comparative gravity, some of them being for larceny of an aggravated character, and for stealing cattle, sheep, and horses, and for passing base coin.

There were no returned convicts in charge, ascertained to be such; but photography is wanting here, as an auxiliary to justice, in tracing the antecedents of old and hardened delinquents. There were happily no lunatics still detained here; and the alteration in the law, which hitherto had consigned the insane to criminal prisons, precludes the intrusion in future of those most unsuitable inmates.

There was but one juvenile, a male, in confinement on the day on which I have recorded my inspection; 11 males and 5 females, falling within this denomination, having been committed here during the year, or current year, of whom 1 only (of the latter sex) was tranferred to a reformatory.

I found the prison clean, and in generally good repair. The roof and ceiling, however, of the chapel demand immediate attention, and a leak, which has opened at edge of the water-tanks, fed by the tread-wheel, requires to be staunched. The building is dry, except in the above particulars, in the lodgment of atmospheric moisture upon the flooring flags, and the rising of ground-damp in the lower tier of cells, which could be obviated, although at a considerable expense, by affixing eave-courses and down-shoots to intercept the drip from the roof, which at present soaks into the basement. Some of the gates were unprovided with locks, two being of special importance, viz., that leading to the tread-wheel yard, where hard-labour prisoners are assembled, and the other conducting to the infirmary.

A door in the entrance-hall of the matron's house, which opens into a small plot, divided merely by a railing from one of the male exercising yards, ought to be built up, being useless and insecure. The ventilation is satisfactory, and the supply of water abundant. The sewerage is stated to be effective, and capable of being flushed; but the cesspools, connected with the privies, require to be cleaned from time to time; the sewage being removed to a pit, which is covered with turf-mould as a deodorizer. The bedding, blankets, and sheets, were adequate for the average of inmates; but the stock of shoes was rather scanty, and a fumigating apparatus, for cleaning the prisoners' own clothing, is wanting. No alteration since the last inspection has taken place, and, consequently, the defects enumerated in former reports remain; but, taking into consideration the existing position of uncertainty with respect to the fulfilment of projected legislature involving comprehensive changes in the constitution and distribution of county and borough prisons, I refrain from suggesting any definite course of action, tending to expenditure, which might prove nugatory.

The system of "individual cellular separation" is applied to the criminal classes of both sexes, except in the cases of lunatics and their sane attendants (an exception now terminated) of hospital wardsmen; at chapel, and at exercise (the supervision in the two latter instances being sufficient to prevent undue intercourse), and at school, as the males are associated in the hall, and the females in a day-room; an infringement of "separation," which ought to be corrected by the establishment of stalled desks.

The form of discipline observed at lock-up, and in the interval between it and at unlock in the morning, if it be accurately reported to me, is effective in the following particulars, viz., in the locking-in of each individual prisoner, in the subsequent ascertainment of the presence of such prisoner, in the testing of the cell-fastenings, in the night-rounds, in the patrol, in the visits on the part of a superior officer at late and unexpected hours, in the custody of keys, in the state of the locks, in the mode of repairing them when out of order; on the other hand, there is no gas supplied in the cells; the tell-tale clocks, not being thoroughly protected against tampering, require that a metal strap should be affixed, so as to cover the key-holes, and be fastened with a padlock of the most improved patent; the key to be kept in the sole possession of the Governor; and there is no patrol in the interior; it is asserted, however, that the watchman outside can hear the sound of the gong, if struck, or the call of the Governor.

A return of the amount of punitive labour, which was furnished to the Prisons' Department at the close of the last year, and which represented the time "actually employed in labour" to be three hours, I ascertained, at my first inspection, to be utterly fallacious; the whole time assigned to working the tread-wheel (which is stalled) being two hours, or one hour of actual movement; the intervals of rest being of equal duration, viz., "ten minutes on, and ten minutes off." Industrial labour is not highly remunerative here, but some mats and brushes are manufactured for extern sale, as well as for intern use; linen is woven, and shoes and clothing are made up within the walls. There are among the turnkeys three handicraftsmen; viz., a weaver (capable of giving instruction in the rudiments of shoemaking), a matmaker, and a mason; but the latter trade is less generally available in a gaol. The services of any skilled prisoners, moreover, are turned to account.

The female school is almost a nullity. In first and second classes "the sentences are so limited and the prisoners so old that much can- "not be expected. The third class well taught, intelligent, and fit for "the Fourth Book. In the case of M. W., aged sixteen, who stated "that he had been for ten years in Abbeyleix Poor Law Union School, "his ignorance is lamentable. The school was progressive."

The form of registry, prescribed by the National Board, alone is in use here; but it would be advisable to keep also that recommended by the Inspectors-General, as being better suited to the low scale of proficiency of the ordinary prisoners. The Chaplains, as stated to me, do not visit the schools.

Books and Accounts.

The superior officers are provided with journals; and some of the books prescribed, and recommended by competent authority, are kept with correctness. The Intern Officers' Gate-book, however, and the General Gate-book, which furnishes, if properly filled, the most effective means of checking the records of discipline and of food-supply, have been grossly misused, or rather wilfully set aside. No entry had been made in the Juvenile Registry up to the period of my first visit, nor in the Officers' Default Book. I found some other instances of neglect and omission with regard to the books, which I have no doubt will not recur hereafter, as they proceeded from ignorance rather than from design. Pass-checks are especially required to be issued by the Governor to all intern officers as a guarantee for permission to pass out of the prison; the time of absence allowed to be specified, and the docket to be given up upon the return of the recipient.

(in the absence of the Governor), and a want of due perception of their duties by the staff. I accordingly addressed a letter to the Chairman of the Board of Superintendence, which led to a searching investigation, and to the discovery of the gravest derelictions and falsification of records, and which eventuated in the resignation of the three superior officers, to whose names astericks are attached, and who were severally replaced by Mr. Charles Moore, Mr. P. Morgan (late County Inspector of Constabulary), and W. Sythes, promoted from the rank of turnkey.

Subsequently in the intervals between my inspection further instances of laxity came to light, which constrain me to state, without entering into a particular detail, that such is the demoralization of the staff (the consequence, I apprehend, of a long immunity from detection, and bad example on the part of the superior officers,) that decisive measures for recasting the whole body are imperatively demanded.

The wards for the sick of each sex are adequate in point of space and ventilation, and are fitted with baths and water-closets; but they are accessible only by a staircase in common to both, a defect which might be advantageously modified by placing an iron check-gate so as to cut off communication.

The sanitary condition of the prisoners was, and had been satisfactory.

The Board is convened monthly, when all liabilities, except the salaries of the superior officers (which are paid at the assizes) are discharged, the larger sums by cheques drawn in favour of the several creditors, and the smaller by an aggregate cheque placed in the hands of the Governor, who produces the requisite receipts at the next ensuing meeting.

Bridewells.

I have only to recapitulate my former observations upon the bridewells of this county:—

"No improvement has taken place in these wretched buildings, wanting as they are in the primary requirements of minor prisons, and especially the due separation of the sexes; but I am bound to state that the local authorities appear to be strongly in favour of their abolition as unfit and useless, when their defective condition, the small numbers confined in them, the central position of the County Gaol, in which cellular separation is established, the short distances, and the facilities of communication, are taken into consideration. I sincerely trust, therefore, that another effort will be made to abate these nuisances; and that, in the event of failure, the Legislature will intervene."

A decline in both sexes, that of the females being inconsiderable, is to be noted, but it is probable that the diminution is to be attributed chiefly to the withdrawal of lunatics; and in the case of the males, to the abeyance, if not to the suppression, of Fenianism.

When we examine the schedule which shows the "Number of committals, specifying the offences," &c., and the return of the offences and sentences of those in custody on the day recorded above, we remark the prevalence of offences against the person, and against peace and order on the part of the males, those directed against property being comparatively few; acts of violence and disorder are also to be found among the females, but the proportion of larcenies and thefts is greater than in the other sex, and is incident to the degraded and desperate class from which they are ordinarily derived; no less than 4 of the 7 females in charge being known prostitutes.

There were happily no lunatics detained here under committals prior to the 1st of January, at which period it became illegal to consign the insane to prison; and no returned convicts ascertained to be such, photography being in use here for tracing the antecedents of those suspected to belong to this denomination.

The category of juveniles was also unrepresented at my official visit; 4 males in the present year, and 12 in 1867 (of whom 4 were committed for high treason, and afterwards discharged), and 2 females passed through the prison, of which aggregate but 1 of the latter sex was transmitted to a reformatory.

I found the building at my inspection in a highly creditable condition of cleanliness and order, free from damp, and in sound repair, except in some trifling points, which were about to be amended. The supply of water is abundant, the sewerage effective, and the stock of clothing, shoes, bedding, blankets, &c., sufficient. The heating apparatus and the baths, which have lately been constructed for both sexes in the building formerly containing the punishment cells, are in complete working order; and I am bound to add that in all matters of mere administration an excellent system is pursued. There are, however, some structural defects which render it impossible at present to establish the only reliable form of discipline, viz., that based on individual cellular separation; the classification which still exists being limited to a division of the tried from the untried of both sexes, who are, moreover, in almost entire association (although under the supervision of officers), except in the laundry, at night, and at meal times, when they occupy single cells, some not being artificially heated. It is unnecessary to recapitulate the several requirements which have been noted in former reports, inasmuch as it would be inexpedient and unjust to urge definitively the local authorities to take immediate measures which might prove nugatory, if the legislation which is projected, but which must necessarily be postponed in consequence of the pressure and peculiar position of public business should involve extensive and vital changes to be in the constitution and distribution of county and borough prisons.

I acquiesce the more readily in this abstinence from offering suggestions as I am convinced that, in the event of such legislation being adopted, the fullest disposition will be found here to carry it into practical effect.

No alteration has taken place since the last inspection in the form of maintaining discipline and security during the important interval between lock-up and unlock in the morning; great vigilance being exercised in the following particulars:—in searching the person of each prisoner before he is locked into his cell, in testing the safety of the cell fastening, in the subsequent ascertainment of the presence of each prisoner, in the night rounds and patrols, in the protection of the tell-tale clocks against tampering (an indispensable precaution), in the occasional visits of a superior officer at unexpected periods during the night, in the custody of the keys, and in the general excellence of the locks, some of them being of Hobbs's patent, and in the mode of repairing such as require rectification. After unlock, and in the course of the forenoon, there is an examination of the furniture and of the fastenings of the cells, of the buildings generally, and of the boundary wall, and the tell-tale clocks are also thoroughly inspected.

Punitive labour, ...	15	6
Industrial labour, ...	5	1
Total in custody, . .	20	7

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour, disposed of outside the gaol, for the last three years:—

1865, . £13 19*s.* 8*d.* | 1866, . £16 8*s.* 9*d.* | 1867, . £16 6*s.* 5*d.*

Punitive labour, in the proper acceptation of the term, is limited to raising water by the tread-wheel, a process which only occupies one hour of actual motion. Stone-breaking also partakes of this character, but among prisoners derived very largely from the agricultural class it can scarcely be considered as penal.

* These 15 males, employed at punitive labour for two hours, are afterwards employed during the remainder of the day at industrial labour, under the four different headings.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

County of Tipperary (North Riding) Gaol.

Industrial employment is actively maintained in the manufacture of mats and brushes, and in making up every article of wear for the use of the prison; and some slight profit is obtained from washing. Some of the turnkeys are handicraftsmen, and all the repairs of the building and painting are executed by prison labour under their supervision.

Average daily number of pupils,	22·82	4·15	15·2	–
Number of days on which school was held,	251	169	112	–

School hours.—Males, from 4 to 5 o'clock, P.M.—Females, from 10 to 11 o'clock, A.M.

The males are taught by the clerk, who was partially trained for tuition. The females are instructed by a qualified matron. The approved form of registry is in use here, and the schools have been placed in connexion with the National Board of Education, whose Inspector reports, on the whole, favourably on that of the males, the female department having been closed at the period of his last visit in consequence of the paucity of prisoners of this sex, and the shortness of their sentences. A Chaplain also occasionally visits, and enters his observations.

REPORT of the DISTRICT INSPECTOR upon the MALE SCHOOL.

"The course of instruction is as extensive as the limited school time will admit of, and embraces the most important subjects in primary education. All the prisoners but two were committed since my previous inspection, and have, therefore, been but a short time under instruction; and as they were grossly ignorant at the time of their committal, much proficiency cannot be expected. Their progress has been decidedly good; 6 of them are able to read easy narratives, and 5 write fairly; but the proficiency in arithmetic and writing from dictation is very low.

"The prisoners highly appreciate the opportunity afforded them of learning to read and write, and are doing what they can to make up for past neglect."

Dietary and Contracts.

I. Dietary of Prisoners whose term of Imprisonment shall not exceed One Week.

Class 1 (Males).—Breakfast—8 oz. meal in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. bread, and 1 pint vegetable soup.

Class 3 (Males and Females under 15 years).—Breakfast—5 oz. meal in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—8 oz. bread, and 1 pint vegetable soup. Supper—4 oz. bread.

II. Dietary of Prisoners whose term of Imprisonment shall exceed One Week, for Untried Prisoners, and Pauper Debtors.

Class 1 (Males).—Breakfast—8 oz. meal in stirabout, and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—14 oz. bread, and 1 pint new milk. Supper—8 oz. bread, and ½ pint milk.

Potatoes are to be substituted for bread at dinner, on three days in the week, in the following proportions:—Class 1, 3 lbs.; Class 2, 2½ lbs.; Class 3, 2½ lbs.

Contracts.—Bread, white, per 4lb. loaf, 8½*d.*; brown, per 4lb. loaf, 7½*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt., 15*s.* 11½*d.*; potatoes, per stone, 7*d.*; meat, per lb., 7*d.*; new milk, per gallon, 7*d.*; salt, per cwt., 1*s.* 9*d.*; coal, per ton, £1 4*s.* 3*d.*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 7*s.* 6*d.*; candles, dipt, per lb., 5*d.*; do., mould, per lb., 6*d.*; soap, per cwt., £1.

No complaints with regard to the diet were preferred by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly. The new scale of dietary, approved by the Executive upon the recommendation of the Medical Committee appointed to inquire into this important subject, is issued here, and is proved to be highly satisfactory.

I tasted the daily samples of the provisions, and found them to be of unexceptionable quality. The tabular form of comment upon each item of food is observed by the Chaplains, who are regular in their inspection.

Books, &c.

The superior officers are provided with journals, which are duly submitted to the Board, and the several books and forms, prescribed and recommended by competent authority, are kept with very praiseworthy correctness. An Officers' Default Book is now established here, and I suggested the adoption of pass-checks for the intern officers, under the signature of the Governor, the time of absence from the prison to be specified, and the docket to be given up upon the return of the recipient.

I was happy to receive from the Local Inspector and the Governor a satisfactory report of the general conduct of the staff. I would, however, observe that the employment of a prisoner in cooking for one of the officers is in direct contravention of the circular prohibiting the "employment of any prisoner in any menial capacity for the service of the officers," and that this practice has been found to lead to very grave breaches of discipline in other gaols, and has been made the subject of investigation and consequent punishment.

Hospitals.

The accommodation for the sick of both sexes is far beyond the ordinary requirements as to space, but fixed baths and water-closets are still wanting. The general sanitary condition of the prisoners was and had been favourable, it being rarely found necessary to transfer patients, who are ordinarily dealt with in their cells for minor ailments, to the hospital, only one male, for instance, having been treated here during the first four months of this year. Alarm bells are attached to both hospitals, and to the female prison, in order to summon aid if it should be required, the keys being in the custody of the Governor.

Bridewells.

A reference to the annexed tabular synopsis of the Bridewells of the North Riding will show how imperfect, in point of construction and security, many of them are; and having regard to these defects, which will only be corrected by a large outlay, to the paucity of prisoners confined in them, and to the facility and cheapness of railway communication to the gaol at Nenagh, I submit that it would be politic to move the Executive to exercise the power of discontinuance in the case of all, except that of Thurles.

Number of days on which school was held,	183	–	174	–

School-hours—Males, 10 to 12, A.M.

It will be seen by the table, in reference to the highest number of prisoners in gaol during the past seven years, that there is a larger reduction in the number of prisoners in gaol during the past year than has taken place in any of the seven preceding years; and that, with the exception of the year 1865, the number in gaol, exclusive of debtors, was less last year than it has been during the past seven years. This satisfactory state of things is accounted for by the absence of any great number of political prisoners, two only having been arrested this year under the Act for suspending the writ of Habeas Corpus. These, however, were no longer in custody on the day of my inspection.

There were no prisoners in custody during the past year on the charge of murder, and only 2 on that of manslaughter. The principal crimes seem to be common assault and larceny, of which there was a sensible increase, especially amongst the males, during the last three years.

Since my colleague's inspection of this prison last year, the works which were then in progress have been in a great measure completed, so that the separate system can now be carried out in its most important branches.

The old gaol has been given up, and the new one made more secure.

I found the prison in good repair and very clean, and well supplied with water, which is pumped into a cistern by the tread-wheel, from whence almost any amount of water can be driven to all parts of the gaol, and by which the sewers can be efficiently flushed. The new male laundry is now in full working order, and there is a good drying-room fitted up within the laundry yard. By this means washing contracts are executed, which is a source of considerable profit to the gaol. The new cook-house is well arranged and fitted up, and the cooking appears to be both regularly and efficiently carried on; but this house is situated at too great a distance from the prison.

The gas burners in the cells project too far, and would afford a great facility to a prisoner to commit suicide were he so inclined. The Medical Officer has invented an excellent method of ventilating the cells, but it would be far preferable for the cells to be lighted from outside, both from a sanitary point of view, and in regard to the safety of the prisoners. The arrangement now adopted in male turnkey's quarters is very good, orderly, and conducive to the maintenance of discipline; but I did not find the Assistant Matrons' rooms as clean or orderly.

There is no provision whatsoever for a place for Protestant worship, as it appears there is at Clonmel an objection to the Protestants using the same chapel as the Roman Catholics. The Protestant Chaplain very justly complained of this state of things, as he is obliged to perform the service in most unsuitable apartments, and not always in the same. There is an apartment in the Marshalsea which could, with very little expense, be converted into a Protestant chapel. I pointed this out to the Local Inspector, who promised to bring the matter before the Board of Superintendence.

There is no properly stalled school-room, and I find secular instruction is given only to prisoners up to 18 years of age.

It is very important that every well-conducted prisoner should be afforded the means of improving his mind, and I would draw attention to the want of a well arranged and sufficiently large school in this gaol, as well as to the advisability of imparting more generally secular instruction to the adult prisoners. The Schoolmaster is not a trained teacher.

When the old gaol is entirely removed, and the new militia barracks, which are being built on its site, are completed, this prison will assume a much more symmetrical appearance.

There is no refractory cell, which is to be lamented, as such a place of punishment should be within every prison, in case it is required for prisoners who cannot otherwise be made amenable to prison discipline.

I found the beds, bed clothing, and prisoners' clothing good and clean. The prisoners' shirts are changed twice a week, a practice that should be adopted in all gaols. The stores are well arranged, and the prisoners' private clothing is fumigated before it is put away and labelled.

The lavatories and water-closets are very convenient, and I found them clean and in good keeping. There is no water-closet in the hospital.

With the exception of one or two corners of the outside wall, which I pointed out to the Local Inspector, I consider the gaol from the interior secure, but the leans to and sheds built against the prison wall outside the gaol are most objectionable and dangerous. These sheds have been commented on in former reports of Inspectors-General, but as yet to no effect.

The hospitals are well arranged and cleanly; but I regret to say that I detected the Hospital Warder in a grave dereliction of duty—namely, in sending a prisoner from the hospital to the main prison unaccompanied by a turnkey.

This, I was informed, has been the practice here for some time. The Hospital Warder also seemed to consider himself aggrieved by being locked up at night in the hospital, though he is provided with a bell, which he can ring in case he may require to communicate with the watchman on duty in the prison yard. There are three tell-tale clocks, but their locks are not sufficiently protected against being tampered with. They are pegged by the watchman inside the gaol every half hour, and outside every hour. One watchman alone patrols outside and inside the gaol from 10 o'clock, P.M., to unlock in the morning. He takes up the prisoners at night from the Governor, and delivers them to him again at unlock. Thus, in the winter this watchman is nine hours on duty alone, which is too long a time for one person to be intrusted with such a serious and onerous responsibility.

The reproductive labour consists chiefly of washing and mat-making, the former being a most remunerative and useful manner of employing prisoners, where it is carried on as efficiently as it is now in this gaol. Timber for fuel is also cut up by the prisoners and sold to advantage.

I tested the bread, milk, stirabout, and potatoes, which were all good except the latter. At the time of my inspection there was no Governor, the late Governor, who had been for some time in delicate health, having recently died, and a new one had not been elected; but the discipline and regularity of the gaol, nevertheless, appeared well maintained, under the superintendence of the Local Inspector, whose directions seemed to be carefully carried out by the Deputy Governor. Much depends upon the person now appointed Governor, who, it is to be hoped, will carry on the reforms and improvements already in progress in this prison. Photography was carried on by the late Governor. It is therefore to be hoped that this most useful assistant to the detection of old offenders will be followed up by his successor.

The books appeared to be carefully and properly kept, but "the General Visitors' Book" is not kept at all. I would here remark that a very lax system prevails in regard to the orders given to friends to see the prisoners. There should be regular days appointed for visiting the prisoners, and a printed form used and issued by the proper authorities only. The name and address of the visitor should be inserted in the form of permit, and the date on which the visit is paid. These permits should be kept and filed by the Governor.

I inspected the prisoners in their cells, and received no complaints from any of them. The prison is heated by hot water pipes, so that the temperature can be regulated as may be required.

The building altogether is in good repair, the accommodation provided for the prisoners is ample, their cells are roomy and well ventilated, the bedding sufficient, and of a good quality, excepting in the hospital where it requires to be renewed. The lavatories are well supplied with water, and the water-closets are conveniently situated. There is no fumigating apparatus, so that the prisoners' own clothes cannot be cleansed as they should be.

Number of coroner's inquests held in the gaol during 1867, and up to day of inspection in 1868, and at what date :—

One on a male, 15th September, 1868.

The hospitals are large and well ventilated, and provided with convenient water-closets. I found the flooring on the basement floor giving way very considerably, and requiring immediate attention. The wall that runs from this building to the outside wall affords a great facility to a prisoner to escape. This weak point should be secured, particularly as this could be effected at a very small cost. The angles formed by the gate lodge, and the boundary wall also require to be made more secure, as a prisoner if unobserved could easily effect his escape at these points. The porter's lodge is very damp, and I found the wet coming in in several places ; the sleeping room here was by no means well kept or clean. The Chapel is suitable to the requirements of the prison, but I find that the Protestant service is performed in the Board-room, which is in my opinion an unsuitable place for divine service.

There is a male and a female laundry—the males are employed in washing military clothing which is done by contract, and the females are employed in washing ordinary wearing apparel. The spot where the wringing machine stands should be paved or flagged, as at present the prisoners employed here cannot avoid getting their shoes thoroughly wet. In this gaol turnkeys not on duty are allowed to sleep in the body of the gaol; they occupy apartments adjoining the prisoners' cells, and could therefore communicate or tamper with the prisoners by night, for there is no responsible officer on duty within the prison after 10 o'clock, P.M., until the following morning. The food traps of the cells are not properly secured, so that there is at present every possibility and facility for very grave abuses. A turnkey inhabiting one of these rooms, had, previous to my inspection, been ill, and was laid up in his small apartment over a month. He was allowed also to have his wife and sister with him at different times, so that in fact, a female not connected with the prison is allowed to sleep within the prison walls, contiguous to the male prisoners, and not even restrained by lock and key to a single apartment. I think that if a turnkey, who sleeps in the prison, is reported sick, and unfit for duty, he should at once be required to leave the prison until he is well again; but at the same time I would strongly urge the necessity of altering the present very objectionable arrangement with respect to the turnkeys' sleeping apartments.

There is at present but a thin wooden partition between the male and female prison. This should be replaced by a good brick and mortar partition. The matrons inhabit apartments within the female prison, a practice which is as objectionable as that described above in regard to the turnkeys. A small door in the partition communicates with the male and female section of the prison, so that under existing arrangements with the absence of a nightwatch within the prison, there is little or no check upon any officer who might be evily disposed. There is but one tell-tale clock, which is not sufficiently secured against tampering, and is quite insufficient for the object desired. Two more should be put up in different parts of the gaol, in order to test properly the vigilance of the nightwatch.

The heating of the gaol is effective, but the ventilation in the central hall is not good; the top part of the window of the hall should be made to open, in order to afford a sufficiency of fresh air to penetrate this hall.

There is an ample supply of water, and the sewers can be thoroughly flushed as often as is found necessary.

Persons going in and out of the gaol are not as a rule searched, which is by no means a desirable omission of prison rule, though the arrangements in force by which prisoners see their friends are so effective that it would be very difficult without the connivance of the officer in charge of the prisoner, for a visitor to pass anything to the prisoner or vice versa. Gas is supplied in all the cells for two hours after the lock-up during the months of November, December, and January, and is lighted in the corridors, and around the prison from dark until daylight.

Lock-up is at 6 P.M., from 1st March to 1st September, and at 5.30 P.M., from 1st September to 1st March; unlock is at 6 A.M., from 1st of March to 1st of September, and 6.30 A.M., from 1st September to 1st March. All the keys are taken to the Governor's bedroom at night, and kept there in an iron safe, except the key of the inspection hall, which is kept by the chief warder, who sleeps in the outer hall. This key should in my opinion be kept by the Governor with the others, particularly as there is no night-watchman within the prison. The cards with the names and description of the prisoners' crimes on the doors are not kept as regularly as they should be; and it would be well if more attention were paid to such minor points of detail and discipline connected with the order and regularity of the prison. The locks appeared to be good, and are repaired within the prison, in the presence of a prison officer, by a person reported to be trustworthy.

The grounds lying between the Governor's house and the passage leading to the female prison have been enclosed with an iron railing, and the wall supporting same raised to an increased height, varying from 2½ to 5½ feet.

Breakfast.—Males—4 oz. Indian meal and 4 oz. of oatmeal boiled into stirabout, and ½ pint of new milk.

Dinner.—14 oz. of bread, and 1 pint of new milk.

Supper.—6 oz. of bread, and ½ pint of new milk.

Third Class Prisoners.—Breakfast—5 oz. of oatmeal and ½ pint of new milk. Dinner—8 oz. of bread, and 1 pint of new milk. Supper—5 oz. of bread, and ½ pint of new milk.

NOTE.—3 lbs. of potatoes to adult males, 2½ lbs. do. to adult females, and 2½ lbs. to juvenile males and females are, instead of bread, supplied on every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, to all prisoners.

Contracts.—Bread, brown, per 4-lb. loaf, 5½*d.*; oatmeal, per cwt., 18*s.*; Indian meal, per cwt., 10*s.*; potatoes, per cwt., 4*s.* 4*d.*; meat, per lb., 6*d.*; new milk, per gallon, 9½*d.*; salt, per cwt., 2*s.*; coals, per ton, 16*s.* 6*d.*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 5*s.* 6*d.*; candles, per lb., 6*d.*; soap, per cwt., £1 14*s.*

I found the books, with the exception of one or two, regularly kept. I drew the attention of the Governor to some erroneous entries and omissions in some, which, I have no doubt, will be attended to in future.

The superior officers are supplied with journals in which they note matters of importance connected with their several duties.

The names of officers are not entered in the intern officers' gate book when they are sent out on duty, an omission which I hope will, in future, be corrected.

I visited all the prisoners in custody and heard no complaints, except from one female, whom I found had been in her bed for a week in her cell. She complained of having received no medical treatment whatsoever. I think it is a very bad and irregular custom to allow prisoners who are not well to be out of hospital, where they could be properly taken care of; and I would urge the necessity of prisoners being sent to the hospital if they are confined to their bed for more than twenty-four hours; for, independent of sanitary considerations, no proper discipline or cleanliness can be maintained if the prison cells are used for the sick.

The school is not well attended, nor is there, in my opinion, sufficient attention paid to this very important subject, viz.—to the instruction and reformation of the prisoners. The place where the school is held is inconveniently situated and not stalled. The male teacher is not regularly trained, but both male and female teacher appear to pay as much attention as possible to their duties.

The Board meets once a month for the transaction of business and the discharge of liabilities.

Owing to the late period of the year of my appointment and the number of gaols remaining to be visited I was unable to inspect the bridewells, but annex hereto the last reports thereon of the Local Inspector.

The greater fluctuation and decline of the males in the expired portion of the current year is probably due to the cessation of fresh committals of "dangerous lunatics" since the 1st of January, when the Act came into force for excluding from gaols these most unfit inmates. In other respects the character of crime remains the same; offences against property being more rife than those directed against the person; and the females, especially, presenting a very unfavourable aspect of hardened persistence in stealing, and in receiving stolen goods; some of them, moreover, are irreclaimable prostitutes, two having been traced by photography to be returned convicts; and two more, who were suspected to belong to this category, having admitted it. Thus, of 17 tried females in custody on the above date, all but 2, under rules for assault, had been convicted of offences against property; and these sentences, from their length, indicate the character of the individuals as established at their trials; 3 being for two years, 2 for eighteen months, and 4 for twelve months.

There was but one juvenile, a male, in charge; under this denomination 10 males and 6 females in 1867, and 6 males in the present year were committed here; of whom 3 of the former sex and 4 of the latter were transmitted to reformatories.

I had expected that, in fulfilment of the Act passed in the last session of Parliament and referred to above, this gaol would have been freed from the fearful pressure of lunatics, of whom no less than 33 males and 1 female were still detained at the period of my official visits, the delay in preparing the asylum at Enniscorthy for their reception being unaccountable on ordinary grounds, but I trust that at no distant period the long required relief will be obtained.

While the above was in preparation for type, the removal of the lunatics was effected.

I found the prison at my visits, on the days recorded above, in a satisfactory state of cleanliness, order, and repair; and adequately provided with furniture, utensils, bedding, blankets, &c., and clothing. The ventilation is effective, and the water supply is abundant for general use, but not for washing. The sewerage, however, although improved recently by the discontinuance of the use of some of the privies, which are discharged into cesspools, is imperfect, as the water-closet pipes lead into the main sewers, the mouth of which is in the open slob-lands bordering on the river.

A small detached building, adapted for gas retorts, has been erected since the last inspection; but some of the defects in security remain uncorrected in the block containing the entrance gate, and in the adjoining walls, which I took occasion to note in my last report. The heating apparatus for the male section requires, and is about to undergo a complete rectification, which is indispensable, as the cells allocated to prisoners of this sex are flagged with granite, an objection which could further be obviated by a false floor or cradle-deck of thin planking. The locks are reported to be in good order, as also those attached to the tell-tale clocks, which are now three in number.

The punishment cells are not artificially warmed, and are therefore untenantable in winter; some of the ordinary cells might be adapted to this purpose by adding shutters to the windows in order to exclude the light.

The form of individual cellular separation, subject, however, to the large exception of the lunatics (here a considerable body), their sane attendants, epileptics, the sick in hospital, and those engaged in cooking is enforced among all the criminal classes of both sexes. The school-rooms, the school-benches, the laundry, and lavatories being divided into stalled compartments. The master debtors' rooms overlook the yard in which the cook-house stands, and for this reason, as well as for the infringement of "separation," the employment of prisoners as cooks ought to be discontinued, as it affords opportunities of undue favouritism in the selection of the individuals to whom this coveted duty is assigned, and of violations of many points of discipline. The system observed in the following particulars, viz.:—the lock-up, in the examination of the security of the cell fastenings, the ascertainment of the presence of each prisoner, the night rounds and patrol, the protection of the tell-tale clocks against tampering, the possession of the keys by the Governor, the condition of the locks, the mode of repairing them, is satisfactory. It appears, however, that the visits at late and unexpected hours, in order to test the vigilance and regularity of the night-watch, are very rare, and do not amount to a practice; and that the keys are deposited at night in an iron safe which stands in the office, and not in the bedroom of the Governor.

Punitive labour is maintained for four hours and a-half daily by stone-breaking, which also partakes of the character of industrial labour, and is productive of a fair return. The force-pump is also an instrument of hard labour, and is worked daily for an hour of actual movement. A large crank-machine for carding wool, which was formerly available for the fulfilment of sentences to hard labour, has been long inoperative for want of sufficient power of hands to work it. Two of the turnkeys are tradesmen, viz., a shoemaker and a tailor; and two others are capable of giving rudimental instruction in several branches of employment, such as weaving, mat and brushmaking, smith work, carpentry, painting, &c., and thus considerable activity is displayed in this department. Gas, moreover, is made within the walls by a prison officer. The females are engaged in sewing and knitting, their numbers being ordinarily too low to find employment for them in washing, which is performed by the aid of a machine.

The females are temporarily taught by the assistant matron; the school, consequently, is in a state of transition, the former master having been very infirm and inefficient. The Local Inspector and the Chaplains occasionally visit, but do not enter any comments on the progress of the pupils.

No complaints were preferred to me by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly, with regard to the provisions, the daily samples of which I tasted, and found to be of unexceptionable quality.

The dietary recently approved by the Executive, upon the recommendation of the Medical Committee, appointed to inquire into and report in reference to the previously existing scales, regard being had to the nature and amount of hard labour now ordinarily maintained in the gaols of this kingdom, is already established here; but if, as is intended, the much severer requirements of this element of punishment, which are enforced in the prisons of Great Britain, should be extended to Ireland, a conditional increase of nutriment, proportionate to the exhaustive character of such labour, has been provided for in that report.

The Chaplains are regular in their inspection of the several articles of food, noting their comments in a record of the approved tabular form.

auxiliary in the investigation of all infractions of duty. Pass-checks are also required to be issued by the Governor to every officer, as a guarantee for permission to pass through the prison gates, such check to specify the time of absence allowed, and to be given up on the return of the recipient.

I have further to hope that the Board will think fit to forego the power now vested in each member of granting an order for the admission of visiters to prisoners without the knowledge of what has been done by his brother members. Thus, under the present regulation, it would be possible that twelve orders might be accorded simultaneously for visits to one prisoner. I trust, therefore, that the rules of restriction which prevail in the best administered prisons will be adopted here, and that the facilities which now exist will be withdrawn, constituting as they do a very grave impediment to the maintenance of discipline and to the punitive character of imprisonment.

The hospital wards for males and females are well ventilated, and furnished with water-closets and lavatories, but not with fixed baths, and are contained in the same building. A door, however, has been erected on the common stair-case, in order to cut off communication between the two sexes. Males, except lunatics, are very rarely transmitted to the hospital, the great majority of cases being dealt with in the cells; but when there are sane patients confined here, a turnkey is placed in charge. The nurse, who is always stationed in the building, is locked in at night (the Governor holding the keys), but is provided with an alarm-bell, to be used if assistance should be required. The health of the prisoners was and had been satisfactory.

Bridewells.

The bridewells of this county, in points of structural defects and of insecurity, are among the worst in the kingdom; and in the event of any legislation with regard to the improvements of these minor prisons, it would be impolitic to incur the large outlay which would be required to place them upon an adequate footing, inasmuch as the extension of railway communication will probably embrace all the localities in which they are situated.

At present I feel bound to refrain from urging any alteration pending such legislation, which, I regret to observe, the state of public business forbids us to expect during the present session of Parliament.

Crimes, involving greater or lesser degrees of personal violence, are stated to be less rife since the completion of the Vartry water-works, which attracted a somewhat turbulent temporary population; and I fear that the establishment of smelting-works in the neighbourhood may again produce a similar result; and even on the day of my inspection of 14 males under sentence (two being for drunkenness and a workhouse offence), no less than 5 were convicted of assault, and 2 of wounding and stabbing; 2 burglars, and 1 sheepstealer completing the calendars. I am informed, moreover, that petty thefts of accessible food, such as potatoes, turnips, &c., have become common. The convicted females represented one case of assault, and one of child desertion; but prisoners of this sex are singularly few in number, and are generally of the lowest type, morally and intellectually, and therefore almost incapable of improvement under the ordinary conditions of prison discipline. Thus, on the day recorded above, of the total of this sex, amounting to six persons, two were known prostitutes, and a third suspected to be such. There was one of these moreover ascertained to be a returned convict, one a very violent and helpless lunatic, and another very old, idiotic, and harmless, but constantly recurrent to gaol for trifling offences during the last thirty years. Again, if their fitness for industrial training, or indeed any employment be taken into consideration, one was near her confinement, and another had been severely injured by a railway accident. There were also two males under the category of dangerous lunatics, one epileptic, and the other a mute, and utterly brutish idiot, who have been detained here since 1863; but it is to be hoped that the gaol will shortly be relieved of those most unfit inmates—the last remnant of that vicious legislation which consigned the irresponsible to penal institutions; and further, that another class equally unsuited will be withdrawn by the abolition of imprisonment for debt, except in cases of proved fraud; no less than 7 males—2 masters and 5 paupers, being in custody, one of whom, as noticed by my colleague in his report, is wholly unable from want of means to even file his schedule.

There was only 1 juvenile in charge; 15 males and 2 females belonging to this denomination having been committed here during 1867 and 1868, of whom but one, a male, was transmitted to a reformatory.

ample. The ventilation has been greatly improved by the introduction of draught-openings in the roof; as has also been the sewerage by the addition of effluvia-traps. Water-closets have also been substituted for ordinary privies, except in three localities, viz., two at the turn of the stairs leading down from the male "separate" prison, and one in the tread-wheel yard, which it would be very desirable to convert into water-closets.

Eave-gutters and down-shoots are much required for arresting the damp, the walls being quite green in the portion of the female prison which is connected with a heating-apparatus; and I learn with pleasure that it is in contemplation to protect the front of the building by the erection of a strong iron railing—a very necessary measure. Gas has been introduced into two of the cells only, which are assigned to tradesmen in the day-time, but are not occupied at night. The other portions of the building, however, are duly lighted.

The stock of bedding, blankets, and sheets is now sufficient, and also of prison clothing; two criminal prisoners and a pauper debtor having been turned to account in their respective trades of tailoring and shoe-making.

The prison is tolerably strong; the stock-locks being of good construction; but the cell-padlocks are very old. My colleague called attention to the cook-house as being deficient in security, a defect which applies to the tread-wheel yard, adjoining the street and the hospital garden. Criminal prisoners are, however, finally removed from the former in the afternoon, and convalescents are never allowed to exercise in the latter, which, moreover, has lately been strengthened in some material points, without the supervision of an officer. The females are placed in "individual separation" (except at school, and when in attendance upon lunatics); as are also the tried and certain classes of the untried males, subject to the latter exception, and unless when engaged in shot drill or exercise, a turnkey being present; the remainder of the untried occupy the old associate prison, which is not artificially heated; and I would submit, therefore, that in order to establish equal and uniform discipline and to extend the vital principle of "separation" to the several classes of both sexes, the cells of that section should be furnished with all requirements essential to the enforcement of it, particularly as it appears probable that a pressure upon the accommodation may be caused by the congregation of artizans and labourers to be employed in the works referred to antecedently.

The system of supervision at lock-up, the examination of cell-fastenings, the ascertainment of the presence of each prisoner, the night patrol, and the casual and unexpected visits of the superior officers in the night, is, upon the whole, commendable. Greater precaution, however, is required in protecting the tell-tale clocks and the locks, when undergoing repairs, against the probability of tampering.

The foregoing schedule may be accepted as a fair representation of the ordinary fulfilment of both kinds of labour—shot drill and the tread-wheel (which latter is not applicable to any reproductive result), occupy the males, who are under sentence to hard-labour, for about four hours daily of actual movement. Industrial employment is limited, among the males, to making-up various articles for the use of the prison, and to painting, glazing, and to necessary repairs; four of the turnkeys being handicraftsmen, viz., a shoemaker, a tailor, a nailor, and a painter. The females, whose numbers are frequently barely adequate to the discharge of the daily gaol duties, are engaged, when available, in washing, sewing, knitting, and making-up clothes, &c. No articles being disposed of outside the walls, there is no return under this heading.

The males are schooled in the chapel daily by two of the turnkeys, who, although they were not trained at any educational institution, are represented to be well qualified, and are further stimulated by the granting of gratuities by the Board upon the favourable certificates of the Local-Inspector and Governor. It is intended to fit up a partition into stalls for a male school-room a day-room, hitherto occupied by the lunatics. The females are stated to be taught by the assistant matron in an unpartitioned room; but this department is almost a nullity for the reasons assigned under the tables of "Employment," &c.

The form of registry, suggested by the Inspectors-General, is kept here, and both Chaplains visit from time to time; the Protestant occasionally recording his opinion of the conduct of the school. As there was only one male prisoner who had been in attendance for any length

For prisoners whose terms of imprisonment does exceed one week, for untried prisoners, and for pauper debtors:—Males.—Breakfast, 8 oz. of meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of new milk. Dinner, 14 oz. of bread, and 1 pint of new milk. Supper, 6 oz. of bread, and ½ a pint of new milk.

Females.—Breakfast, 7 oz. of meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of new milk. Dinner, 12 oz. of bread, and ½ of a pint of new milk. Supper, 5 oz. of bread, and ½ a pint of new milk.

Juveniles under 15 years.—Breakfast, 5 oz. of meal in stirabout, and ½ a pint of new milk. Dinner, 8 oz. of bread, and 1 pint of vegetable soup. Supper, 5 oz. of bread, and ½ a pint of new milk. Potatoes are distributed for bread at dinner on three days in the week in the following proportions:—Class 1. Males.—3 lbs. Class 2.—2½ lbs. Class 3.—2½ lbs. The stirabout is composed of equal parts of oatmeal and Indian meal, and the bread of equal parts of second flour and wholemeal.

Contracts.—Bread, white, per 4 lb. loaf, 1½*d.* under Dublin price; brown, per 4 lb. loaf, ½*d.* under the price of white; oatmeal, per cwt., 17*s.*; Indian meal, per cwt., 11*s.*; new milk, per gallon, 8*d.*; coals, per ton, 16*s.* 4*d.*; gas, per 1,000 cubic feet, 7*s.* 6*d.*; candles, per lb., 6½*d.*; soap, per cwt., £1 10*s.*

No complaints as to the provisions were preferred by any of the prisoners, whom I questioned singly, except by one professional thief with regard to the stirabout, but on reference to the records of inspection by the Chaplains, who carefully observe the approved form, I found the item objected to noticed as "good." The dietary, sanctioned by the Executive upon the recommendation of the Medical Commission, appointed to inquire into this important element of gaol administration, has been established here, and is found to be highly satisfactory.

Books and Accounts.

The superior officers, except the Surgeon (although the 72nd section of the Prisons Act, the 7th Geo. IV., cap. 74, is imperative on this requirement), are provided with journals, which are submitted to the Board. The Medical Officer enters his observations in particular cases in his Prescription Book. The registries, the several books and forms, prescribed and recommended by the competent authorities, are kept here with praiseworthy correctness, as well as is a "General Visiters' Book," and an "Officers' Default Book." I would further suggest that pass-checks should be issued by the Governor to the intern officers as their vouchers for passing out of the prison, and that such checks shall be given up on their return to the gate-porter; this system having been found elswhere to be a valuable auxiliary to regularity and general discipline.

The hospital accommodation for both sexes has been improved since my last inspection, water-closets and baths having been attached to the wards; but patients are now rarely sent to the infirmary as most of the cases are of a comparatively trifling character, and are consequently treated in the cells; the principle of "individual separation" being thus maintained intact.

The Board is convened monthly, and at each meeting the salaries of the subordinate staff and the smaller accounts are discharged; the payment of the superior officers and of the contractors being reserved for the Assizes, when an audit of all disbursements is held.

Any alterations or additions since last inspection in the construction of the gaol, or any in progress, or in contemplation:—

One of the day-rooms, heretofore occupied by male lunatics, is about to be stalled and fitted up as a schoolroom for males. The privies in connexion with the separate male prison, and one in the debtors' division, are also about to be converted into water-closets.

General Observations.

I have much pleasure in recording my satisfaction with the condition of this prison as to cleanliness, order, ventilation, sewerage, and water supply; the stock of bedding and clothing is adequate. I would suggest the adoption of pass-checks to be issued by the Governor to every intern officer as his voucher for passing. The improvements, which have been carried out since my last inspection, have proved very effective, viz., the opening of air-draughts, the substitution of water-closets for privies, and the affixing of effluvia traps to the sewers; there are, however, three privies within the walls, viz., two at the base of stairs leading down from the new male "separate" prison and one in the tread-wheel yard, which it would be very desirable to convert into water-closets. Eave-gutters and down-shoots are also much needed to protect the wall of that portion of the female prison which stands in the yard connected with the heating-apparatus; at present it is green with damp. I learn with great pleasure that the day-room, heretofore occupied by male lunatics is about to be stalled and fitted-up as a school-room for males, and that proposals are about to be received for protecting the front of the prison by the erection of a strong iron railing—a very necessary measure. I am unable to see reasons for making an exception between the males and females, and include between certain subdivisions of the untried of the former sex in the application of the vital principle of "individual separation;" and I would, therefore, throw out for the consideration of the Board the policy of artificially heating the old associate prison, containing ten cells, and fitting it with all the requirements of that form of discipline, so as to establish a perfect equality throughout all classes; and I am the more disposed to urge this alteration as I am given to understand that the smelting works, which it is intended to erect in the immediate neighbourhood, will probably draw together a considerable number of workmen and labourers, and consequently riots and assaults may be expected to increase the demand upon the accommodation of the prison.

Bridewells.

The Inspectors-General had hoped that in the present session of Parliament the question of bridewells would have been disposed of; but the state of public business and political parties has frustrated the hope. The bridewell at Tinahely, under any circumstances, defective as it is in point of construction, insecure, and being, moreover, within easy reach of the gaol at Wicklow, with which there is railway communication, ought to be discontinued. Some prisoners, under short rules, had been transmitted to the gaol at the time of my official visit from Baltinglas, the bridewell of which was undergoing repairs. This latter, though a district bridewell, is very inferior to many of the ordinary bridewells in other counties, and is quite unfit for fulfilling sentences of the duration (viz., four months) prescribed for this class of minor prisons.

Having regard to the small number of prisoners committed here, the absence of criminal sessions, the facility of railway communication with the county gaol, and the vicinity of the police barrack, to which two lock-ups (one for each sex) are attached, it would be very desirable to abolish this bridewell.		An untried prisoner effected his escape from this bridewell on the 20th September; he has not yet been re-taken. The Local Board held an inquiry, and while attributing the escape in part to the gaol being in progress of alteration, they severely reprimanded the turnkey in charge, and fined him £1.

Seven hundred and seventy-one male, and 235 female individual prisoners were committed to this gaol in 1867. Of these 32 males and 3 females were juveniles; 48 males (including 2 male juveniles) and 46 females were recommitted more or less frequently during the year, the total number of commitments being 837 of males, and 410 of females.

Six hundred and eighty-nine males and 155 females, of those committed in 1867, had never until that year been in prison, and 82 males and 80 females were previous offenders, who had more or less often been committed, and have 429 and 1,793 recommitments respectively recorded against them on the books of the gaol, showing how completely in this district, as in most other parts of Ireland, the criminal classes who fill the gaols are confined to comparatively few individuals.

On the day of inspection, 38 males criminally committed, including 2 deserters, and 18 females, were inmates of the gaol, besides 3 master debtors. Of these 6 males and 3 females were for further examination, or for trial, and 32 males and 15 females under sentences of imprisonment in the gaol.

The crimes and sentences were of males—

The preceding schedules of crimes, and the punishment inflicted, do not call for special notice, unless to observe on the frequent recommitments of the same individuals, especially of females, which show how utterly ineffective for reformation or the repression of crime, are imprisonments in county and borough gaols, of offenders who have adopted the habitual breach of the law as a means of support, whether we consider the professional thief who lives at the cost of the public by plunder when at large, or the prostitute who may have no refuge from the line of life she has adopted, and is compelled on discharge from prison to return to her former calling in order to obtain a livelihood.

Juveniles.

I found one juvenile (male) in custody for larceny, sentenced to imprisonment for 14 days as a punishment, afterwards to be sent to a reformatory for five years; another boy had been sent to a reformatory on the day previous to my visit, after an imprisonment of 21 days. The Governor of this gaol carefully keeps in strict separation juveniles so committed, and does not permit them to attend school, or have any association with adult prisoners, and this treatment not alone prevents association with criminals, but likewise tends to impress on their minds a dread of being recommitted to prison.

Thirty-two male and 3 female juveniles were committed to the gaol in 1867; 2 (males) were twice committed, one boy received a sentence of 9 months' imprisonment for burglary, and 2 of 2 months; 4 males and 1 female for 1 month, the others were sentenced to short periods, or discharged; 1 (male) was sentenced to be whipped; none were under 10 years of age. All the juveniles, with the exception of the boy sentenced for 9 months, had been summarily convicted by the Police Magistrates and at Petty Sessions. Five males and 1 female were ordered to be sent to reformatories during the year.

In 1868, 73 male and 8 female juveniles were committed; 3 males were twice committed, 19 males and 3 females were sent to reformatories after their punishment in the gaol; and one female who was directed to be so dealt with, was transferred to Grangegorman Prison before the completion of her sentence of imprisonment. One (male) was whipped as part of the sentence of the convicting Magistrate in 1867; none in 1868.

Debtors.

The accommodation for master debtors is sufficient for the number generally in custody. That for females is defective and inconvenient. The apartment for pauper males consists of a kitchen and a room for sleeping, marked G on the plan. It is separated from the rest of the prison, but a bell and speaking tube have been put up, by means of which communication can be kept up by the inmate with the warder on duty in the central hall of the male prison. Three master debtors were in custody when I visited.

In 1867, 28 male and 4 female debtors were committed to this gaol, of whom 5 were paupers supported at the cost of the county. In 1868, 14 males and 2 females were in charge, of whom 6 males were in receipt of pauper allowance.

I found this gaol on my different inspections during the year always in a satisfactory condition of cleanliness and order. The buildings uniformly in sound repair, and the cells fairly ventilated. The bells and appliances for separation under the Act 3 & 4 Vic., cap. 44, are kept in good order, and the heating apparatus preserves a sufficient temperature in both prisons. That in the female wing is most easily worked. It is by hot-water pipes. There are four punishment cells in the basement of the male gaol, and three in the female prison; two in each are floored with boards; they are properly heated, and in the latter punishment cells only are prisoners kept during the night. Prisoners under punishment are given at night beds, but not sheets, this is contrary to the provisions of the Act 19 & 20 Vic., cap. 68, sec. 13, which directs that "in addition to the bedding to be allowed to poor prisoners mentioned in the 78th sec. of the Prisons Act, one pair of sheets shall be allowed to each bed," and no exception is made in the statute. The stock of bedding, sheets, blankets, and prison clothing is good and sufficient for the requirements of the gaol, and some in store. The sewerage is effective, and effluvia traps of an improved construction have been placed over the mouths of all the sewers in the gaol, at an expense of 10s. for each trap, including all the cost of fixture, &c. This is an important sanitary arrangement often neglected in other gaols. Asphalte paths have been laid down in the exercise yards. No alteration or change has been made in the buildings since last inspection.

lavatories, water-closets, and laundry of the prison is taken from the river Liffey, and raised by a water wheel from above Island Bridge, into a large tank at the entrance of the prison, whence it is distributed to the different sections of the gaol, by the power of the crank pump in the basement story, which is worked by prisoners sentenced to hard labour. This crank is on an improved principle, and several after the same model have been erected in other gaols with advantage. There is not, however, sufficient ventilation for the prisoners who are employed at this work. The expense of maintaining the water wheel is defrayed one-half by the Royal Hospital, which obtains the supply of water for the institution from the same source, the other half is paid out of the funds of this gaol, amounting to £20 annually.

The following analysis of the water for drinking purposes, taken from the spring well, was made by Dr. Cameron, the city analyst, and published in my report on this gaol in 1866 :—

"Having submitted to analysis a specimen of water sent to me for that purpose by the Governor of Kilmainham prison, I find one imperial gallon (70,000 grains) contains carbonate of lime, 38·42 grains; sulphate of lime, 1·96 grains; chloride of calcium, 1·04 grains; carbonate of magnesia, 2·17 grains; sulphate of magnesia, 0·84 grains; alkaline salts, 1·56; organic matter, 1·78 grains. This water is hard, and not adapted for detergent purposes. On being boiled and allowed to remain undisturbed for a few hours, the carbonate of lime, its chief constituent, precipitates, and the water becomes nearly soft. The amount of the sulphate of lime is very small, and this circumstance contributes greatly to the wholesomeness of the water. The organic matter is rather under the average amount found in pump water, and much below that contained in the pipe-water supplied to the city. I have looked most carefully for butyric acid, nitrous acid, and nitric acid, and failed to ascertain their presence, so that I am enabled to state positively that no sewage or effete animal matter exists in the water, which in other respects is much more wholesome than that afforded by the majority of the pumps in Dublin and its suburbs.

"CHARLES A. CAMERON, M.D., "Analyst to the City of Dublin."

In this prison iron check gates have been erected to guard all the principal outlets, so as to render the gaol much more secure than that of any other county or borough in Ireland. Improved fastenings have also been placed on the doors of the cells in which important criminal prisoners are confined, so as almost to prevent the possibility of escape if ordinary precautions are taken by the prison authorities.

The prison is unlocked during both summer and winter at 7 A.M.; breakfast is served to the prisoners at 9 A.M., and dinner at 3 P.M. At 5 P.M., the bell rings for night lockings, which are attended by the Governor and his Deputy; should either be unavoidably absent the next officer in rank takes his place. Great care is used to test the locks of the cells, and the keys of the gaol are deposited in an iron safe during the night. The final round is made by the Governor and his Deputy at 10.30 P.M., when the night watch is set. There are three tell-tale clocks on the premises, so placed as to test the vigilance and regularity of the night patrol. Gaslight is supplied to the cells in the criminal prison for two hours after lock-up, from the 1st October to the 1st April, and also to the master debtors until 10.30 P.M.

I found one prisoner in punishment on my visit on the 30th December. This man, who is a returned convict, on a former visit com-

I found the food prepared for the prisoners on the different occasions when I visited of good quality, and the Chaplains generally report favourably of the supply sent. I questioned all the prisoners in custody, and no complaint was made of the food which is given.

Besides the man who complained of ill-treatment, another, a political prisoner, stated that his memorial to Government had not been answered. I have since made inquiry, and ascertained that it was duly received by Government; but another memorial having been forwarded by his friends, they were both answered together. Three memorials were forwarded. To the first and last he received replies, and it would appear that the last reply must have had reference to the intermediate one, the Lords Justices having decided that the law should take its course.

The various registries of discipline and finance are here well and carefully kept. The Governor records all the different occurrences which he considers noteworthy in his journal, but the Local Inspector does not keep any journal. The superior officers of other gaols have them.

It becomes my duty here to call attention to a neglect of the enactments contained in the Prisons Act by the authorities of this gaol in the appointment of a warder, A. T., elected on probation on the 5th March, 1868, with another, P., whose appointment was on the 2nd of the following July, duly certified and forwarded to the Lord Lieutenant for approval, while in this case of A. T. the forms were neglected, and no certificate forwarded to the Prisons Office. The officer was subsequently dismissed in December following. I annex the 19th section of the Act 18 & 19 Vict., cap. 68, to which I refer :—

"Appointments of all officers in prisons, Chaplains and Surgeons excepted, shall be probationary only, and shall not become absolute until the same shall be confirmed at a meeting of the Board of Superintendence ; not sooner than three months after the meeting at which such probationary appointment shall have been made, nor unless the Local Inspector and Governor shall have certified under their hands that the conduct of such officers is in all respects correct and proper, and that such officer is, in their opinion, a fit, proper, and efficient person for the office." The Act further directs that—"The Board of Superintendence shall enter such certificates in their minutes, and forthwith transmit a copy of it to the Inspectors-General of Prisons."

In order that this statute may be complied with, and instructed by the opinion of the law officers of the Crown, "that without certificates signed by the Local Inspector and Governor of the prison the confirmation by the Board of Superintendence is inoperative, and the appointments lapse," the Inspectors-General desire to call the attention of the Board to the necessity of in future having the requirements of the section of the Act strictly carried out.

County of Dublin Gaol.

Two, viz., on the body of Samuel Prince, 16th April, and on the body of John Smith, 29th December.

In consequence of the few females committed to the gaol, it has not been found necessary to occupy the entire of the hospital provided for that sex, and the complaining sick are kept in a room off the building, which is found to be sufficient to accommodate at present all cases demanding treatment. Since the removal of lunatics from the gaol, few prisoners occupy the hospital for males. That building is more than sufficient for the requirements, and has baths and waterclosets attached.

The following report from the Medical Officer of the gaol has been forwarded to the Prisons Office :—

"GENTLEMEN,—I am happy to report that the health of the prisoners in this gaol has been, with few exceptions, very good. During the past year one death occurred—a male prisoner, who laboured under disease of the spine, with paralysis.

"The new dietary scale, which was adopted in the month of March last, has worked well; and I am not now called on by prisoners so frequently to supplement their food as heretofore. I find it necessary, however, occasionally to order a meat ration to prisoners undergoing long sentences of one year and upwards. With this exception, and the prisoners who are employed at exhausting labour, who receive two rations of meat weekly while so employed, few, unless those in hospital, receive any addition to the prescribed scale.

"A female prisoner, committed for one month, was found insane on admission; but an application being made to his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, she was transferred to the Richmond Lunatic Asylum forthwith.

"Since lunatics have ceased to be committed to gaol, order and regularity can be observed in the hospitals—a state of things which was found almost an impossibility when they were so frequently committed.

"I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,

"Your obedient servant,

From the preceding table it appears that 56 of the 180 prisoners in this gaol on the day of my visit were under sentences of imprisonment of twelve months and upwards, one for four years, and the sentences of 85 were for periods not less than six months. The long sentences inflicted on the male prisoners belonging to the city of Dublin confined in this gaol contrast strongly with the short periods of the sentences on the female inmates of the City Gaol at Grangegorman, as will be seen by reference to my report on that gaol. Doubtless the large number of naval and military prisoners tried by courts-martial, and handed over by the military to the civil authorities, may to a certain degree account for the heavy sentences on the male prisoners in this prison; but, as I remarked in my report on this gaol in 1866, I observe a strong tendency in the judicial bench to inflict long sentences of imprisonment in county and borough gaols on returned convicts and other old offenders instead of sentences to penal servitude, the period of which would be passed under strict discipline in the convict depot, and reformatory treatment afterwards, if the prisoner is susceptible of such.

DUBLIN DISTRICT.

Richmond Bridewell.

I feel it to be my duty now to express as my deliberate conviction, that the reformation of prisoners of this class is rarely effected by imprisonments in the county and borough gaols as at present constituted in Ireland, and I strongly advocate the establishment of one central depot for grave offenders—as in Scotland—where all prisoners would be subjected to a uniform system of prison management, and inveterate thieves would at once be recognised, and their career of plunder then cut short by sentences to penal servitude for periods which cannot be now less than five years.

Two prisoners tried by courts-martial (naval) in 1867 were sentenced by the Court to be kept in solitary confinement.

Referring to the classes of the offenders in the gaol when I visited, I find that 85 had been committed for burglary, larceny, and other offences against property; 22 had been tried by courts-martial for crimes against the Mutiny and Naval Acts; 61 for assaults and other offences against the person, including 1 for manslaughter and 1 for stabbing. One man, under sentence of imprisonment for four years, had been tried by court-martial and convicted of complicity in the Fenian conspiracy. None of the offences of the inmates require special observation. They are such as generally exist in large towns. I find, however, an unusual number of returned convicts sentenced to imprisonment, these, I conceive, should be more severely dealt with.

2,876 individual prisoners, including 299 juveniles, were committed to this gaol in 1867, of whom 295 were recommitted some four and five times during the year, the total number of commitments being 3,272. And from reference to the prison registries it is shown that 1,027 of the prisoners committed in 1867 (including 45 juveniles), had been inmates of this gaol in former years, some frequently having 7,025 committals recorded against them on the books of the gaol.

Lunatics.

Forty-three insane prisoners, in custody as dangerous lunatics, were inmates of this gaol at the commencement of 1868. Of these, 25 were removed to the District Lunatic Asylum in the month of September of that year, when additional accommodation was provided in the institution. Two died and 15 were discharged in the course of the year, and only 1, who was bed-ridden and unable to be removed without injury, remained in custody at the close of the year. He has since died.

The transfer of the insane from this gaol has enabled many improvements to be carried out, amongst others the removal of the capstan-mill building; and the small number of patients now treated in hospital will give opportunities for further arrangements which will tend to render the prison more secure and discipline better preserved.

Juveniles.

299 juveniles were in custody in this gaol in 1867, two of whom were under 10 years of age. 12 were recommitted two, three, and four times during the year. 374 were committed in 1868, including 14 under ten years of age; and 37 were recommitted, 33 twice and 4 thrice during the year.

Richmond Bridewell.

In 1867, 13 juveniles were tried before a jury at Commission, or before the Recorder at Quarter Sessions, the remainder summarily at the Police Courts of the city. In 1868 36 were convicted by jury and 235 summarily. Two juveniles were sentenced in 1867 to penal servitude for five years each, 2 to imprisonment for three, 11 for two months. In 1868 9 were sentenced to penal servitude, 1 was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment, and 11 to periods of three and above one month.

The juveniles sentenced to Reformatories at the end of their punishment in the gaol were 54 in 1867, and 84 in 1868.

In April, 1868, a prisoner, convicted of highway robbery, under sentence of imprisonment for eighteen months, who had been very refractory, and had cut up and destroyed his clothes and the matting which he was weaving in a loom in his cell, was tried before the Recorder of the city, and sentenced to penal servitude for five years, to commence at the end of the term of his imprisonment in this gaol. Another prisoner, convicted of stealing one penny from the collection-plate in Patrick's Cathedral, who was found to be of weak intellect, was discharged and given up to his friends.

I found the prison buildings on the different occasions when I made my inspections very clean and well-kept—all in sound repair; the cells for prisoners in the upper prison properly heated, ventilated, and, with the exception of 4 cells adjoining the kitchen, furnished with means of communication with an officer, as required by the 4th section of the Act 3 Vic., cap. 44. The punishment-cells have no glazed sashes, and are open to the weather. They are too cold for prisoners during the winter months, and besides being under the Protestant church, refractory prisoners sometimes disturb the congregation during Divine service. The blocks of cells in the lower prison are supposed to be heated by hot water flowing through inch gas-pipes conveyed across the cells; but, as may be imagined, such an attempt at heating is almost nugatory, at the same time that much fuel is consumed in attempting to raise a proper temperature in the cells. In one of the other blocks the heating apparatus is also very imperfect. These blocks are occupied only by drunkards and prisoners under short sentences, with the exception of one in which juveniles are confined.

Since last inspection the capstan-mill building, formerly occupied by lunatics, and the stone stairs leading from No. 5 Class, have been removed. A new boiler for heating has been put up in No. 7 Class, in place of one which was worn out.

The supply of water to the prison is ample; but, as has been observed in the report on this gaol for 1867, the power of the tread-wheel is wasted in pumping water to the prison, although by connecting the pipes to the city main an unfailing supply would be secured, and the labour of the prisoners on the wheel might then be turned to a profitable account, so as to increase the profits of the establishment and thereby reduce the cost of the gaol on the rates.

The sewers, which on my last inspection I found offensive, have been now cleaned, and appear to work well. They were choked by cocoa-fibre used in the water-closets.

The removal of the buildings lately made has much improved the security of the prison. The insulating area is now open, and the facilities for escape are much diminished. There is, however, much yet to be done to make this structurally such a prison as could be effectively and economically worked with a small staff of officers. However, in the present uncertain state of prison legislation, I do not recommend any large expenditure to be incurred until the wishes of Parliament are known with reference thereto. Lavatories are now erected in two corridors of the prison. In the other sections the prisoners wash in open sheds in the yards.

Photography is applied in this gaol to the detection of returned convicts, professional thieves, and others belonging to the criminal classes, and the results have been satisfactory, many having been identified as such through its use.

The following ground plan of Richmond Bridewell is taken from a former report on this gaol. Since that report was published several important alterations have been made in the interior arrangements of the buildings which are not indicated on the plan.

The stock of prison clothing, bedding, sheets, blankets, and rugs in the gaol is sufficient for the requirements, and some in store.

Discipline is here efficiently maintained. No officer in charge of keys can leave the prison without a pass (printed with block), which is signed by a superior officer, and is filed at the gate. Gas has been introduced into every part of the gaol, and it remains burning in the cells until 7.30, P.M., in winter. The tell-tale clocks are protected by Chubbs' patent locks; and warders in charge of classes report in writing every week the particulars of their examination of the bedding of the prisoners under their charge, and the state of the bars, bolts, locks, &c., of the cells.

Visitors to prisoners converse with them through a grating, which renders it difficult for prohibited articles to be conveyed to them; and a female lately detected in an endeavour to do so, was prosecuted and suffered imprisonment for the attempt. Cellular separation is strictly enforced on all prisoners except those in hospital and on prison duties.

Unlock is held at 6.30, A.M., in summer, and at 7, A.M., in winter. A superior officer then visits all the classes, from No. 1 to 15, the hospital, and tread-wheel; he goes round the prisoners and sees that they are properly washed, and that the warders are at their posts.

At 8, A.M., such prisoners as are to be discharged are paraded in the front hall, and proper checks are adopted to prevent mistakes of identification. At 9, A.M., the staff is paraded, and the keys deposited in the metal safe, when they go to breakfast to 10, A.M. After breakfast the staff is again paraded, previously to the resumption of their duties until dinner hour, which is from 2 till 3 o'clock, P.M., when the keys are again collected, and re-issued at 3 P.M.

Lock-up is held at 6, P.M., at all seasons of the year; each warder locks the prisoners in his class. The Governor, his deputy, and the chief warder tests the lockings of the cells, and ascertains the presence of the prisoner in his cell, and collects the cell keys from the class warders. At 10, P.M., a superior officer again goes round, and at 10.30 the prison keys, except those of the hospital, are locked in the metal safe in the office for the night. The key of the safe and of the office, and that of the entrance gate, are kept by the Governor in his bed-room during the night. The keys of his class are handed to each officer at unlock in the morning. The hospital warder keeps one key of the hospital after lock-up, another is held by the night-patrol, in order to peg the tell-tale clock in it. It is, however, proposed to make a different arrangement, as the lunatics are now removed, and the hospital will be changed to another part of the prison.* There are five tell-tale clocks distributed throughout the corridors of the gaol.

DUBLIN DISTRICT.

Richmond Bridewell.

Three warders remain on night-duty, three from 6, P.M., to 10.15, P.M., and these on reserve from 6, P.M.

The arrangement of the night-watch is as follows:—

Two warders patrol the interior of the upper prison, going their rounds each hour, when they peg the clocks, and prisoners requiring their assistance can ring their bells or call them as they pass. One warder patrols the outside of the prison buildings of upper and interior of lower prison. He goes his rounds every half hour in boundary, and hourly lower prison.

In the reports of the Inspectors-General for 1866 and 1867 attention has been called to encroachments made on the boundary outside the prison wall which materially interferes with the security of this gaol. Eleven garden and other separating walls abut that boundary, a large green-house and trees are in close proximity to it. The Local Inspector has now again called the attention of the Board of Superintendence to the subject, which should not be neglected.

These punishments are duly recorded in a book kept for the purpose, which was regularly submitted to the Board of Superintendence at its meetings, and signed by the chairman of the day. Five in 1868 were inflicted by magistrates, members of the Board.

As I have already observed, the condition of the punishment cells is not satisfactory. A padded cell should be fitted up for refractory prisoners who are excited or violent, as well as those who are insane, or pretend to be so. The use of a padded cell is far preferable for this class to placing them under mechanical restraint or in irons.

Net profit, the produce of prisoners' labour disposed of outside the gaol for the last four years:—

Paid to prisoners in 1868, under the 111th Section, to enable them to return to their homes after discharge, ... £2 13*s.* 6*d.*

Since the opening of the new wing in the female prison at Grangegorman, the linen, blankets, and sheets belonging to the gaol are washed and mended by the prisoners in that establishment, so that the labour of the male inmates of this gaol can be turned to occupations more profitable and suitable to persons of their sex.

Prisoners sentenced to hard labour work at the tread-wheel and at the large mat-looms.

With the exception of such untried prisoners as supply themselves with food, under the 15th section of the Act 19 & 20 Vic., cap. 68, and those under sentences of imprisonment without hard labour, who pay to the Board of Superintendence the expense of their maintenance, under the 16th section of the Act, and are thus by statute exempt from work towards payment of expenses of such maintenance, all other prisoners of the gaol are employed for eight and a half hours daily in summer and eight hours in winter at industrial works. Prisoners sentenced to hard labour work for seven and a half hours in summer and five and a half in winter, with intervals of rest of ten minutes after every twenty minutes of labour on the tread-wheel. The Inspector-General of the District in his report for 1867 called attention to the very brief period during which prisoners are subjected to hard labour at the tread-wheel in this gaol, being only for the first six weeks of their sentences, no matter what term of punishment may have been awarded.

As I have already observed, the power of the tread-wheel should be turned to more profitable use, and the labour of some other classes, including the juveniles, might also, perhaps, be better applied.

The mat-clipping machine is now in order, and found useful for finishing work.

A properly qualified weaving-master and tailor-warder superintend prisoners occupied at their respective trades. Another warder, with a certain amount of knowledge of the business, has charge of the shoemakers; but I am informed that his knowledge of the trade is imperfect.

Industrial employment is carried out with much energy and with remunerative results. The weaving of linsey for the clothing of females in the Grangegorman Prison, the manufacture of mats and mattings of various descriptions, and other works are conducted in a manner deserving of commendation, as is shown by the large increase of profits from manufactures during the past year, amounting to £698, as appears from the following return:—

The want of workshops in gaols in which prisoners could be engaged at weaving and such other manufactures as require the employment of implements which furnish means by which escapes could be effected from the cells at night has for some time engaged attention, and a circular was issued by the Inspectors-General urging the immediate adoption of precautionary measures in this particular. Lately the attempt of a prisoner to escape from a cell in this gaol where a loom was placed, as detailed elsewhere, proves the necessity to exercise vigilance in this particular. I would now urge on the Board of Superintendence to have the hospital rooms vacated by lunatics, fitted up with separate compartments for looms, in which the prisoners could be employed during the day, and thus remove the obvious danger of escape from the cells at night which now exists from this cause. I arranged with the Governor how the necessary stalls could be erected so that the prisoners when at work would be subjected to as perfect separation as in their cells, and the large iron bars attached to the looms, and other facilities for prison breach would be removed from the prison cells.*

The teacher, who is also assistant-clerk, has been trained in the model school, under the Board of National Education, and ranks in the second division second class. But I do not consider this department is satisfactorily carried on, the length of time devoted to instruction for all the prisoners—one hour and a half—is too limited, the numbers under instruction are too small, and, with few exceptions, only prisoners whose ages do not exceed twenty-six years are taught. From them, however, are very properly excluded such juveniles as are under sentence to be sent to a Reformatory after their punishment in the gaol, who receive instruction in their cells, in order that they should not mix with other prisoners at school. The proper school registries are kept. The following report of the Inspector of the Board of National Education on the school of this gaol has been forwarded to the prison office:—

"Education Office, Dublin, April 28, 1869.

"The course of instruction is confined to reading, writing, and a little arithmetic. The school time of each prisoner is too short to admit of much progress. I believe the teacher, Mr. M'Grath, is very attentive, and anxious to do all in his power to promote the improvement of the school; but, under existing circumstances, he can effect very little. The school is only part, and but a small part, of his duty. In addition to his school, he has to give five and a half hours to office business daily. Of the twenty-two in school to-day not one was present at my inspection in June last. Seven have been for four or five months here—the rest, on an average, only fourteen days. Of 230 prisoners only thirty-seven are on the school roll, and the average attendance in the school for the past year was only twenty. Of the thirty-seven at present on the roll, fifteen were sentenced for twelve months, five for four, three to six months, and seventeen for a period extending from seven days to three months. Of course the greatest amount of progress is to be expected from the prisoners sentenced for a year; but of fifteen only eight are in the school to-day. I understand there are from fifty to sixty prisoners under the age of twenty-five. If so, why only thirty-seven on the roll of the school? It occurs to me that the school time is insufficient, the school roll too restricted, and the school-room too small. One hour and a half daily is too short for progress. The present school-room is too small, only calculated to accommodate twenty-two pupils, though there are thirty-seven on the roll. In a larger room, and with a more liberal division of the prisoners' time, progress might be looked for, but under the present arrangements it would be idle to expect it."

* I am happy to state that since the above paragraph was written, the Board of Superintendence have fitted up the hospital rooms as proposed.

II. Dietary for prisoners whose term of imprisonment shall exceed one week, for untried prisoners who do not maintain themselves, and for pauper debtors:—

Class III. Males (juveniles) under 15 years.—Breakfast—5 oz. oatmeal and ½ pint new milk. Dinner—not less than 8 oz. brown bread and 1 pint of vegetable soup. Supper—5 oz. bread and ½ pint new milk.

NOTE.—Potatoes are to be substituted for bread at dinner on three days in the week in the following proportions: Class I., 3 lb.; Class II., 2½ lb.; Class III., 2½ lb. Roman Catholic prisoners, on the first and last Wednesdays in Lent and on Good Friday, are to receive, in place of milk, 2 oz. molasses at breakfast, vegetable soup at dinner, and tea without milk at supper, on those days.

The Chaplains regularly report on the quality of provisions supplied, and in the approved tabular form recommended for their use. The milk is often objected to by them as faulty, and occasionally the bread. When the provisions supplied are found to be not equal to sample, food of a better description is purchased by the Governor and charged to the contractor. On different occasions during the year I found when I visited the prison the milk of an inferior description. The bread and stirabout were generally satisfactory.

When I questioned the inmates of the gaol, on my inspection, I found what was admittedly a just cause of complaint; the stirabout supplied for their use was not good, in consequence of new meal used for making it being too damp. No other grounds of complaint were shown. I understand that the Chaplains generally make their inspection of the provisions in the morning, and the contractors, counting on the milk for the dinner of the prisoners not being inspected, sometimes furnish an inferior quality for that meal.

As so many prisoners in this gaol are under long sentences (one of four years, to remain in separation during the entire period), it is of importance that the food supplied should be of good quality. Care must be taken that the health of those men does not break down by imprisonment, or that on their discharge they be not physically unable to earn their bread by labour.

The books and accounts in this gaol are well and carefully kept; some are on excellent forms, the work-ledger more especially. All the books are checked and signed in red ink by the Governor weekly. His journal is fully kept, and matters in it deserving of special observation are marked in red ink, that attention may be drawn to them. The Local Inspector, Chaplains, and Medical Officers likewise keep journals, and each warder has a report book for his own class.

All the books and registries required by statute are here in use, as well as those recommended by the Inspectors-General, with the exception of "The Officers' Conduct Book," according to the plan recommended in Circular No. 235. A "Defaulters' Book" is kept, but the form suggested in the circular referred to is far preferable. In it the good as well as the bad conduct of the warders would be recorded, and also their absences from duty, whether from illness or other causes, with remarks in case of special good conduct. Such a record is a valuable assistance when promotions amongst a large number of inferior officers are under consideration.

All officers from the Governor downwards, except the Chief Clerk and Registrar, receive an allowance of bread, milk, soap, candles, and fuel. All married officers who reside outside, receive four tons of coal each yearly, at their places of residence.

Vacancies.

J. Ryan, esq., M.D., Local Inspector, and F. B. Quinlan, esq., M.D., Physician, vacated their offices; Rev. J. Bentley, Roman Catholic Chaplain, resigned; as also Warders John Coogan, John Moore, Thomas Rourk, and Henry Brown; Warder John Lennon was recommended for superannuation allowance; which vacancies were filled up by appointment of W. Ormsby, esq., Local Inspector; Joseph G. Burne, esq., M.D., as Physician; Rev. Patrick Gorman as Roman Catholic Chaplain; and Neal O'Donel Caulfield, Charles Graves M'Laughlin, John Kennedy, and James Lennox, as 2nd Class Warders; and the transfer of Guardsman Bernard Kearns from Grangegorman Prison as 2nd Class Warder.

Unmarried officers, who reside in the gaol, have a mess-room in which they take their meals. The Governor, Deputy-Governor, Chief Warder, and Gate Porter have apartments in which they reside with their families in the gaol. The Deputy-Governor does duty as temporary Governor in the female prison at Grangegorman, and remains in that gaol during the night.

In 1867 the following scale of salaries for warders in this prison was drawn up by the Local Inspector, with the assistance of the Governor, and transmitted to the Inspectors-General, who having laid it before the Lord Lieutenant for his Excellency's approval, it was duly sanctioned by him and adopted:

1. All warders on first entering the service shall receive a salary of £36 per annum, with rations.
2. An increase of £1 is added to the salary each year the warder remains in the service, provided said warder, on certificate of Local Inspector and Governor, has discharged his duties to the satisfaction of these officers during the past year.
3. All additions to salaries commence from the 1st January in each year, and no salaries of warders are to exceed the sum of £60 a year.

Two inquests held in 1867, viz., on 31st January and 26th November, and none held in 1868.

Since the removal of the insane from this gaol in September, 1868, all the hospital wards, with one exception, remain unoccupied; and an opportunity is now afforded to convert them into workshops, where prisoners would be employed in separation during the day, and would not have in their cells at night the implements for prison breach, by which a prisoner attempted to escape from his cell in September, 1868.

The hospital is well provided with all proper appliances for the sick. It was occupied on the day of my visit by six prisoners—one a soldier, sentenced by civil power, who is a most determined malingerer, as appears from the extracts from the journals of the Physician and Surgeon.

In December, 1868, this man was carefully examined by both those officers, who satisfied themselves that notwithstanding that he had been complaining for some time of inability to straighten his limbs, he was perfectly healthy and malingering. In January, 1869, the Surgeon of the Gaol placed him under the influence of chloroform, straightened his legs, and tied them firmly to two heavy weights placed on the floor at foot of his bed, yet the prisoner still continued malingering until the 10th February, when he was induced to confess that he had throughout been feigning illness. His general appearance was then much worse than when he was taken into hospital, and under the circumstance it was considered that the punishment he had already inflicted on himself was quite enough.

The Governor further reports that the man is now in his class, and expresses his regret for the trouble he gave during the time he was malingering.

I find that in 1867 556 individuals only were committed for drunkenness during the year; but the same woman being frequently recommitted, the total number of committals amounted to 1,239; and in 1868 the 1,318 committals were of 636 individuals. One woman was 22 times committed during the year. Thirty females were sentenced to penal servitude in 1868, and 15 in 1867. The number of offenders summarily sentenced by magistrates in 1868 amounted, besides 636 drunkards and 90 for vagrancy, to 2,474 individuals, of whom 147 were convicted under the Larceny Act.

1,631 individuals, of whom 59 were juveniles, were committed to this gaol in 1867, of whom 483 adults and 28 juveniles had never previously been in custody within this jurisdiction, and 545 were committed more or less frequently during the year, the total number of committals being 3,694 of adults and 85 of juveniles, showing how frequently the same individuals were committed. The 545 females recommitted during the year have been in custody in this gaol no less than 14,496 times in former years.

On an examination of the length of sentences of the convicted prisoners in custody on the day on which I made my official inspection of this gaol, I found 14 under sentences of twelve months and upwards, and 16 of six months; 7 were for four, 14 for three, and 11 for two months each. The remainder were for short periods. If we analyse the offences of these prisoners, we find none were charged with the more grave crimes against the person. 11 were for assaults; 61 had been committed for larceny, fraud, and passing base coin. The remainder were for riot and disorder, soliciting for prostitution, drunkenness, and two for attempts to commit suicide. 1,828 for loitering for prostitution, and 1,318 for drunkenness.

This table makes no mention of those who succeeded in their attempts at self-destruction, nor of those given over to their friends to be cared.

The proportion of female offenders in this district under 21 years of age averaged, in 1868, nearly one-eighth of the entire number of committals to the gaol. I observe about the same relative proportion as to ages amongst the criminal populations of Cork and Belfast, while in the Limerick district, females under 21 averaged one-fifth, and in Waterford one-sixth of the inmates of the gaols. The following are the statistics on this subject in

Year after year I observe the necessity for an asylum such as Mrs. Fry and the late Earl of Carlisle laboured to establish in 1839, when they founded the Victoria Asylum in Dublin referred to in my report on this gaol (page 506 Appendix) in 1866, and at page 432 (Appendix) in the report for 1864; I trust that such an institution may yet be established.

DUBLIN DISTRICT.

City of Dublin Female Penitentiary, Grangegorman.

I here repeat some observations which I included in my report on this gaol in 1866 :—

"I find, on reference to former Reports of Inspectors-General, and from documents placed in my hands by Mrs. Rawlins, late head matron of the gaol, that it was always the intention of the founders of this female prison, that it should be exclusively managed by women. In September, 1836, at the instance of Lord Morpeth, Chief Secretary for Ireland, Mrs. Fry selected, for her zeal and ability in the management of prisoners, Mrs. Marian Rawlins from among the officers of Coldbath Fields Prison, London, as especially suited to take charge of a female prison in Dublin, and she was accordingly transferred to Grangegorman Prison in that year. I learn from the report of Mr. Long, Inspector-General of Prisons in 1849, that 'it was (he believed) fully understood at the time when the Penitentiary was first established that the entire management of the prisoners should devolve upon females only. As, however, it is strictly laid down in the Prison Act that it shall not be lawful for a woman to be keeper of a prison, the institution was placed under the charge of a Governor, whose duties, never completely defined, were always in collision with those of the actual superintendent, who was called head matron.' The details of the manner in which the plan was to be carried out, were intrusted to Mrs. Rawlins, who, under the direction of Mrs. Fry, and according to her suggestions, framed the establishment as far as possible to meet the circumstances of the case. As the opinions of Mrs. Fry on the management of female prisoners are of great value, I have selected for insertion here the two following out of her letters to Mrs. Rawlins, written in 1837, on the formation of this prison:—

"'Upton, 3, 15, 1837.

"'DEAR FRIEND,—I have received thy letter, and think very great care and prudence needful in the case. Major Palmer wrote to me some time ago to say that, in consequence of some Act of Parliament, the house steward must take the name of Governor, or Gaoler. To this I could say nothing as it appeared unavoidable; but I consider if this person has anything to do with visiting the women under their punishments, or with the female officers, our wished-for arrangement of a perfect female prison, governed by female officers, is at an end. I think the fewer male officers the better. I will endeavour to state the duties of the steward. I entirely think he would have enough to do if he kept all the accounts, kept the stores, superintended the few male officers, and was ready to be called on to aid in case of any great difficulty. I see no occasion for any clerk, in which case the house steward might have some addition to his present salary.

"'I should at once write to my friend Major Palmer upon the subject, but I am fearful lest he should not like my receiving the information through thyself; but as he must know that we freely communicate upon the subject, I have no objection to thy telling him my views. I am likely to be with Lord Morpeth next week upon some other business, and I then mean fully to consult him upon the subject; but if either Major Palmer or thyself would like to consult me further upon the subject, the sooner you do it the better, although I think no answer can come to this letter previous to my seeing Lord Morpeth.

"'I am quite surprised so many male officers are appointed, it appears to me such a pity to add to the burden and expense of the establishment.

"'I am very anxious that your arrangements may not be fixed until I hear from you again, either from thyself, or one of the ladies, or Major Palmer; for much as I desire not improperly to come forward in this or any other matter, yet I think, for the cause sake, I must do my endeavour to have the experiment tried of a real female prison.

(Signed), "'Thy friend,

"'ELIZABETH FRY.'

"'DEAR FRIEND,—I much like the plan of a month's quiet before things are fixed, but I do not like the house-steward inspecting twice a week. I think it makes him a Governor. I believe from what I know it will not prove his interest to interfere in anything that is not absolutely his duty to attend to. My interview with Lord Morpeth quite confirms this view. I mean thoroughly and quietly to consider the subject, and let thee know the result; in the meantime let me know everything—it is of peculiar importance in this state of the prison. I also advise thy consulting the ladies as much as possible, and I hope they will begin their visits without delay.

"'Lord Morpeth is very kind, and I think much interested in the subject.

"'I remain, with regard, thy friend,

"'ELIZABETH FRY.

"'Marian Rawlins,
"'Superintendent Matron,
"'Female Prison, Dublin.'

"The defect in the law, and other circumstances prevented Mrs. Fry's views from being fully carried out in this prison; but afterwards they were adopted in their entirety, when Mountjoy Female Prison was established, and with the greatest success. In the English Government Female Prisons also, and in those on the Continent, the principle is likewise recognised; and I earnestly hope that, in future legislation on the subject of county prisons, it will never be departed from, and that the first rule annexed to the 109th Section of Prisons Act will be repealed."

Lunatics.

In 1868, 60 lunatics were in custody, 40 of whom were removed to the District Asylum, 19 were discharged or given up to their friends, and 1 died. None are now inmates of the gaol, and I have to congratulate the Board of Superintendence on the successful working in their district of the Act 30 & 31 Vict., cap. 118, which has caused the removal of the insane from this gaol.

The Act, although prohibiting committals of the insane to gaol after the commencement of the year 1868, yet permitted those already in custody to remain until opportunities should occur for their removal; but the Governors of the Richmond District Lunatic Asylum (which adjoins the gaol), acting according to the expressed wishes of Parliament, that "the insane should not remain as prisoners in a gaol," agreed, with the approval of the Inspectors-General to take temporally from the Board of Superintendence of this gaol, at a rent of £200 per annum, such portions of the building at the northern side as are not required since the occupation of the new wing. On the 25th May, 1868, two blocks of buildings belonging to that part of the gaol were handed over to the authorities of the asylum; and in July following, after the necessary alterations had been made at the expense of the Governors of the institution, the remaining buildings not required for prisoners were surrendered to them; at the same time the insane in the gaol were given over to the Medical Superintendent in charge of the asylum. The result has been, to use the words of that officer in his report to the Governors of his establishment, "So far as it has reference to dangerous lunatics, most beneficent in its principle and most beneficial in its results.

The following are the portions of the gaol given over to the Governors of the asylum:—

Classes 1, 6, 9, 8, 7; kitchen and laundry cells 1 & 2; lunatic department, reception ward, exercising yard, and boundary walk. They contain 126 cells, a dormitory, nine day-rooms, and four baths. This portion of the prison is marked A, A, A, on the plan. A communication has been opened from the asylum grounds at B, on the plan.

Juveniles.

When I made my inspection two juveniles were in custody, one who had a previous conviction recorded against her was under sentence to be imprisoned for two months in the gaol as a punishment, and afterwards to be sent to a Reformatory for five years.

In 1867, 58 juveniles (females) were convicted in this district, and 70 in 1868; 10 were sent to Reformatories in 1867, and 15 in 1868.

Only 2 juveniles (females) were convicted by juries in 1867, and 7 in 1868.

Of the female juveniles convicted in 1867, 68 had lost one or both parents, and 29 were wholly illiterate. Of those convicted in 1868, 44 had lost one or both parents, and 21 were without any literary instruction.

In the month of March, 1868, the new wing of the prison was given over to the Board of Superintendence, and the final report of the Commissioners appointed on the 27th October, 1863, to carry out the details, was made on the 20th October following:—

"In that report they enumerate the results of their labours, and record the occupation of the cells in the great hall by prisoners on July 7th, 1868. The new Prison consists of a great hall containing 126 cells, in three tiers of 42 cells each, with an iron gallery to each of the upper stories. Each gallery is fitted with an iron tray mounted on wheels, and travelling on the gallery rails, for the conveyance of food to the prisoners. The food is brought from the kitchen upon a truck running upon fixed rails, to a hoist and lift in the great hall. Underneath the hall there is a heating apparatus and vaults, with ample storage for fuel. A new school-room has been constructed, lighted and heated in the most approved manner. An extensive laundry has been erected, with a new ironing-room, with separate stalls, to enable the washing and ironing to be carried out on the separate system. The church and chapel have been newly fitted up, and several minor works executed—such as a new dust-pit; a corridor to hospital from new hall, running through block of twenty-seven cells, and a new cistern in the northern yard of the prison, fitted with a powerful force-pump to supply the iron tank on roof of great hall, which tank commands the whole prison.

"The Commissioners expended £12,074 18*s.* 3*d.* Government advanced £11,700 of this amount, free of interest, in three sums of £7,000, £4,000, and £700 respectively, which are being repaid by presentments, at the rate of one-tenth annually—viz., £700, £400, and £70, being now £1,170 per annum. £4,770 has been repaid to the Government, leaving a balance due at end of current year of £6,930. In addition to this amount of £11,700 the Commissioners received from the Council £250 by presentment at Michaelmas, 1866, and a sum of £124 18*s.* 3*d.* from the Bank of Ireland as interest on deposits, making a total receipt amounting to £12,074 18*s.* 3*d.* The Commissioners were obliged for want of funds to refer three accounts to the Board of Superintendence for payment—viz., £43 19*s.* 10*d.*, £23 15*s.*, and £12 3*s.*, which raise the total cost of the works to £12,246 16*s.* 1*d.*"

On the 18th December following I made my statutable inspection of the cells and of their inmates, accompanied by the Local Inspector, the Acting-Governor, the Head Matron, and her Deputy.

I found the cells and the general prison in a satisfactory state of order and cleanliness, and the prisoners appear amenable to discipline. I questioned all those in custody. One old woman who is blind complained of her treatment by the matrons over her. I investigated the complaint, and ascertained that she had been very violent, and it was found necessary to put her into a canvass strait-jacket; but I could not discover that any undue violence was used to her. The woman does not appear to be of sound mind, and is not a fit subject for a prison. Another woman, with more reason, complained that the milk given for her infant in the morning was cold, although that for the evening meal was heated. I consider that during the winter months, and with the facilities now afforded for heating by gas, cold milk in the month of December should not be given to infants. The woman also complained that the cell in which she was confined was too cold for her infant.

The prison buildings are all now in sound repair, the cells properly furnished, and the fittings and heating apparatus in excellent order. A great blunder has been made in the placing of hot-water pipes at the top of the cells instead of on a level with the floor, by which much heat is lost to the inmates, and facility is afforded for suicide by the position of the large pipes placed just over the doors of the cells. The compartments in the lavatories also are unnecessarily large, and some additional baths are required for the prisoners. The school-room has been much improved, and it is now one of the best in any gaol in Ireland. The laundry is not fitted up as I would wish it. It is too large and straggling, and the inmates not sufficiently under supervision.

The stock of bedding, blankets, sheets, and prison clothing is sufficient for present requirements, and some in store. The supply of water to the tank placed over the new wing, by which the water-closets and lavatories are supplied, being from the city main, is unfailing, and the sewerage is stated to be effective. The tank is capable of containing 5,000 gallons.

The locks in the prison are in a good condition. Messrs. Barnwell & Son repair them by contract for a sum of £12 annually for this prison.

Gas is supplied to all the cells and every compartment of the prison now occupied. It is extinguished at 7 P.M., in the cells.

The inner boundary-wall has been raised, since last inspection, by six feet where the new laundry is placed.

Since the occupation by prisoners of the new wing, the gaol is strictly managed, except in the laundry, on the separate system, under the Act 3 Vic., cap. 44. There are still some requirements which should be met, including a sufficient number of baths for the use of the inmates. Formerly, when this part of the gaol was occupied by convicts, three baths were placed for their use in the compartment adjoining the present bath-room; but the baths were removed by the contractor, and only two baths are now provided for the inmates of the new wing. I called attention, in my report of the gaol in 1866, to the 9th Rule of the 109th Section of the Prisons Act, and I again refer to the subject. It directs that:—"All prisoners shall have free access to the baths in their respective parts of the prison at all reasonable times." Besides, warm baths are peculiarly necessary for the health and cleanliness of persons of the class to which the majority of the prisoners committed to this gaol belong, who are frequently afflicted with diseases which render it desirable that they should have plenty of bathing accommodation.

New by-laws have been framed by the Board of Superintendence, and have been approved by the Town Council, previously to being submitted to the Lord Lieutenant for his sanction.

Unlock is held at 6.30 A.M. in summer, and at 7 in winter, and the prison cells are locked for the night at 5.45 A.M. in winter.

The matron or her assistant attends unlock and lock-up.

Four matrons are appointed for night-duty, two on every night, for each alternate fortnight. The junior officers are selected for this duty.

No escape has been attempted from the gaol for many years.

A new tell-tale clock, on an improved principle, has been lately put up in the gaol. It is stated that it cannot be tampered with. One tell-tale clock placed in the northern part of the prison which has been handed over to the Governors of the Lunatic Asylum is useless, and should be removed; another in the hospital is not properly looked after.

I observe in the journal of the matron a statement that a professional visitor to a prisoner was detected on the 1st December, 1868, in an attempt to introduce spirits into the gaol, contrary to the 110th Section of the Prisons Act. The case would appear to have been a flagrant violation of the law. The then Board, however, merely passed an order that the offender should be excluded from the prison; but the new Board of Superintendence on coming into office directed that he should be prosecuted, under the above section of the Act.

The book in which the punishments are recorded by the matron is duly submitted to the Board of Superintendence at its meetings. All punishments are, before being inflicted, countersigned by the Acting-Governor, in order to carry out the requirements of the 1st Rule of the 109th Section of the Prisons Act, which directs that no woman can be Governor of a gaol. On two occasions in 1868 magistrates, members of the Board of Superintendence, inflicted punishments on refractory prisoners whose offences were of a more grave character.

Washing, prison duties, sewing, and knitting, constituted the principal employment of the inmates during 1868. The lunatics have been removed from the gaol, and prisoners who formerly were occupied in attending to their wants, can now be employed in industrial works. The new wing also of the prison being occupied, fewer prisoners will be employed in prison duties. It is therefore most desirable that a system be organized by which full occupation in industrial works should be given to the inmates, and their labour made as remunerative as possible. In part to effect this object in future, all the washing and mending of linen belonging to the male prisoners in Richmond Bridewell will be carried on in this prison. The Head Matron has also proposed to contract for barrack washings.

it. I would suggest that industrial works be more taught than heretofore in the schools, and that prisoners who have an aptitude to learn, be instructed in the principles of cutting out and making dresses, now taught in the books of the National Board of Education, by which they would acquire an art useful for their support by honest industry after discharge.

The following is the Report of the Inspector of National Education on the condition of this school when he made his inspection, 22nd May, 1868:—

"The reading and writing of third class are the only subjects in which I observed much proficiency. All the prisoners have been admitted to the school since my last inspection.

"The prisoners attending school sew and knit in their cells for a couple of hours every day. They mend and make their own clothes, and do work for the establishment.

"There is no record of any free stock having been granted to this school, on account, I suppose of its small attendance.

"The accounts of attendance have been very well kept since my last inspection.

"The school-matron is very well qualified. She maintains order and discipline very well, and appears to be attentive to her classes The school is conducted by her as ordinary National schools, except that she confines her instruction to reading, spelling, dictation, writing, tables, and sums. She is classed third of third.

"There has been no change in the course of instruction since my last inspection, except that the prisoners in Third Book are now taught writing from dictation, with the view of improving them in spelling and penmanship. It would be very desirable to include sewing, knitting, and cutting out in the school course, and to have those essential branches of female education taught in the school-room before or after the literary subjects, just as is done in the ordinary female National schools.

"The results of my examination of the prisoners are to a great extent given in the proficiency table in page 1 of this report. Of the seventeen present the day of my inspection seven were in first (lowest) class, two in second and eight in third; and of the whole number seven could read Third Book fairly, two others Second and one First Book; two of the seven in first class were beginning to spell and to read, and the remaining five were in letters. In arithmetic two could enter millions, three could do a sum in addition and subtraction and one a sum in multiplication. As to penmanship, five write fairly, and two with ease and freedom; and with regard to dictation, two write sentences with tolerable accuracy, and one with correctness. I should here mention that the prisoner most advanced in arithmetic got ill at the examination, and was not therefore asked to do sums in the compound rules which she had learned.

"The prisoners have been attending school each for five weeks only on the average, and all have been admitted since my last inspection. I cannot, therefore, speak as to any progress they may have made since their admission, nor can I attribute any neglect to the teacher for their low proficiency in arithmetic and other subjects. From the entries in the register, it appears that sixteen days were the average time spent by each of the 324 prisoners admitted to the school in 1868. Perhaps I should here mention that the school was closed from the 3rd July to the 4th August in consequence of the change from the old to the new prison, and from the 24th September to the 15th October, owing to the opening of windows, &c., in the schoolroom, for the purpose of ventilation.

"The school matron should teach the outlines of the maps of Europe and Ireland to third class, and get those learning tables to copy them on slates.

"I would recommend that those prisoners who attend the laundry, kitchen, and hospital, during the day, should be instructed in the schoolroom at night or in the morning.

"(Signed.) EDWARD SHEEHY,
"District Inspector."

The Sisters of Mercy are allowed, on two days in the week, to give religious instruction to the Roman Catholic inmates of the prison. A room close to the entrance is set apart for this purpose, as it is not found advisable that prisoners should be visited in their cells.

Since the new dietary has been established in this gaol very little extra diet is given to prisoners unless to those in hospital. I observe that the milk supplied to the inmates is sometimes of an inferior description. I found it so on one occasion when I visited. The bread is generally excellent.

Books and Accounts.

All the superior officers have journals, and each class matron has a book, in which she reports on her class to the head matron. The journal of the head matron is well and carefully kept; in it she enters such occurrences in the gaol as are worthy of attention, as well as the performance of the various duties of her office. The journal is afterwards examined by the Local Inspector, who signs it previously to being submitted to the Board. The Local Inspector, the Chaplains, and Medical Officers also have journals. I found the various registries of discipline and finance in the gaol kept with care and attention. All the best forms are in use.

I would prefer that females were employed in the clerk's office here, as at Mountjoy Female Prison. All matters concerning discipline and the registry of prisoners might be handed over to them, and the male officers only employed for the accounts, the contracts, and in the external duties of the gaol. There should, of course, be separate offices for the clerks of each sex, I trust that this arrangement will be ultimately adopted.

I observe that the names of the subordinate male officers are not entered in the "Officers' Conduct Book." This is an omission which should be rectified, as the book is a valuable record of the manner in which all subordinate officers discharge their duties, the dates of their appointments, their promotions, their good conduct, or the reverse, as well as their attention to or absence from their duties in the gaol. One male officer, whom it was proposed by the Board to promote, is constantly absent from ill health. If the particulars of his absences had been duly entered in this book, the Board never could have made the selection.

In the absence of the Acting-Governor, the head matron or some other officer should sign the dietary book. The markings of the tell-tale clock are duly entered in the "State of Prison at Lockings Book."

In order to legalize punishments, the Deputy-Governor of Richmond Bridewell acts temporally as Governor of this gaol until the law is altered; but on an express understanding that he is not to found a claim for superannuation allowance in consequence of the gratuity which he receives for the discharge of duties connected with this prison. He was appointed Acting Governor in 1867, and since that period has received a gratuity at the rate of £50 yearly; and, I may add, that he has performed the duty to the satisfaction of the Board and the Inspectors-General.

At the time of my inspection the Local Inspector complained to me that one of the officers in the gaol had not treated him with proper respect. In my report in the "Visitors' Book" I called the attention of the Board of Superintendence to the subject, as discipline cannot be maintained unless the authority of the superior officers is upheld. The Local Inspector is the principal officer of the gaol.

There is an excellent hospital attached to this prison, with abundant accommodation and large well-ventilated wards, provided with all suitable appliances for the sick; but the exercising grounds are rather confined. A covered passage connects the hospital with the general prison so that at night all prisoners are sufficiently secure at the same time that the hospital is visited by the night-patrol, who pegs the tell-tale clock in that part of the prison.

I found the building very clean and orderly when I inspected it, and the sick appear to be properly cared by the hospital matron, who is attentive to their wants. Four deaths occurred in the gaol in 1867, and two in 1868.

The Coroner has not held an inquest in this prison since 1864, when one was held, and two in 1862; but no other since 1855.

Board of Superintendence.

This prison is governed by the same Board of Superintendence as the prison for males at Richmond Bridewell. The Board meets every fortnight, alternately at each gaol and at the City Hall.

The names of the Board have already been given in my Report on the Richmond Bridewell.

General Observations.

Since this report was printed the Board of Superintendence, in March, 1869, forwarded to the Inspectors-General and the Executive suggestions for a reduction in the prison staff, which has been rendered practicable by the removal of the insane from the gaol, as well as by the diminished number of prisoners in custody, and the increased facilities afforded for simultaneous supervision of the inmates by the occupation of the new prison wing. The Inspectors-General were then enabled to submit a scheme based on that suggestion to the Executive, which afterwards received the approval of the Lord Lieutenant. In carrying out this scheme, a very considerable present yearly saving in salaries and allowances to officers, amounting to £317 17*s.* 5*d.*, will be effected, which will be further increased by a sum amounting to £264 3*s.* 4*d.*, according as the superannuation annuities fall out. This does not include the value of apartments occupied by the officers, which forms an item in the calculation of their superannuation allowances.

By the arrangement now made the offices of Head Matron and Deputy Matron of the prison will be abolished; and the Lord Lieutenant has appointed Mrs. Helena Worthy, as female superintendent of the prison, with similar duties, as far as the law will permit, to those of the Superintendent of the Female Convict Depôt at Mountjoy and in some English gaols, thus adopting the views expressed, when the prison was established in 1836, by Mrs. Elizabeth Fry, whose letters are referred to at page 517 of this report.

The following officers have been superannuated:—Mrs. Mary O'Carroll, head matron; Eliza Murphy, Anne O'Brien and Teresa Mitchell, first-class matrons; and Margaret M'Donnell, assistant hospital matron.

The office of deputy matron, vacant by the death of Mrs. Eliza Crotty,
